Additional Items from the Annual Meeting.

LOAN FUNDS.

The cash additions to the loan funds for the year amount to $14,760.85 ($3,499.87 being interest), bringing the total now available for use, and excluding valuable assets not yet turned into cash, up to a grand total of $96,459.31. The total amount of aid furnished from these funds to date is $168,240.

PROGRESS.

The extraordinary demand made upon the church for the past year for the payment of the debt of the Board of Missions has been felt in the collections for church extension, and there is a decrease on regular collections amounting to $2,361.11. This, however, has been more than set off by receipts from other sources, and there is a net increase of cash receipts from all sources (excluding interest collected on loans) amounting to $1,472 65.

LIMIT OF LOANS AND RATE OF INTEREST.

Loan Fund Rule No. 2 was changed so as to read as follows:

2. No loan to a single church enterprise shall exceed the sum of three thousand dollars, except by a three-fourths vote of the members voting at an annual meeting of the Board.

The rule as to interest was amended so as to read as follows:

The uniform rate of interest upon all loans made by this Board during this session and hereafter is hereby fixed at six (6) per centum per annum.

PUBLIC COLLECTIONS AT ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Board adopted a resolution requesting the General Conference at its next session to inquire into the advisability of discouraging, at the sessions of the Annual Conferences, the taking of collections on behalf of any of the General Boards of the church.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY.

The corresponding secretary, in his annual message to the Board, requested them to fill the vacancy existing in the office of assistant secretary. This the Board declined to do in view of the near approach of the General Conference, but authorized the Executive Committee to provide the corresponding secretary with such aid in his work as they may judge necessary for the remainder of this quadrennium.

GRANTS.

Grants were made to 102 churches in twenty-four States and Territories, one in the District of Columbia, and one in the Republic of Mexico, aggregating in loans $26,350, and in donations $31,430. This was the best response the Board could give to applications from 210 churches for aid, amounting to $183,295. Out of this large number of urgent calls the Board selected such as, with all the lights they had before them, seemed most meritorious and urgent, and made among them the best division they could of the funds at their disposal, and those which the collections of last year justify them in expecting for the ensuing year.

THE WOMAN'S DEPARTMENT.

The Central Committee of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society being in annual session in the city, called on the Board in a body on the second day, and were warmly welcomed. They reported to the Board that they had appropriated aid in donations and loans to the amount of $2,950 to eleven parsonages, and these appropriations were approved by the General Board. Further details of their work will be published by themselves. During their visit the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this Board hereby express its gratification at the zeal and wisdom exhibited in the prosecution of the work of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, and for the advance made during the past year.

O. P. FITZGERALD,
M. H. NEELY.

A more detailed statement of the proceedings of the Board, and of its operations during the past year, will be given in the forthcoming eleventh Annual Report, which will be published as soon as possible.

Corresponding Secretary.

District Meeting of W. M. S., Holly Springs District, North Mississippi Conference.

According to previous announcement, our district meeting convened at 10 o'clock, on Saturday morning, April 29, 1893, in the Methodist Church at Holly Springs, Miss. Greatly to the regret of all, Mrs Hargrove was ill and could not be present; so the district secretary presided. In spite of numerous disappointments, all of which were unavoidable, we had a very profitable and enjoyable session. Mrs. J. B. Mattison, a member of the Presbyterian Missionary Society, opened the meeting by Scripture reading and prayer; her sweet, earnest words of love and sympathy were a benediction to all who heard them. The meeting was then called to order, and Mrs. B. M. Chenoweth was chosen secretary. The roll was called, and to our great satisfaction every auxiliary and every juvenile but one were represented, to the number of fifteen.

After organization we spent a short time very profitably in hearing of the blessing the work had been to the different workers. The meeting then adjourned till 3 o'clock P. M., when after devotional exercises led by Mrs. J. H. Shumaker, the usual business of district meetings was transacted. The reports of the various societies were very encouraging. We also were highly instructed by an essay from Sister J. P. Franklin, of Early Grove. Subject: "How to Interest our Women in Missions." Then after the reports Sister J. C. Lowe read an interesting paper on "Juvenile Work: Its Importance and the Best Way of Carrying It On."

At night Mrs. Carrie West Smith welcomed the visitors to our fair City of Flowers in her usual graceful style. Owing to the illness of Miss Freddie Thomas, of Victoria, her response was read by Miss Fannie Belle Smith, of Kelly, who very kindly agreed to act as substitute. I wish everyone who is indifferent to the claims of the foreign mission work could have heard Miss Hattie Gray's recitation of "The Famine Cry," and Miss Rather's "Strange, But True Story." In conclusion Miss Sallie Hinton, of Mt. Pleasant, read in a most beautiful and impressive manner an article sent by Sister Hargrove, "The Love of Christ Constraineth Us." What a blessing it would be if every woman in the land could have heard it!

On Sunday, at 11 o'clock, Bro. G. H. Jacobs, of Mt. Pleasant, gave us a most earnest and practical sermon. At 4 P. M. Miss Laura Bradford, corresponding secretary of the Memphis Conference W. M. S., held the children and older people, too, spellbound while she told them of her recent visit to our Indian Mission. Such an interest she inspired in the children that a number of them have subscribed to The Mite Box. To our great sorrow a violent rainstorm came up in the afternoon and prevented many from hearing the burning words of the consecrated woman. Truly the hand of her Lord is upon her. At eight P. M., in spite of the pouring rain and flashing lightning, a good-sized congregation assembled to hear Miss Bradford further on the needs of the mission fields which she has visited. After her talk, Judge Jas. T. Fant made one of the most stirring appeals for the foreign work that it has been my good fortune to hear. The best encomium on both addresses I heard fell from the lips of a young man who said, "I could have listened to them both for hours."

I have left for the last a notice of the music which we enjoyed at every session. The choir consisted of twenty-five children and young people, under the control of Miss Emma Jones, and the lovely songs rendered by them were a source of inspiration to all. Surely the Master was with them and with us all at every service. We most earnestly "thank God, take courage and go forward."

NANNIE B. FANT,
Dist. Sec. Holly Springs Dist.

Christians complain that it is impracticable to maintain a prayerful spiritual mind under the press of the daily cares and activities of secular life. But we should have no secular life—it should be consecrated life. In our routine duties we should still be serving God. And we may, by doing them as services that God has assigned us in the station of his appointing, get into as close contact with him through them, as if we were engaged in religious duties.—Southern Churchman.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON.—May 21, 1893.

PREPARED BY REV. A. F. WATKINS.

The Evils of Intemperance.

(Prov. xxiii, 29-35.)

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Wine is a mocker and strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." (Prov. xx, 1.)

TOPICAL OUTLINE.—I. The Woes of the Intemperate (vs. 29 and 30). II. A Warning against Intemperance (vs. 31-35).

CENTRAL THOUGHT.—The Woes of Wine.

HOME READINGS.

Sunday (May 14)—Evils of Intemperance. (Prov. xxiii, 29-35.)
Monday—Wine a Mocker. (Prov. xx, 1-7.)
Tuesday—Drunken Priests. (Isaiah xxviii, 1-8.)
Wednesday—Judgment of Revellers. (Daniel v, 1-9.)
Thursday—Not Drunk with Wine. (Eph. v, 6-18.)
Friday—Take Heed. (Luke xxi, 29-36.)
Saturday—Doom of Drunkards. (Rev. xxii, 11-15.)

INTRODUCTORY.

It is interesting to notice that in this lesson we have passed out of that series of disconnected and independent proverbs which are supposed to have constituted the original collection of King Solomon and the nucleus of the whole book, and have reached a section in which the continuous discourse is resumed. This section, embracing chapters xxii, 17-xxiv, 34, is supposed to consist of those additions which were made before the time of King Hezekiah, during whose reign the chapters xxv-xxix. inclusive, were added. This would place our lesson, probably, between 900 B. C. and 700 B. C. The chapter from which our lesson is taken represents a father giving advice to his son. He warns him against self-indulgence, exhorts him to avoid the association of the depraved and sensual, and concludes with a graphic and striking description of the drunkard. The verses read like a sketch drawn from life of a frequenter of the modern grog-shop. The greatest curse of humanity to-day is intemperance, and the darkest blot upon the character of our modern civilization is the legalizing "for revenue only" of the whisky traffic. The importance of this lesson can be estimated only when men can measure the difference between a soul cleansed by the blood of Christ and one debauched for time and eternity by the demon of intemperance. It should be noted that this is a total abstinence lesson, and not one that advocates moderation in the use of wine.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—THE WOES OF THE INTEMPERATE.

Ver. 29. "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow?" Who hath oh? who hath alas? The words are, strictly speaking, exclamations of pain or distress. This verse in a series of questions contains a description of woes that can be attributed to but one class of persons. The drunkard of three thousand years ago in the streets of Jerusalem is the drunkard of our cities to-day. The woes, the sorrows, the quarrels, the maudlin utterances, the unnecessary bruises, and the blear eyes, are the same; we have seen them, and with mingled pity and disgust we have wondered that men, made in the image of God, would thus debauch themselves.

Ver. 30. Here the answer is given. Only of the drunkard can these things be said. "They that tarry long at the wine." We know nothing of the places of resort of the drunkard in Solomon's time, but the words are strikingly applicable to the men who spend hours in the bar rooms and clubs, and linger, often the whole night, in scenes of revelry and debauch. There are men who lounge all day around the grog-shop corners who seem to have "sat" for Solomon's picture. "Seek (or seek out) mixed wine." The idea here seems to be that of devising or concocting new combinations of drink, as if to secure novelty or to spur the depraved appetite with new and heightened incitement. The terms are strongly expressive of wanton and unrestrained self-indulgence.

II.—A WARNING AGAINST INTEMPERANCE.

Ver. 31. A warning follows the brief, but pointed description given in the two verses preceding, and the way of safety is indicated. The way of safety is found not in a more moderate use of wine, nor in spending less time around the so-called "convivial board," but in not even looking upon the enticing, but destructive bowl. The different clauses of the verse are descriptive of the best, the most attractive wine—red, sparkling, and desirable.

Ver. 32. In this verse the true nature of the tempter is given. "At the last." However attractive at the first, at the last, or in the end, its envenomed fang is found to be buried in the flesh and its poison is being carried in the blood to every part of the body. The thought is not that at first it blesses and at the last it stings, but that the sequel shows that the true nature of the seeming good is the poisonous sting.

Ver. 33. In this and the remaining verses of the lesson are given the well-known symptoms of the serpent's poison. "Thine eyes shall behold strange women" (or better, as the Revised Version has it, "strange things") "and thine heart shall utter perverse things." The reference may be to the moral degradation and abandonment of the wine drinker; but the more probable reference is to the physical and intellectual effects of drink. The victim "sees snakes," and his speech is the wildest ravings. His diseased brain surrounds him with horrors and dethroned reason gives way to madness. Solomon seems to have seen delirium tremens.

Ver. 34. The last verse gives us a picture of drink's madness; this verse one of drink's sickness—nausea—the semi-unconsciousness, but intense distress, the restless tossing, the dizzy, maddening heaving as in the ceaseless, torturing waves of the sea, the sickening swaying as upon the rocking mast of a ship. The lesson is strong enough, even though we leave out the possible thought of the perilous situation of the drunkard.

Ver. 35. The drunkard, as his stupor wears away and consciousness returns, is represented as talking to himself. He finds that he has been beaten and bruised, but he has no recollection of it. "Somebody," he says, "did it; but I did not feel it." In his drunken stupor he could not feel the blows that fell upon his defenseless body. The last line contains the saddest truth of all—"When shall I awake? I will seek it yet again." Better, omitting the interrogation point, read: "When I shall awake I will seek it yet again." All these woes have been felt in vain; the poor fool will seek it yet again until the clod falls upon another drunkard's coffin, and another debauched soul goes into judgment with him who has declared that no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God. (I. Cor. vi, 10.)

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. The bitterness of the drunkard's woes comes from the fact that they are self-inflicted and unnecessary. "Whom the Lord loveth" he does not "chasten" that way.

2. There seems to be no practical or righteous compromise between tarrying "long at the wine" and "looking not" upon it. The latter extreme is the one of safety and virtue.

3. The more enticing the first appearance of the cup, the more deadly the serpent's sting.

4. The final result is the true test of value. What will it be at the end?

5. One of the saddest things about sin is that, though a man may become disgusted with himself, he never becomes disgusted with his vice. He calls himself a fool, and hugs his folly.

6. How many readers of this lesson will sign this pledge: "I hereby pledge myself to abstain from all intoxicating liquors as a beverage"?

A Lesson from an Actor.

Joe Jefferson, the great actor, appeared on the platform the other evening in New York in the role of an orator. His discriminations as to the differences between the actor's functions and those of the orator were just and penetrating. One of his stories pertained to Macready, who once asked a friend why his, Macready's, impersonation of a certain great character in a play, which he had rendered for years, had apparently lost its power to move the people. "Have the people lost interest in the play?" was Macready's question. "No," was the response of the friend; "the people have not lost interest in the piece, but you have. It is an old story to you. It no longer moves you, and hence you can no longer move your audience."

The application of the anecdote to the ministry is self-evident. Many a man has lost his wonted power to awaken sinners, to rouse the indifferent, to rally the depressed, and to touch the emotions, of his hearers, because he himself has lost interest in his own sermons. They have become an old story to him. He utters them officially, with perfunctory formality, and not with the old-time, heart-felt power. It ought not to be necessary to proclaim the commonplace truth that one essential element of power in the preacher is his faith in his own message, his interest in his own theme. A sermon that has had its birth amid the storm and stress of the preacher's own struggles, that has been to him a message from God, that has awakened his conscience and quickened him into new activity, will prove also to others a rousing, vitalizing, inspiring message.

Let the preacher seek to be interested in his own sermon as a means of making it interesting to his hearers. If it first nips him tenaciously, it will then get hold of his congregation.—Central Christian Advocate.

Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference.

It seemed that the elements were against us on our "Woman's Day," April 20. We had the regular March wind with the cold of December. And it was with a feeling of uneasiness that we, together with some of the ladies of Hernando, awaited the approach of some of the missionary workers of the Sardis district. But they came despite the wind, cold and rain. Some were in Spring array, some in Winter, but all bright, beautiful and happy, as only missionary workers can be.

Our large church in Hernando was well filled by 9:30 o'clock, when the opening song was sung. Our much-beloved and very efficient president, Mrs. Hargrove, was present, and conducted the testimony service and presided at the morning session. It was indeed "good to be there." The young, the old and the middle-aged told of what the Lord had done for them, and how they were determined to do better service, and to consecrate more fully their lives to the service of their Lord and Master.

After this service Mrs. Wall was elected secretary. There were eight adult delegates and nine juveniles present. Several of the country auxiliaries failed to send delegates on account of the rain. There are thirteen adult and ten juvenile societies in the district. Several have been reorganized. One adult and one juvenile organized during the year.

The address of welcome was delivered by Miss Lula Jones, of Hernando. Responded to by Miss Annie Staten, of Senatobia. After this the district secretary delivered her address.

The rest of the morning and part of the afternoon was devoted to hearing the reports of the societies. Most of the reports were encouraging. Some of the societies in better condition than ever before, others not doing so well, but nearly all hopeful. The Parsonage and Home Mission Society filled up the latter part of the afternoon.

At eight P. M. we met again in the church to listen to two excellent addresses—one by Mrs. H. P. Gibbs, of Pleasant Grove; the other by Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, of Sardis. Also had recitations by Ida Allen, of Coldwater; Gertrude Morehead, of Sardis, and Gypsie Bailey, of Coldwater. It was a most delightful and profitable meeting, and we feel assured that much good will result. A number of our preachers were present, and assured us of their hearty co-operation in our work.

Discovery of Printing.

John Gutenberg, of Mentz, Germany, was the undoubted inventor of printing by movable types; but his success aroused the jealousy of his associates, who induced the authorities of Strasburg to demand the revelation of his secret—refusing which, he was driven out and returned to his native town penniless. Here, again, he was subject to persecution, and, though his last years were peaceful under the patronage of the Elector of Nassau, he died a poor man.

On the other hand, both Faust and Schoeffer, who had been associated with him and stole the art, grew rich and tried to rob him of his fame. There is a curious, but not very well authenticated, story about a visit Faust made to Paris to push the sale of his Bibles.

"The tradition of the devil and Dr. Faustus," writes d'Israeli, in the Curiosities of Literature," "was said to have been derived from the odd circumstances in which the Bibles of the first printer, Faust, appeared to the world. When Faust had discovered this new art, and printed off a considerable number of copies of the Bible to imitate those which were commonly sold as MSS., he undertook the sale of them in Paris. It was his interest to conceal this discovery and to pass off his printed copies for MSS. But, enabled to sell his Bibles at sixty crowns, while the other scribes demanded five hundred, this raised universal astonishment, and still more when he produced copies as fast as they were wanted, and even lowered his price.

"The uniformity of the copies increased the wonder. Informations were given in to the magistrate against him as a magician, and on searching his lodgings a great number of copies were found. The red ink—and Faust's red ink is peculiarly brilliant—which embellished his copies, was said to be his blood; and it was solemnly adjudged that he was in league with the infernal. Faust at length was obliged, to save himself from the bonfire, to reveal his art to the Parliament of Paris, who discharged him from all prosecution in consideration of the wonderful invention."—Boston Herald.

Rev. Mr. Williams Heartily Endorses Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We are pleased to present this from Rev. A. A. Williams, of the Silsbee street Christian Church, Lynn, Mass.:

"I see no reason why a clergyman, more than a layman, who knows whereof he speaks, should hesitate to approve an

and worth, from which he or his family have been signally benefited, and whose commendation may serve to extend those benefits to others. My wife has for many years been a sufferer from severe

Nervous Headache

for which she found little help. She has tried many things that promised well but performed little. Last fall she took Hood's Sarsaparilla. It seems surprising what one bottle could and did do for her. The attacks of headache decreased in number and were less violent in their intensity, while her general health has been improved. Her appetite is also better. From experience with

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I have no hesitation in endorsing its merits." A. A. WILLIAMS.

BRIEFS.

The college of Bishops at the recent meeting in Kansas City determined that hereafter the Bishop's official connection with his district will begin with the announcement of the "Plan of Episcopal Visitation."

The Woman's Board of Missions reports for the fourth quarter, 1892-93: Auxiliaries, 2,174, with 43,082 members; juvenile societies, 1,236, with 33,968 members. The Woman's Missionary Advocate has 10,740 subscribers, and Little Worker has 4,153 subscribers. This is a good showing, and we trust will be much better when the next report is made.

The plans and location of the bridge across the Mississippi river at this point have been made public by the War Department. It appears from the plans that the bridge is to cross the river at a right angle to the current, from the upper end of Besancon plantation to a point about a mile above Twelve-Mile point, and about five miles above New Orleans. It will be connected with the Illinois Central road by tracks running almost parallel with the river, at a distance of about a mile from the river. The bridge is to be eighty-five feet above extreme high water; and the clear width between the piles of the central span at low water will be 1,037 feet. The distance at low water of the spans on either side of the central span will be 610 feet. The length of the bridge from shore to shore will be 2,290 feet. But beyond these points at each end will be short spans passing high above the levees. It is uncertain how far down the engineers will have to go to get a solid foundation for the central piers, but the drawings indicate that they expect to have to go a great depth. The depth of the water under the central span is from eighty-four to eighty-seven feet.

A Golden Wedding.

On the twenty-ninth of this month of May, Rev. James L. Wright, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, and his wife will celebrate their golden wedding. In advance we congratulate these good friends of ours upon this auspicious event. Bro. Wright is in his seventy-first year and his wife in her sixty-third year. Bro. Wright has been preaching fifty-two years, and his good wife has been by his side nearly the whole of that time.

They have a host of friends in Louisiana, and we trust they will remember the aged couple with substantial remembrances on the occasion of their completion of a half century of happy married life. Bro. Wright's postoffice is Vernon, La.

David Livingstone made this resolve in early life: "I will place no value on anything I have or may possess, except in relation to the kingdom of Christ. If anything I have will advance the interests of that kingdom, it shall be given or kept, as by keeping or giving it I shall most promote the glory of him to whom I owe all my hopes both for time and eternity."

The Lord's Day.

It is plain to the most casual observer that the sanctity of the holy Sabbath has been so long and so persistently encroached upon, that unless the Christian patriots of this nation rise up en masse for its defense, there will soon be no Sabbath worth the name. The desecration of the holy day is increasing at such a rate as to alarm the most optimistic of its friends. The evil tide has set so strongly in the direction of Sabbath-breaking that the most careless reader of passing events must look to the future with great anxiety, if not with alarm. The violation of this fundamental law is not confined to any particular class, but is practiced in some sort by all classes, even by many persons who claim to be Christian people.

There is one point to which we call special attention, and it is this: Sabbath desecration is the parent of more public immorality than any other sin! On this point the New York Christian Advocate speaks as follows.

The corruption of morals always keeps pace with the desecration of the Lord's day. In view of this fact one can only regard the future of the American commonwealth with deepest anxiety. Selfish statecraft in many parts of the country rules the hour and suppresses moral conviction on great questions. The unlawful desire for political preferment so blunts the moral sense that policy, not principle, holds sway in the State. All this it is impossible to reverse until we can have a civil leadership that comprehends the need of the weekly rest day to the well being of society, and that also recognizes its divine sanctions. But this does not concern civil leadership alone. The recovery of our nation from the imminent perils that surround it can only be made certain by the general revival of an intelligent appreciation of the Lord's day. To defend this day those who would assist in saving this nation must be on the alert. Every encroachment upon its sanctity should summon every patriotic citizen to the front, and every effort to protect the day from overthrow should enlist our cooperation and active support. The Earl of Shaftesbury said on one occasion to the members of the Workingmen's Lord's Day Association: "Your political liberties are more secure under the charter of the Sabbath than they can be under all the charters which were ever given by any of our kings." In all this he taught the world a most important lesson.

In a densely crowded assembly in a Christian church on a Sabbath evening one of the speakers, who denounced the widespread corruption of gambling, declared that "this immorality was largely due to the disregard of the Lord's day through the country." Seldom, if ever, has a truer word been spoken. If American society is to be saved from lapsing into barbarism through the demoralization of the saloon, the pool room, and the race-track gambling, it must be done by the enactment and rigid enforcements of Sunday laws suited to the different localities and supported by an enlightened Christian conscience.

That the preservation of the civil and Christian Sabbath calls for the whole-souled support of every citizen in this nation is a proposition as true as anything that can be possibly stated. The question is one of tremendous importance, for it is vital to the successful progress of Christianity, not to speak of the perpetuation of the republic itself.

We believe these utterances are true and timely. Then let our pulpits ring out the alarm and arouse the people. The destruction of the civil Sabbath is the death knell of civil liberty and religious progress! "Awake, thou that sleepest!"

Liberal Gifts to Millsaps College.

On my return home yesterday afternoon from a long absence, I was greeted with a letter from that "elect lady" and my special friend, Mrs. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., enclosing a check for five hundred dollars. The terms in which this timely and valuable gift are stated are so modest and beautiful, I am sure my good sister will pardon me for allowing the whole church to share the grateful pleasnre of reading her letter. It is as follows:

Carrollton, Miss., May 8, 1893.

Dear Bishop Galloway: My mother died when I was an infant; hence my rearing and training devolved upon my grandmother. To her faithfulness I am largely indebted. She has been dead since 1877, and it has long been my cherished purpose to erect a monument to her memory. After much thought and earnest prayer, I have decided to erect a monument "more lasting than marble." The enclosed check is all of a small legacy and the increase thereof. I desire that the amount be invested to form a fund, to be known as the "Martha A. Turner Library Fund," the annual interest of which shall be used in purchasing books for Millsaps College library. I earnestly pray that our college will be more and more a blessing to humanity as the years go by. Yours sincerely,

R. E. BINGHAM.

Thus, to her many other valued offerings, our dear sister adds this sacred memorial fund. It is gladly accepted, and will be carefully invested, with many earnest prayers that it will yield a thousand-fold in the harvest field of the future. It will furnish food to eager young minds, and develop characters who will become the Lord's anointed in every realm of manly and heroic endeavor. What a wise direction to give the Lord's money! May the richest blessings ever rest upon our fair benefactress and her beneficent offering!

ANOTHER GIFT FROM MAJ. MILLSAPS.

It also affords me great gratification to report another liberal gift from Maj. Millsaps, whose broad-minded and large-hearted liberality made our college possible. He has given five hundred dollars to be used immediately in the purchase of the latest, freshest reference books for the library, much needed by professors and students in the several college departments.

Thus he has again evidenced his discriminating and philanthropic interest in the cause of Christian education. These gifts are reassurance that our institution will soon be amply equipped for the very best collegiate work.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

Jackson, Miss., May 10.

Meeting of Missionary Board.

The Missionary Board of the M. E. Church, South, held a very pleasant and profitable session in Kansas City, Missouri, May 6 and 7. All the Bishops were present except Bishop Granbery, who was detained at home by ill health. Secretary John was also prevented by sickness from meeting the Board. Of the thirty-one officers and members of the Board, twenty-four were present. Many ministers of the surronnding Conferences were present. For the first time in its history the Board issued a hearty invitation for the public to be present. Accordingly the auditorium of the Centenary Church, where the sessions were held, was pretty well filled, reminding one of an Annual Conference.

The presence of an interested audience made the discussion of the various measures proposed more exhaustive, and the claims of the mission fields to be more minutely set forth. As usual, each field had its special advocates, many thinking the foreign work the most important, others claiming that America was the key to the world and that it was the best policy to mass our strength in converting the great West to Christ, and thus more quickly reach the region beyond. Cries of "Come over and help us!" from boundless and importunate fields sounded in the ears of the Board; but, alas! want of money made them go unheeded. Many times the disposition to provide for imperative demands at all hazards well-nigh prevailed, but fear of debt caused an adherence to the resolution passed at Wilmington two years ago, viz.—not to make the appropriations for the coming exceed the collections for the past year.

The financial showing was encouraging. The total collections under the regular assessments were $264,351.20; specials, $74,620.74; total collections from all sources for the year, $338,971.94. Notwithstanding the great financial depression, and notwithstanding the great efforts made to pay the old debt, the regular collections for missions have exceeded those of the previous year by $904.09. The amount paid on the old debt up to April 1, the end of the missionary fiscal year, exceeded $64,000, and pledges and subscriptions amounting to about $59,000 are in hand for the payment of the balance. In view of the financial exhibit, the following offered by Bishops Galloway and Hendrix was adopted, viz.:

Whereas, We gratefully acknowledge and appreciate the loyalty and generosity with which the church has rallied to the aid of the Board in providing for the extinguishment of the debt without any reduction in the regular collections.

Resolved, That relying with confidence upon the pledges of individuals, churches and Conferences which have already been made for the extinguishment of the debt, and insisting upon full payment of the same, we earnestly urge that our people do now bend every effort during the year to come to bring the regular collections up to the full amount of the assessment of $350,000.

The amounts appropriated to the various mission fields for the year beginning April 1, 1893, aggregated $260,948, to meet which an assessment was made upon the forty-four Annual Conferences amounting to $352,750. Ought our great church, composed of 1,305,705 members, to fail to respond to so moderate a demand?

The amount paid last missionary year for foreign and domestic missions was thirty cents per capita of membership. Alas! Mr. Editor, your patronizing Conferences fall below even this low average. North Mississippi Conference stands eighth from foot, paying twenty-one cents per member. Mississippi stands twelfth from foot, paying twenty-seven cents per member, and Louisiana twenty-second from foot, paying thirty-five cents per member. That is not a good showing. Sir, you must make your folks do better.

The Board earnestly commended the work of the American Bible Society to all our people. Without its aid in furnishing the Word of God in the various languages and dialects, missionary operations would be crippled indeed.

The labors of Dr. Y. J. Allen in translating Christian literature into the Chinese language was highly appreciated, and the Bishop holding the China Conference was requested so to arrange his appointment as to enable him to continue this important work.

Rev. Geo. B. Winton, of the Central Mexican Mission, is doing an admirable work in editing and translating in that field. He was directed to spend his vacation in getting out a hymn book in connection with our Publishing House in Nashville for use among our Mexican members.

Mrs. H. D. McGavock, foreign secretary of the Woman's Board of Missions, sent a communication of cordial greeting and hearty co-operation, to which the Board instructed the secretary to respond in fitting words.

The various pulpits in Kansas City were filled on Sabbath by the Bishops and members of the Board. Numerous and stirring addresses were made upon missions, both in the regular meetings of the Board and in several of the churches. It is believed that a considerable uplift was given to the cause of missions by the meeting of the Board held in Kansas City in the year of grace 1893.

The hospitality of Kansas City abounded. Homes in the spacious and elegant mansions were furnished. The ladies of the several Methodist Churches served bountiful and toothsome luncheons each day in the spacious parlors of Centenary Church. The members of the Commercial Club, on Monday, took the Bishops and members of the Board in carriages to the various points of interest in the city: to Armour's Packing Factory, where they employ when running to their entire capacity 7,500 hands, and where, in the language of the letter of invitation from the Commercial Club, "they had learned to utilize every part of the beast but its squeal;" to the commanding heights, where could be viewed the junction of the Missouri and the Kansas rivers; to the street which separated Kansas City, Missouri, from Kansas City, Kansas. On the Missouri side saloons abounded to regale the dry Kansans; on the Kansas side lottery shops were provided for the honest Missourians to try their luck.

C. G. ANDREWS.

On the Wing.

We spent a day at Jackson, La. Here Bro. Singleton is renewing his work in the Mississippi Conference, and here Dr. Hunnicutt and his colaborers are busily preparing for Centenary's commencement.

From Centenary to the I. I. and C. is quite a trip; but Saturday's morning hours found us in Columbus. A general feeling of blueness pervaded the atmosphere. Several disastrous crop failures, heavy rains, and a full and rising river, all conspired to bring about this condition. The city itself is delightful for situation. Its many mansions speak of prosperous days. We had a pleasant and profitable Sabbath. The people said, "Come again this Fall, after we have made a crop, and we will so gladly help you."

Verona sits on many hills, just on the border of the prairie. Her people are turning their attention to raising fruits and vegetables for the Northern markets. Her past has been prosperous. Many of her citizens have made independent fortunes. Her present prophesies a more prosperous future.

Okolona seems to be built for business. A few hours spent with her people were profitable to the college. It does cheer our hearts just to hear these people say, "Our college." Wide streets, good sidewalks, fine business blocks, heavy stocks of goods, many new residences and a general look of thrift makes a pleasant impression on the visitor. How the wind sweeps across these wide prairies!

Aberdeen, as you see it from the M. and O. depot, is certainly a fine city. Our stay was so short that we would hate to enter into minute description. This Fall I will go again and stay longer, and then I think I will have something considerable to write that will be of interest to all who read this column.

Wednesday night we preached at Kosciusko. It had been nearly eight years since we had had the pleasure of being with these good people. The many improvements already made and being made tell eloquently of her prosperity. The collection was encouraging. You have been told before in these columns that Kosciusko was the chief trading center of Central Mississippi. Her merchants have not lost their trade, but wagons from thirty miles around make their weekly trips. Kosciusko, notwithstanding short crops and low prices, is on the up-grade, and has not yet reached her full growth.

Durant lies in the valley of the Big Black. Her streets are wide, and there is a general air of comfort about her dwellings. I am told that it is planned after Philadelphia. Here the strawberry has been cultivated with some profit. Being the terminus of the Aberdeen and Lexington branches of the I. C., it has a considerable railroad population, and is well located for business.

Now, we come to the oft-recurring question, "How are you getting along?" We have added ten recruits to our Gideon's Band, and have received several subscribers to the ADVOCATE. A grey-headed layman handed in two names with the money, and says he will endeavor to get three more. Brother preacher, emulate this good man's example, and send us in two, or more, subscribers. "Will we raise all our endowment?" By the grace of God, yes. You, my brother, must come to our help. Now, the last days are upon us. Do not put it off any longer. Pay what "thou owest," recruits at $10 each, and the work is accomplished.

JOHN W. CHAMBERS, Agt.

NOTES.

Here is a pretty broad hint from the Interior: "A mean man's mean life is not a good life, no matter if he is dead."

Principal Fairbairn says: "Agnosticism is just skepticism become too proud or too perverse to confess to its own real nature."

Spiritual progress depends upon spiritual power, and spiritual power depends upon purity. So you have the gradation: purity, power, progress.

God is law—say the wise—O soul! and let us rejoice!
For, if he thunder by law, the thunder is yet his voice.
Speak to him thou; for he hears, and spirit with spirit may meet;
Closer is he than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet.
—Tennyson.

Robert Burns says the honest man is king of men. If we are to believe the newspapers, that race of kings is becoming fewer in number constantly. What a blessed thing a revival of honesty in the commercial and political world would be! How it would straighten out crooked things and smooth rough places!

A Roman Catholic writer in the May Forum has this prophecy:

Fifty years from now, while Catholicity will be blooming and vigorous in these States, the peculiar tenets of the various non-Catholic denominations will be as extinct as the pterodactyl.

One of the easy things to do is to prophesy along the line of one's wishes. If we desire a thing, then why should not that thing come to pass; then it surely will come to pass.

Preachers should be careful in the selection of topics for their discourses. A pastor up North mortally offended an entire family by preaching a sermon on the "Conceited Man." Two prominent members, whose portraits he drew, have withdrawn from the church. We presume they will organize a little church of their own, with one of their number as preacher in charge, and that they will eliminate from the Scriptures that passage which exhorts us not to think more highly of ourselves than we ought to think.—Southern Christian Advocate.

Did you ever claim the promises of God? Most Christians do not. A promise of office, or aid, or any desired thing, we are quick to claim. Then why so slack to claim God's promises? The promise of the Holy Ghost includes all other promised things, for he is God's Seal. "How much more shall your heavenly Father give his Holy Spirit to them that ask him." That promise is made to all his children. "Repent and be baptized every one of you for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Have you ever claimed that promise from God? He has entitled you to it, dear child of God. If you have not received the Spirit, it is no doubt, then, because you do not desire him.—Southern Churchman.

"The old is better." Science has its own nomenclature, which is right enough; but when the preacher introduces it into his sermons he is wrong. Very few people in an ordinary congregation understand scientific terms. If the preacher talks about hedonism, most of his people must needs consult the dictionary when they go home to find out what he was talking about, whereas if he used the good old phrase, "love of pleasure," everybody would know what he meant. The old words, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," are understood; but when the preacher begins to discourse learnedly about altruism, the people wonder at his learnedness and are mystified. "The old is better."

The following are paradoxes underlying the true conception of missions: 1. The true way to get is to give. Wise expenditure of a part means increase of the whole. Fullness of life comes only through the outgo of life for others. 2. The part is of greater practical importance than the whole. There is danger that while we love man we have no time to love men. We care for the type and forget the individual. If the kingdom is to come it is to come somewhere. The world must be saved in detail. 3. Addition is multiplication. Two are more than twice one. In all forthputting of spiritual energy arithmetical increase of numbers means geometrical increase of power. 4 The near is conditioned by the far. Increase at home comes from efforts to bring the world to Christ. Men who refuse to hear God's call for enlargement shut themselves up to mental and spiritual dry rot.—President Whiting.

A man may be just as proud of his religion as of his bank account. He who has been shown an unusual number of the secrets of God is in danger of looking down on his less highly exalted brethren as crawling caterpillars still feeding on the leaf and spinning their webs while regarding himself as having left the chrysalis and became the fair butterfly of silken wings floating over flowery meadows in the fragrant air and bright sunlight. Under these circumstances, God's way of reminding his loved ones that they are still akin to poor suffering humanity, and that their safety lies in their weakness and in God's strength, is to administer pain in some form and to a degree that leads them to cry out to God in prayer for a remedy. The child that lies helpless in the cradle and cries and cries until it gets the attention of its parent gets something better than its own strength, better than its own wisdom, better than its own love. It gets its parent's strength and wisdom and love.—Dr. Maxwell.

Water Valley, Miss.

Dear brethren, preachers and Sunday-school superintendents, please observe Children's Day with zeal in the Lord. If you have not arranged for the third Sunday in May, do so as early thereafter as practicable. This interest demands our attention and most vigorous efforts. We need the labor, lessons and money found in the Sunday-school work. If you fail, we lose that much inspiration, training and means. Let our Conference come to the front in this praiseworthy cause.

Everybody can do something in this beautiful field toward developing people of all ages for God and his glory.

Yours, J. M. WYATT,
Pres. S. S. Board, North Miss. Conf.

Bro. Linfield writes: "We will pay our full assessment; but as I have a large work, it takes a month to make the round. I send it as I get it, not waiting to secure it all before I send any." That is right. God bless the zealous young brother!

"Don't scold me," pleads a brother who has not done anything towards a week of prayer and self-denial. Did he think he deserved a scolding? If so, he must get somebody else to administer it—some of the brethren who have been firing at me!

A gifted young woman in the Meridian district offers herself to the Lord and his church for the foreign fields. Who will dole our dimes and nickels in comparison with such an offering as that?

"I told my people to observe the week of prayer and self-denial, but they did not," is the excuse a young brother gives for not having led his people in such observance according to the programs furnished. And the Annual Conference told him to lead them in public services.

In reply to my inquiries, oft repeated, about the observance of a week of prayer and self-denial, a good brother writes: "My flock has been opened any day for the Conference solicitor or the district solicitor. When they come to my town they will be kindly treated and given the field. In the meantime, should they fail to collect, and I get other matters off my hands, I will do what I can. I shall call the attention of the stewards to your call." Not my call, O my brother! but the orders of the Annual Conference, which the orders or wishes of the stewards can not supersede. T. L. MELLEN,

THE PLACE OF CHRIST IN MODERN THEOLOGY. By A. M. Fairbairn, A. M., D. D., principal of Mansfield College, Oxford. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. George F. Wharton & Bro., New Orleans. Price, $2.50.

Principal Fairbairn does not claim that this volume is a system of theology, but that it is an attempt at formulating the fundamental conception of such a system. "It is an endeavor, through a Christian doctrine of God, at a sketch of the first lines of a Christian theology." The volume is divided into two books, the first of which is devoted to historical criticism. In this part the author traces the history of dogma and doctrine, in their various forms and phases, from the beginning to the present time. The evolution of theology as revealed by the author's pen will be interesting and edifying to every student. In the second part of the volume is an attempt to show that the trend has turned back to Christ through this very channel of historical criticism. He says: "We now stand face to face with the historical Christ." Every question and doctrine can now be looked at through Him. He is the Sun, and, therefore, the center of all theology. "We conceive God as He conceived Him." "What God signified to Jesus Christ He ought to signify to all Christian churches." And so of every other question of doctrine in theology.

The book is a clear and able discussion of a most interesting and important subject, and enthrones our Lord to the highest place of authority in theology.

Revival Services.

Bro. Sawyer has had a successful week at Louisiana Avenue, the congregations being large, the preaching simple and strong, and the results justifying the continuance during this present week. Bro. Wynn at Parker Chapel is also going on with his meeting, which thus far has resulted in much good. Bro. Frank Parker spent the week with Bro. Drake at Crowley, and reports a meeting of great power. Bro. Johns has been assisting Bro. Roy on Lower Coast Mission. The Lord is surely authenticating his truth by displaying its power in awakening and saving souls.

Revival in Cottesville, Miss.

We closed, on last Thursday night, one of the most powerful and satisfactory works of grace that this community has ever had. Old feuds were buried, sinners convicted, penitents converted, and the church raised to a higher plane of Christian living. About fifty souls were converted, and quite that many will be added to the different churches. The Methodist Church has received twenty, and will, perhaps, receive others. Bro. W. M. McIntosh, of Cherokee, Ala., did the preaching after he came, except three sermons by W. J. O'Bryant and two by T. B. Malone, of Grenada. Bro. McIntosh is a man of God, and the message he delivers is the power of God unto salvation. He is not an evangelist, although he is doing some evangelistic work. Rejoice with us.

The New Sinai Gospels.

BY AGNES SMITH LEWIS.

[NOTE.—The importance of the discovery, in the Convent of St. Catherine at Mount Sinai, of an early manuscript of the old Syriac Gospels, is indicated by the following note from Prof. J. Rendel Harris, of Cambridge University, who writes under date of March 30, at Suez, Egypt, accompanying the following description of it by its fortunate discoverer: "I am just out in the desert, where we have had nearly two months' retirement, including forty days' work in the convent library, on Sinai. As the results of our work are likely to be monumental in New Testament criticism, I thought you ought to have some notes of the leading points, and, in particular, of the great discovery made last year by my friend, Mrs. Lewis, of Cambridge (an accomplished scholar to whom I gave introductions to the convent)—a discovery which brought us here this Winter. She has unearthed a palimpsest of the old Syriac Gospels which dates from at least the sixth century, and is closely related to the Curetun text. I can assure you that it is an astonishing manuscript, and that the recovery of the Lewis Codex marks an epoch in New Testament studies. I have accordingly asked her to write you some notes on the subject."—THE EDITOR.]

Whence do we get the text of our English New Testament? From the Greek, most of my readers will answer. But few, we venture to think, have ever cared to trace the steps by which it has been won from moldering fragments, by patient scholar or by enterprising traveler.

The edited text of our Greek New Testament rests mainly on four great manuscripts, or codices, as they are called—the Vaticanus, of the fourth century, now in the Pope's palace; the Alexandrinus, of the fifth, carefully preserved in the British Museum; the Sinaiticus, won by Tischendorf, not without guile, from the monks in the convent of Mount Sinai; and the Codex Bezae, in the University Library at Cambridge. These are all clearly written, the chief difficulty in deciphering them being that the writing, like that of most ancient Greek manuscripts, is in capital letters, called uncials, without division of the letters into words, and without punctuation. Other difficulties are caused by the finger of Time. Sometimes a hole exists where an important word might be looked for; sometimes the writing is so faded that the keenest eyes can hardly decipher it; and sometimes pages have stuck so close together that the upper surface of the one has been transferred to the other when they were separated. But we are deeply thankful that it has been possible for British and American scholars, with the help of these and other codices, to adopt a text which represents the Word of God, in all its main essentials, very nearly as it was first penned under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Since the Revised Version of the Bible was given to the world, twelve years ago, it is now no secret that in many minor points these great codices differ. Their variations seldom affect any serious doctrine; they merely represent a different choice of words to express the same thing, and are due to the idiosyncrasies of early scribes. To us they afford witness that the immediate followers of our Lord had no slavish veneration for mere words—that his teaching, as by them reported when fresh in their memories, has been transmitted to us more faithfully than if learned rabbis had watched over its every jot and tittle.

Now, when Greek codices vary, where can we look for an umpire? Naturally, to the ancient codices in those languages into which the gospel was first translated. And here the language which was spoken in the humble workshop of Nazareth, the language in which our Lord restored a dead girl to life, and in which his despairing cry was uttered from the cross, the Syriac, or Aramaic, becomes of first importance.

Early Syriac versions of the New Testament fall naturally into two divisions—the common one, or Peshito, universally adopted by the Syriac churches after the fourth century; and the more ancient one, named the Curetonian, from William Cureton, who discovered the only known copy, in 1842, amongst some manuscripts brought from the Nitrian desert to the British Museum.

The Curetonian, being the earlier of these two, is the more highly valued. But it is imperfect, containing portions only of Matthew, of Luke, and of John, whilst of Mark all but the last four verses had disappeared before Cureton found it.

Scholars have, therefore, often expressed a hope that the Curetonian version might some day be supplemented by the discovery of another manuscript. For this, Eastern monasteries have till now been vainly searched; and the present writer believes that she can distinctly trace the finger of Providence in the way that she and her twin sister, Mrs. James G. Gibson, were led, in the Spring of last year, to place their hands on an almost complete copy of these early Syriac Gospels.

We had often thought of visiting Mt. Sinai; for the warm welcome extended to us in other Greek monasteries had awakened the hope that our command of colloquial Greek might be the key to doors which have baffled the efforts of former European travelers. But family circumstances prevented our carrying out our purpose till the Spring of 1892; and our thoughts were turned in the direction of the Syriac library through the publication in 1891, by Mr. Rendel Harris, of the Apology or Aristides, which he had recently discovered there.

The Syriac language, to one who has already mastered Arabic and Hebrew, is not very difficult; but a new source of power was unexpectedly placed in our hands by Mr. Harris himself, who insisted on teaching us photography. November skies are not, however, in England, very favorable to this art; and we had only half learned our lesson when our kind instructor received a commission from the University of Cambridge, to visit other Eastern monasteries in search of manuscripts. It thus came to pass that we had taken only one respectable picture before we started, on Jan. 7, with over a thousand Eastman films and a manuscript-stand, designed by Mr. Harris to obviate the difficulties which he had himself met with.

We were received by the monks with great cordiality, which ripened into a sincere friendship with some of them during our stay. Amongst the Syriac books which they showed us, I soon picked out a volume of a hundred and seventy-eight leaves, nearly all glued together with some greasy substance. I separated them partly with my fingers and partly with the steam of a kettle. They had the more fascination for me that no human eye had evidently looked on them for centuries; and I soon perceived that it was a palimpsest, whose upper or later writing contained the stories of women saints, whilst the under or earlier one was the four Gospels, as I knew from many pages being headed "Evangelion," "Matthi," "Marcus," or "Luca." I could also read detached words or lines where they appeared on the margins. I, therefore, at once determined to photograph the whole of this palimpsest.

Space fails me to relate all the difficulties we surmounted. The manuscript-stand was excellent, but its screws would not fit, and it had to be tied together with cords; and there was a radical defect in our two Eastman boxes, which caused them to tear up the films, and so clog their own machinery. Besides this, my sister, who seconded me with great assiduity, sometimes lost her place in turning over the leaves, and thus put me in possession of at least thirty-three duplicates, which I did not want, as they increased both my work and her own.

We returned home in the end of March, and developed most of our photographs successfully, with the exception of some which were sent to the Eastman Company and were spoiled. The box which contained these had been picked out at random from amongst over forty similar ones, yet strangely enough, it contained those of which my sister's mistakes had furnished us with duplicates.

When the three hundred and fifty-six pages of our palimpsest were completed, I read the upper writing, and found that it contained the stories of Thecla, Eugenia, Pelagia, Marina, Euphrosyna, Onesima, Drosis, Barbara, Maria, Irene, Euphemia, Sophia, Theodosia, Thendota, a short creed, and the stories of Susanna, and of Cyprian and Justina. As my eyes were not keen enough to read the under writing which ran between and underneath the lines of the upper, and was, of course, much more minute than the original, I showed my photographs to several Syriac scholars, asking if they could help me to find out to which version these Gospels belonged.

They were all either too busy or their eyes were, like my own, not of the kind which read minute things easily. At length I showed some of the clearest photographs to Mr. F. C. Burkitt, and he asked Prof. Bensly's help in transcribing a page, with the result that they pronounced the version to be one closely allied to the Curetonian.

It was evident that a satisfactory transcription could be made only from the manuscript itself, and as these two gentlemen, with Mr. Rendel Harris, undertook to transcribe it, my sister and I offered to return with them to Mt. Sinai, as we thought that our presence would indeed the monks to lend it the more readily to our friends.

We were not mistaken. The treasure was at once confided to my keeping, and for more than a month was worked upon from sunrise till sunset, with the following results.

The upper writing is in one column, and, as we have said, a continuous volume; a selection of short biographies of women saints, with the title, "Select Narratives," by one John Hadesh, made in A. D. 778. To supply the vellum on which this is written, an older book has been taken to pieces, and arranged so that the Gospels are interleaved with each other.

They seem to be there in a complete form, if only they could be all read; but the words, which are in two columns, can only be distinctly seen when they are on the margin, or beyond the upper or lower line. The smaller letters of the Gospels have often to be traced amongst the larger ones of the martyrology. Some are distinct, but some are greatly faded, and show themselves only when touched by a chemical reviver. Nearly the whole of the Gospel of St. Mark has been transcribed, except the last twelve verses, which are absent, as they are from some of the older Greek codices.

It is supposed from this that our manuscript may be a more ancient one than the Curetonian.

The old reading "Good-will towards men" (en anthropois eudokia), in Luke ii, 14, is confirmed.

Lastly, our manuscript is linked to the Curetonian by its colophon, which came up under the reviver, and which tells us that these are the separated Gospels—separated, perhaps, from the Diatessaron, or Harmony of Tatian, which was used by the Syriac Church during the second and third centuries. The Gospels end on page 320 of the manuscript. The remainder is apocryphal writings, in Syriac and in Greek, which are as yet only partly transcribed.

We can only hope that this our discovery of an early text of God's great message to the world may lead to an increased interest in Syriac studies, and to a renewed search in Eastern monasteries for further documents which will, like Apology of Aristides, give us a more intelligent insight into the history of the first martyrs and confessors.—Sunday-School Times.

Communing with God.

Perhaps you spend too little time in communion with God through his Word. It is not necessary to make long prayers, but it is essential to be much alone with God; waiting at his door; hearkening for his voice; lingering in the garden of Scripture for the coming of the Lord God in the dawn or cool of the day. No number of meetings, no fellowship with Christian friends, no amount of Christian activity can compensate for the neglect of the still hour.

When you feel least inclined for it, there is most need to make for your closet with the shut door. Do for duty's sake what you can not do as a pleasure, and you will find it become delightful. You can better thrive without nourishment than become happy or strong in Christian life without fellowship with God.

When you can not pray for yourself, begin to pray for others. When your desires flag, take the Bible in hand, and begin to turn each text into petition, or take up the tale of your mercies, and begin to translate each of them into praise. When the Bible itself becomes irksome, inquire if you have not been spoiling your appetite by sweetmeats and renounce them; and believe that the Word is the wire along which the voice of God will certainly come to you, if the heart is hushed and the attention fixed. "I will hear what God the Lord shall speak."

More Christians than we can count are suffering from a lack of prayer and Bible study, and no revival is more to be desired than that of systematic private Bible study. There is no short and easy method of godliness which can dispense with this.—Epworth Herald.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

THE POPPY LAND LIMITED EXPRESS.

BY EDGAR WADE ABBOT.

The first train leaves at six P. M.
For the land where the poppy blows:
The mother dear is the engineer,
And the passenger laughs and crows.

The palace car is the mother's arms;
The whistle, a low, sweet strain:
The passenger winks, and nods, and blinks,
And goes to sleep in the train!

At eight P. M. the next train steers
For the poppy land afar.
The summons clear falls on the ear:
"All aboard for the sleeping-car!"

But what is the fare to poppy land?
I hope it is not too dear;
The fare is this, a hug and kiss,
And it's paid to the engineer!

So I ask of him who children took
On his knee in kindness great,
"Take charge, I pray, of the trains each day
That leave at six and eight."

"Keep watch of the passengers," thus I pray,
"For to me they are very dear,
And special ward, O Gracious Lord,
O'er the gentle engineer."

In Japan.

ART.

The Japanese have a peculiar idea in art. A single twig of cherry is to them more beautiful than a great bouquet of many varieties of flowers crowded together. In art the Japanese are better to design, the Chinese better to execute. A Japanese will make a design of a single bird upon a tree; a Chinese will execute that design with great exactness, and then, because the one bird looks so nice, a dozen more will be placed upon the same tree, and the idea injured.

If you purchase a book showing the productions of modern Japanese painters, there will be in it such as the following: Two sparrows on hanging branch of a cherry tree. A dancing monkey and his master. A pair of storks by the seashore. A festival procession, with lookers-on. A skylark in a rice field. A lake and mountain in Springtime (see the zigzag narrow road up the mountain). Two wild horses rinsing their mouth in the river. A crow flying around an old pine. A cock, with his mate, crowing at sunrise. Sugawara Michizane at his poor exile home. (He had high place in the royal court; but the Emperor gave credit to the false charges of his enemies, and banished the loyal minister to another island. He died there, but after death he was deified.) A rose. A plum tree by the hedge. Dawn of a morning in Spring at Fuji Mountain. A lady offering her plum tree to the royal messenger. (The Emperor had a red-blossoming plum tree very dear to him. His minister was sent to seek and get a tree like it. At last one was found and asked of the lady who owned it. She loved that plum tree, but she could not deny, since it was the order of the Emperor. When the tree was taken away she tied to it a little paper, upon which was written:

"Chioku nare ha itomo Kashikoshi
Uguhiau no Yado wato towaha
Ikaga kota yen."

("As it is the order of the Emperor, I am filled with awe; but if I am asked where is the home of the nightingale, what shall I answer?")

The Emperor, touched by the song, returned the plum tree. HENRY G. HAWKINS.

From Aunt Loretta.

Dear Nieces and Nephews: Sometimes I thought I would write, and then again I thought no one had ever missed "Aunt Loretta's" letters, and so I could just remain silent and slip out of every one's memory that had ever noticed the poor scribbles, and try to satisfy the little monitor within that at one time and another tells me to "Write, write," by saying softly to myself that "Silence was golden;" but to-night the little fellow mentioned above will not be put off with that oft-quoted excuse, and here I am once more, writing away at such a break-neck speed that I fear if one could be near enough to hear the exclamation of the one that stands at the case and handles all those little black types that represent all these letters, they might hear some words besides "sugar" and "molasses." It must surely puzzle the wits of some of them to decipher the hieroglyphics that find their way from the pigeon holes to the printer sometimes, as this scribbler could testify, because she received a letter lately from one whose name is often seen in the ADVOCATE, and it was like what the little boy said about his own first composition; he "had to read it three or four times before he could read it at all."

If the truth was known, perhaps that is the way the editor is by some of your little letters, and not only yours, but some of the children's of larger growth also, and perhaps he often "halts between two opinions," whether to dump them into that awful basket under the table, or send them to the printer (who is continually on the lookout for "more copy"), and then wishes that people would write legibly, or not at all. This must not discourage you, but let it help you to "try, try, try again;" nothing succeeds "like success."

I wonder how many have found the answer to the editor's question. I gave it out to my Sunday-school class two weeks ago, and Miss Jennie Crawford brought me the answer last Sunday. "Its" was found in the twenty-fifth chapter of Leviticus, fifth verse. I often give out questions to my class, and find it interesting. Though the class is the senior Bible-class, and all are grown young people, yet even some of the old folks might think that word "its" was pretty hard to find. If the editor thinks it was not fair for a young lady to have the honor, he can just drop this scribble in the friendly basket that "feels for other's woes, and hides the faults it sees." And that will be the last of it. AUNT LORETTA.

The small daughter of a certain charitably-minded family has been told frequently that Satan finds work for idle hands. The other morning one of the tribe of tramps called with the usual story of Winter woes. The mistress of the house made the customary suggestion about obtaining employment, and was assured that every avenue to self-support was closed. Then the small girl came forward from her refuge behind her mother's skirts and said, in tones of kindly suggestion, "Couldn't Satan find anything for you to do?"

God is Alpha and Omega in the great world; endeavor to make him so in the little world; make him thy evening epilogue, and thy morning prologue, practice to make him thy last thought at night when thou sleepest, and thy first thought in the morning when thou awakest; so shall thy fancy be sanctified in the night, and thy understanding rectified in the day, so shall thy rest be peaceful, thy labors prosperous, thy life pious, and thy death glorious.—Quarles.

MR. EDITOR: This is the first time we have ever written a piece to your valuable paper; but, after reading the cousins' letters, of last week's paper, we became very much interested, and decided we would write, and trust it may not reach the waste-basket. We have a union Sunday-school of about fifty-four members. Our pastor this year is Bro. Geddy. We all love him very much. He has done a great deal of good here since he came. We will answer C. M. Hart's question. His teacher's name is Mrs. Allen. As this is our first letter, we will stop, and if any of the cousins would like to know our names, they can find out by solving the following acrostic, and the first letter of each answer will form our first names. Who was Isaac's father? Who was Jonah's wife? Who was Isaac's wife? Who stole the golden wedge? Who was king of Tyre? Who was Rebekah's oldest son? Who was cast in the lions' den? Who surveyed the broken walls of Jerusalem by night? Who sent presents of silver and gold to the King of Syria? With very best wishes for the ADVOCATE, we remain, YOUR LITTLE FRIENDS.

Courtland, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: This is my first attempt to write, and I hope to see it in print. The ADVOCATE is a weekly visitor at our home, and I like to read the little cousins' letters. I belong to the Sunday-school at Hopewell Church. Bro. Hull is our preacher, and we love him and family very much. My papa is the supply preacher on Amite circuit, and we feel very lonely at home without him. He loves his people very much, and I love them because they are kind to papa. I will ask, Where is "mulberry tree" found in the Bible?

Your little friend, MAMMIE DAY.

Hopewell, Miss.

Chalcedony Park.

The remarkable "forest" of petrified trees, called Chalcedony Park, can be reached in a few hours from the Holbrook or Corizzo stations, Arizona, on the Santa Fe railway. The area of the "park" is estimated at hundreds of square miles, and it contains hundreds of tons of agatized wood. Mr. Hovey, a recent visitor, likens it to a "vast logging camp," where the lumbermen have tossed the huge logs at random from their sleds, and gone away, leaving them to become rain-soaked and moss-grown. Some of the trunks are 150 feet long, and they break up in sections as if sawn through at intervals. Their skins are dark red as a rule, but the chips and interior exhibit kaleidoscopic colors. Amethysts, red and yellow jasper, chalcedony of every tint, topaz, onyx, cornelian, and other stones abound. The logs, in fact, are a blending of these stones. One of them, 100 feet long and three to five feet in diameter, spans a narrow canon, and is called the Agate Bridge. It is chiefly composed of jaspers and agates. As to the origin of the petrifactions it is supposed that in past time the trees were overwhelmed with volcanic ashes and hot silicious waters from geysers. The timber is analogous to pine or cedar and as it decayed, the silica, dyed with various salts of iron and manganese in solution, took its place. The fossil wood is cut and polished by the Drake Company, of Sioux Fall, Dakota, who exhibit specimens at Tiffany's, New York. One of these is about three feet square and weighs over two tons.—Interior

A Queer Little Fellow.

A queer little fellow indeed was Tommy Dick. Why, he would give away the last marble he had if a boy wanted it. He would run on errands all day long and never grumble. He would always give the best place to somebody else, no matter who, and feel so honestly glad in seeing other folks have a good time that he really forgot all about himself. Don't you see, he was a very queer little fellow?

But somehow everybody liked to have the queer little fellow about. Grandma always smiled all over her face when she saw Tommy coming. Aunt Eliza, who was a very busy woman, used to say, "Well, now you've come just in time, Tommy. Run to ——." When Tommy went to spend the day with grandma or Aunt Eliza, the folks at home all missed him. One would say, "Now, if Tommy were only here."

You see, Tommy was one of the unselfish helpers, and what a tiresome world this would be if there were not a good sprinkle of such people. Are there any Tommys at your house? It wouldn't do any harm if there were more than one, you know. Indeed, half-a-dozen boys and girls with the spirit of Tommy Dick would make home a very pleasant place. Don't you think so?—Free Methodist.

Six Things.

Six things a boy ought to know:

1. That a quiet voice, courtesy and kind acts are as essential in the part in the world of a gentleman as of a gentle woman

2. That roughness, blustering and even foolhardiness, are not manliness. The most firm and courageous men have usually been the most gentle.

3. That muscular strength is not health.

4. That a brain crammed only with facts is not necessarily a wise one.

5. That the labor impossible to the boy of fourteen will be easy to the man of twenty.

6. That the best capital for a boy is not money, but a love of work, simple tastes, and a heart loyal to his friends and his God.

A famous Brooklyn clergyman was once addressing a Sunday-school on the lesson of the day, which happened to be "Jacob's Ladder." He got along swimmingly until a little urchin in one of the back seats squeaked out, "Why did the angels have to have a ladder when they had wings?" After the inevitable laugh had subsided, the clergyman said: "Well, that is a fair question; who can answer it?" There was a pause, and then up went a pudgy fist. "Well, my little man," asked the clergyman, "why was it?" "I guess mebbe they was a moultin'," was the astonishing reply, and the address was concluded right there.

In 1890 he moved from ..sas to Louisiana, and settled near Lake ..ur. This country was then, and ever had ..n, destitute of Protestant preaching. He ..n made arrangements for an appointment, ..to his own hired house, a small house, ..ch was built for a whisky saloon, he com..ced preaching. He soon organized a ..rch with six members, composed largely of ..owo family; soon others came in. He spoke ..building a church. By nearly everyone it ..thought impossible; but by perseverance ..an indomitable energy, that characterized ..man in all of his work, he succeeded, and ..March, 1891, just one year from the time of ..arrival there, he had it ready for dedication, ..the writer was privileged to dedicate it to ..service of God. It now stands as a monu..t to the memory of that good and noble ..of God. He reported at the last session ..the Conference seventy-four members, and ..right among the Creole Catholic element. ..a fitting work in which to end his long ..useful life.

He was a spiritual man, a ..genial companion. He had a wonderful ..t for winning the hearts of his people. His ..jected leg always gave him a great deal of ..uble; at times his suffering was excruciat..g. The disease with which he died had ..ined him to his bed for many weeks. WALKER—Died in the city of Memphis, Tenn., March 21, MILTON MCKAY WALKER, son of John M. and Maggie Walker. Milton was a young man of sterling worth, sober and industrious, and reaching man's estate, just entering his twenty-first year. He was born in Booneville, Prentiss county, Miss., Feb. 6, 1873. He was bereaved of his mother when about two years and two months old, and lost his father when about five years of age, thus being doubly orphaned. But God took care of him. He found a mother in his aunt, Mrs. Kate Walker, of Baldwin—a tender, loving mother, and his uncles, Dr. Sam Walker and P. M. Walker, supplied the place of the absent father as best they could.

Few children bereaved of parents are so fortunate as Milton was. Kindness and tenderness were shown him in his rearing, and he was taught of God by his aunt both by her precept and example. We may truly say never was love and attention more appreciated, and never did a youth strive harder to show his appreciation of these kindnesses.

Milton was the soul of honor; had a profound regard for the religion of Jesus Christ. Professed religion about three years ago, and joined the Methodist Church at Baldwin. But he is gone to his reward. Peace be to his ashes. May we meet him bye and bye!

To his sorrowing relatives and to the one who was more than life to him, I will say: Grieve not that Milton has been called home so young and just as we were all expecting so much of him. God makes no mistakes. Let us say Amen to the divine will, and resolve to meet him in the better land.

ROBERTSON—Miss MATTIE ROBERTSON died, April 21, of typhoid fever. She was a Christian woman, and her life was such that the entire community knew it. Her death is a heavy loss to the church, to the Sunday-school, to the prayer meeting, as well as to her family and friends.

She was converted in early girlhood, and has been a member of the Methodist Church for years. Sunday always found her in her place at church, and her attentive look was an inspiration to the preacher. At Sunday-school she was an earnest teacher, and labored diligently, not only on the lesson, but to save the souls of her scholars. At prayer meeting her sweet-spirited, faithful prayers were a benediction, and her presence will be missed. She carried Christ with her, not only to church, but to her daily duties; and, whether in the home or in the school-room, she was the same noble-hearted servant of God.

Hers was a life well spent. The crowning glory of our Christianity is the character it makes, the manhood, the womanhood, the development of the God-germ within; and hers was a well-growing character. May her life live on, may her good works follow her!

ODOM.—ARTHUR, son of Charlie and Mollie Odom, died near Causeyville, Miss., April 19, 1893, of catarrhal fever. With anxious hearts did the loved ones watch by his bedside; and with what care and prudence did the (now heart-grieved) mother give her little Arthur medicine, hoping it would benefit him!

Little Arthur was beloved very much by all his relatives and idolized by his father. Oh! how his papa did pray for him to be spared! How he stood over his sweet little babe and begged him to stay with him! He was often heard to say: "Son, won't you, can't you stay with papa? You have been so much pleasure to your papa; please stay with me, son," Arthur did not answer, but Jesus said: "Suffer him to come to me, and forbid him not; for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

To-day, while his parents and other loved ones are grieving over their loss, little Arthur is resting sweetly "in the arms of Jesus," and his little tongue, with thousands of other little children's, is singing, "Glory, glory, glory be to God on high." Weep not, kind parents, for your loss is little Arthur's eternal gain.

F. B. ORMOND.

HALE—Whereas, in the providence of God, he has seen fit to remove from the ranks of the Rayne Memorial Sunday-school one of its loved scholars, ALICE HALE, on May 5, 1893, at a teachers' meeting of said Sunday-school, it was

Resolved, That our school has sustained a loss; but that we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, trusting him until in his own good time he shall see fit to explain the dispensation.

Resolved, That to the grief-stricken family we extend our heart-felt sympathy, and prayers in this their heavy bereavement, pointing them to Alice's God, whom her young heart had learned to love and lean upon, knowing that in her departure they have one more link binding them to our beautiful Eden-home; and, as she with her departing breath lisped the name of Jesus, and was taken in his arms to the other shore, may we all catch the heavenly strains, which she, with the blood-washed throng, is singing around the throne.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and the same be read before the Sunday-school.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THOSE SENDING MONEY.—Remittances should be made only by money orders, express company orders, registered letters, drafts or checks on New Orleans banks or merchants. Drafts on country banks occasion a loss of from 15 to 25 cents per check. Drafts on country merchants we have no facility for collecting. Checks and drafts, also money orders, should be made payable to D. L. Mitchel, Publisher.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Hatfelinger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

Our lives are all music if we but touch the chords rightly, so says one of our poets, and we all know there is a golden thread entering into the warp and woof of every-day life that is touched by sympathy for the distressed and suffering. At such a time what a boon to have on hand Dicks' Mul-en-ol to offer as a relief for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains and colic. It is soothing and cooling. Large bottles 50 cents.

To Whom It May Concern.

Macon, Ga., March 18, 1893.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. Is is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

Pastor Mulberry St. Methodist Church.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The combined length of the world's telegraph lines is 881,000 miles, necessitating the use of 2,260,000 miles of wire.

Forty-seven Mississippi White Caps surrendered to Judge Chrisman at Brookhaven, on May 12. Each pleaded guilty and relied on the mercy of the court. The whole number were placed under peace bonds for a year.

A gas well has just been finished at Bryan, O., which shows a pressure of 850 pounds. It is estimated that it will supply from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 feet per day and is undoubtedly the best gas well ever drilled in the Ohio field.

Arrangements have been completed at a meeting of the National League for Good Roads to make an exhibit of a roadway fifty feet wide and one thousand feet in length at the World's Fair in Chicago. The sum of $10,000 was appropriated for this purpose.

A crevasse occurred on the west side of Bayou Lafourche, La., on May 14. The break is reported to be fifty feet wide. Unless closed it will inundate all that section of country between Bayous Lafourche and Bleu, being compelled to seek a passage to the sea through that valley.

The second break in the Arkansas line of levees occurred at Brook's mill, in Chicot county, at 6 o'clock, on May 14. While the area affected is small by comparison with that remaining secure, the collapse of the Arkansas levees is a colossal calamity and can not be regarded otherwise.

The Democratic leaders in Congress and the administration are trying to come to an understanding as to the policy of the next Congress, by which they can avoid the danger of a split in the party on the money question and secure united action on several important questions which will present themselves.

The Louisiana State Commission is greatly distressed over the unavoidable delay in furnishing the interior of its building at the World's Fair in Chicago. The cars containing furniture and displays have not only been delayed on the railroad, but several have been broken open and much property stolen or destroyed. A few of the shipments from New Orleans, however, have arrived and are being put in place.

The Scotch-Irish Congress of America commenced its fifth annual session, on May 11, at Springfield, O., with about 200 delegates present from all over the United States and Canada. The society is organized for distinctively historical and social purposes. Among the special features of the Scotch-Irish Congress were the addresses by Hon. A. A. Woods and Rev. Dr. B. M. Palmer, of New Orleans, delivered by a monster phonograph from the platform.

The Treasury situation shows decided improvement, the receipts being larger than for last year at this time, while the expenditures, through large, are not so heavy as anticipated. Most of the heavy disbursements for the month have already been made, including $8,000,000 for pensions and other heavy payments that become due about the first of the month. This has reduced the net balance down to $22,250,000, but this will from now on begin to increase.

The first disastrous effects of the present high water in the Mississippi was demonstrated at 4 A. M. on May 11, when the levee two miles above Lakeport, on the Arkansas side of the river, and about ten miles below Greenville, gave way, and a vast section of the surrounding country was inundated. After flooding about five thousand acres of tillable land in Chicot county, Ark., it will enter Bayou Macon and Boeuf river, flooding the territory adjacent to the same, and then entering the Wichita and finally re-entering the Mississippi through Red river. East and West Carroll, Madison and Tensas parishes will be more or less affected.

The passengers cheered enthusiastically upon coming into the harbor and the crew of the Campania showed much jubilation over their victory.

Enforcement of Discipline Again.

In a recent issue of the ADVOCATE we noticed an article in which the case of Judas was cited as illustrative of the right kind and as the only kind of right enforcement of discipline; but we confess that we do not think it at all settles the matter, or is very illustrative of the point in question. We are ready to admit that God has to do with the human conscience, and, too, that he had something to do with that of Judas when he hanged himself; but with the proofs that are before us, we can not admit the statement as being true that the spirituality of one man, or a number of men, or even that of a whole church, is an enforcement of discipline in the case of the disobedient. Christ himself did not think so, for if he had, he would not have uttered the following words: "If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican. Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." (Matt. xviii, 15, 16, 17, 18.)

Now, why did Christ not say the spiritual power that is in you, and that goes out from you, will accomplish all that is necessary? Why did he not say that if the individual member who had been offended did not have a sufficient supply of spiritual power to accomplish all that was necessary, that the church did? Because he knew that there was nothing business-like in such foolishness, and, therefore, said: Go tell him his fault: if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, and if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church; but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican." That is, let him be expelled from the church.

In this trial there is an accuser, prosecutor, and a committee of trial, but not the least intimation that the offender's conscience, or the spirituality of the offended, or even that of the whole church, is that accuser, prosecutor, or committee of trial. The accuser and prosecutor is the brother who has been offended, and the committee of trial is the church as a visible organization. This is consonant with Christ's own statement, and, besides, we are to learn from the last clause quoted that whatever disciplinary course is taken by his people or his church, that is just, it shall have the approval of heaven itself. In fact, Christ has authorized his church to take any disciplinary course that will most likely secure the obedience of its members and preserve its purity, that accords with the directions given.

Perhaps no one will question the authority of Paul in the matter of discipline and its enforcement, and, therefore, let us quote him, for Christ authorized him, by his Holy Spirit, to write what he did, and he said: "Now I command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which he received of us." (II. Thess. iii, 6) That is, expel every brother who will not be subject to discipline, and is determined in his disorderly course. "Purge out, therefore, the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump." (I. Cor. v, 7) What "old leaven"? That of wicked conduct. "If any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one no not to eat. For what have I to do to judge them also that are without? do not ye judge them that are within? But them that are without God judgeth. Therefore, put away from among yourselves that wicked person." (I. Cor. v, 11, 12, 13) Now, who would ask for a plainer scripture on discipline and its enforcement than the last one quoted? From the above Scriptures we are to learn the fact, that the church is to judge the outward acts of its members and deal with them accordingly. It is exported to cure the disorderly by enforcing its rules, and after it has done its duty in this respect, and fails to cure them, then it must expel them, and not wait for them to go out, as did Judas, and kill themselves. Paul believed in a strict enforcement of discipline. Christ and Paul both believed in it, and, therefore, commanded it to be done by the church itself—not by the church as a mere spiritual force, but by it as an organized visible power that is competent to judge the outward conduct of its members as to whether or not it is in harmony with the divine rules of Christian life. "By their fruits ye shall know them." (Matt. vii, 20.) The church is to judge the outward conduct of its members, and not their hearts, and, therefore, deal with them accordingly.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, does not require more than the Bible, and, therefore, brethren, let us obey her rules, and enforce them with much earnestness, wisdom and firmness.

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. P. Burkett, P. C., Lapine mission, La., May 17: "I want to say that last Sunday was Children's Day at Sardis Church, Lapine mission. Large congregation; children well trained; program carried out; collection, $5.16; address by this scribe. The work still goes on. Plenty of rain. Finances low. A kind people on this work. We are doing what we can to build up this mission. Pray for us."

Rev. W. W. Drake, Crowley, La., May 19: "Our meeting closed last night. It was attended with power. About thirty or more professed conversion. Fourteen have joined our church, making nineteen accessions during the year. The greatest work was the permanent stimulus given to the faith and zeal of the church. Bro. Frank Parker did most of the preaching, and the Holy Spirit did the work."

Rev. J. W. Medlock, P. C., Minden, La., May 19: "Meeting of fifteen days' continuance closed last night. Nine accessions, large attendance, considerable awakening, and much good, it is hoped, done. We are indebted to faithful and valuable services by Rev. J. A. Parker, also one very effective sermon by Rev. John F. Foster, and to the efficient services of Prof. W. W. Pattison in conducting the singing."

Rev. W. C. Harris, P. C., Iuka, Miss., May 19: "We began our meeting on the fourth Sunday in April and continued two weeks. Bros. J. A. Rindolph and B. F. Phillips did most of the preaching. We did not have a sweeping revival; still it was a good meeting. With only a few exceptions the entire membership was forwarded in divine life. Eight joined the church. We feel encouraged, and are expecting a still greater outpouring of the Spirit."

Rev. I. T. Reames, Girard, La., May 16: "About ten days ago we closed a protracted meeting here, which was a feast to our souls. Five persons professed conversion, five united with the church, and the membership was greatly revived. Were assisted by Revs. H. O. White and Wm. G. Evans, both rendering earnest and efficient service. Truly 'the Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad.' 'We thank him and take courage.' Pray for us."

Rev. J. M. Johnston, Harrisonburg, May 16: "Our second Quarterly Conference was held last Saturday and Sunday to the satisfaction of the presiding elder and pastor in charge. Sunday was a day for the people of Sicily Island to turn out for church, and when they came, it was a time to listen to the preached Word by Bro. H. O White, judging from the attention given. In fact, I think I can say we have people who appreciate listening to the gospel; yet I fear there is not the attention given to the practice of its saving truths, as it requires, to enjoy its saving truth and power."

Rev. T. S. Randle, Opelousas, La., May 19: "We closed last Sabbath evening a twenty days' meeting at Belieview. The meeting commenced with our second Quarterly Conference, on April 26, and continued until the fifteenth of this month (May). Bro. Miller was with us two days, and did some of his best preaching, delighting all who heard him. Bro. Montgomery, of Washington, La., was with us eleven days, and did all the preaching during his stay. He is a good revivalist, preaches with power, is very earnest, and is a man of strong faith. There were twelve professions of conversion, eighteen accessions to the church, and the church greatly revived. 'Blessed be the name of the Lord!' He was with us in great power. To him be all the praise. We expect to commence a meeting here (Opelousas) in a few weeks. Pray for us, that we may gain a glorious victory."

Rev. W. L. Hamil, Bellevue, La., May 18: "The Valley work is moving on smoothly; the outlook is brightening as we progress. Two prayer meetings in successful operation. Organized five Sunday-schools since April; all doing good work. We give God the glory for the valuable results of a protracted service of one week, beginning the fifth Sunday in April. Sinners were convicted, mourners converted, Christians reconsecrated and six added to the church at this place. We are under many obligations to Bro. Jno. B. Williams for faithful services. It was Holy Ghost preaching by him that sent conviction to the heart, and caused Christians to rejoice. Pray for us, that the work committed to us may prosper. Finance is short all around."

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Lisbon, La., May 17: "Having exchanged appointments last week with my presiding elder, I had the pleasure of a visit to Pleasant Valley, in Webster parish, where once I was pastor. I met many of my old friends, but some had gone on to the land of rest. The Lord's cause is being looked after by the faithful pastor, Bro. Hamil, as well as by his devout officials, with much care. All the reports were good. Already the revival fire is burning at Bellevue. Several conversions and accessions to the church. The farmers, generally, are in a prosperous condition at Pleasant Valley, and the same good report comes up from the other appointments on the circuit. Passing through Minden, I found Bros. Medlock and Parker in a revival, with Prof. Pattison at the head of songs."

Rev. W. T. Griffin, Terry, Miss., May 12: "By the untiring energy of our members we have a long-needed new church; so we can use it and expect to complete it soon. The carpenters are still at work. Before the old one was torn down we were tendered the use of the Baptist Church, which we cheerfully accepted, for which we are under obligations to them, and hope in the near future to have the pleasure of returning the compliment, as they are making arrangements to build a new house of worship. Our work is moving upward. We expect a good attendance at District Conference, which convenes here soon. The people of Terry threw wide open their doors to all who may come, and those not used to such will have the pleasure of seeing lots of fruit and vegetables shipped (we eat the culls), as both crops are very promising."

Rev. H. M. Banks, Dry Creek charge, Louisiana Conference, May 9: "Our second quarterly meeting was held at Dry Creek on the sixth and seventh instant. Owing to the heavy rains, which put the creeks up very high, we were without our presiding elder; so you may know that we were very much at a loss, as it was the first Quarterly Conference ever held on my charge when the presiding elder was absent. While we were sadly disappointed by the absence of Bro. Davies, we were cheered and helped by the presence of Bro. John B. Kent, who preached us two very impressive sermons, and on Sunday, at three o'clock, led to the marriage altar Miss Delphine Miller, who is to be his life companion. May they live happily together in the service of God! The work is moving on nicely. We have good congregations and attentive hearers. One was added to the church at the quarterly meeting."

Rev. H. S. Johns, P. C., Algiers, La., May 22: "Yesterday was a high day with us—Children's Day. The superintendent, Bro. Frank A. Daniels, and his able assistants and teachers, with Miss Mamie Howe, the organist, had the programme carried out well. It was truly refreshing—aye, inspiring, to see our church full of people—over 200, I judge, being present. The church was beautifully decorated. The collection for needy Sunday-schools was $31 82. We were the banner church, in this respect, last year, our collection being $22 10. Now, I judge we shall have the honor again. We appreciate very much having it reported in the Minutes of our church sending up the largest collection for this noble cause of any in the Conference. But this is not our object. We shall willingly and gladly give the honor to others if they beat us in the collection. I thank God for health and strength. The work comes on nicely. Our Algiers Methodism is a live branch."

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, P. C., Franklinton, La., May 19: "We have just closed a very fine meeting here. We commenced the meeting the first Sunday in this month; Bro. W. W. Simmons, of Gloster, doing the preaching, save one sermon by our captain, P. A. Johnston, who preached on Wednesday at eleven A. M., and held our second Quarterly Conference. He said we were so well up, the presiding elder had but little to do. Bro. Simmons preached nine soul-stirring sermons, which resulted in eleven accessions to the church, quite a number of conversions, and the church wonderfully blessed. This revival influence is being felt on other parts of the work already. Bro. Simmons will do in a revival, for I have tried him for four years. Franklinton circuit stands to date as follows: Conference claimants paid in full; $10 week of prayer and self-denial; $10 special church extension fund; $10 for the support of Sister Lambuth; $10 domestic missions. The collections ordered by the Conference all in good subscription. Twenty-four accessions. Pastor's salary behind, but we fully expect a clean sheet at Conference."

Rev. J. R. Roy, P. C., Daisy P. O., Plaquemine parish, La., May 18: "We have not made any grand display, but, by the help of the Lord, we have been moving along smoothly. Have received six persons into the church by profession of faith; have baptized seven infants this year. Finances for presiding elder and preacher in charge are well up. On May 5 I commenced a protracted meeting at Wesley Church. I preached up to eleven o'clock Monday; then Bro. H. S. Johns, of Algiers, came to our rescue, and preached twice a day for one week. Preached to the profit of both pastor and people. Bro. Johns has endeared himself very much to this people. We had a good spiritual meeting. I think I am persuaded that the seed that was sown will germinate and bring forth fruit to the glory of God. Praise the Lord for what he has done for us! We did not have any additions to the church during the meeting. I suppose it was owing to the fact that nearly everybody in this neighborhood belongs to some church. One of the demonstrations of the good that was done is this: Our parsonage is in need of a cistern. Bro. Johns presented this fact to the people, and asked for twenty-five dollars. The people responded to the amount of twelve or thirteen dollars, and this is not quite all. They also gave two dollars and five cents to defray the preacher's expenses, and the good people then filled two oat sacks full of vegetables of various kinds, and presented them to Bro. Johns as an appreciation of his services. May the Lord bless Bro. Johns and send him back to preach for us again! Brethren, pray for us."

Rev. W. S Shipman, Greenwood, Miss., May 15: "Greenwood, as most of your readers know, is situated on the east bank of the Yazoo river, and at the crossing of the Georgia Pacific and Yazoo branch of the Illinois Central railway; a wide-awake and moving town of about 2,500 population. Methodism grows and does well in this as well as most of our Delta towns. Ours is the strongest out of the five Protestant denominations represented. Though we are having to contend for every inch of the ground now, other churches are moving the very heavens and earth to strengthen and build up their congregations; but there is something in Methodist ways and doctrine and move that seems to suit the masses. Oh, that she may steer clear of the dangerous shoal of worldliness! A faithful and courageous ministry will keep out the danger signals. When we fail, as a church, to do the work that God has for us to do, he, no doubt, will take our crown and put it on another, and ought to. Our church here at Greenwood I consider has been fortunate and blessed the past Winter and Spring, having been fortunate enough to have some of the best talent of the State to instruct us in things pertaining to the Master's kingdom. First, in January, when the earth was wrapped in snow, Miss Belle Kearney, of the W. C. T. U., found her way to our town and addressed an appreciative audience in the Methodist Church on the evils and curse of strong drink. Her eloquent and earnest words and strong argument abides with us still. Soon after Mrs. Mary Magee Snell, that gifted and saintly woman, who draws many to hear her words of wisdom and godly counsel, was with us. Strong men wept and sinners pleaded for mercy while she talked and when she asked who would try to lead a better life. If women talk and sinners are converted, who dare discourage them? If God approves their work, men can certainly stand it, especially those of us who rarely ever hear of a sinner crying for mercy when we preach, unless 'tis because we preach too long. We also had Dr. Price, of Water Valley, with us three weeks—one organizing and training our choir, and then with us in meeting two weeks. While results were not all we hoped for, yet we had a fine meeting. Church stirred profoundly, and moved to a higher life, and some of the hardest of sinners made to confess their sins and inquire for the way of salvation. Our Greenwood people hear Dr. Price with great relish and delight. His son, Dr. Claud Price, and Mr. Fred West were of great service to us in conducting and making music, for all of which we feel very grateful, and especially do we feel grateful for the sweet choir they left us. Voices that had been dumb for years are now attuned to the sweet songs of Zion. Miss Belle Kearney dropped in on us, on her way home from Greenville, last Tuesday night. The mention of her name in Greenwood draws a large crowd, and I'm sure they were richly rewarded. The memory of that beautiful, instructive, and religious address will live."

FRANKLIN AND JEANERETTE CHARGE.

We have just closed a seventeen days' meeting at Jeanerette, resulting in twenty-four accessions to the church, and probably an equal number of conversions. Our fifteen days' meeting in Franklin resulted in eleven accessions, and, perhaps, fifteen or twenty conversions. Received previously twelve. Total number received up to date this year, forty-seven. The church has been greatly quickened, and is now in good working order. Bro. C. A. Ellis, who has very recently located in New Iberia, did the preaching in both these meetings. Bro. Ellis has had a long experience as an itinerant preacher in the Arkansas and some of the Texas Conferences. He located last Winter to enter the evangelistic work, for which he seems to be eminently qualified, and I take pleasure in recommending Bro. Ellis to all the brethren who may need good and substantial help in their protracted meetings.

In order that there may be no misunderstanding, I will say that Bro. Ellis is what is generally termed a "second blessing sanctificationist" (and when he reads this he will say, "Glory to God!"); but, being a man of good hard sense, knowing my views on the subject, and understanding the situation here, he never uttered a word publicly (I will say nothing of our little private religious talks) that I could not endorse. His preaching is in demonstration of the Spirit and with power, without a particle of this latter-day nonsense, either in word or act. He uses his Bible well. His methods are purely Methodistic, and, therefore, successful.

Sister Ellis, his wife, was with him. She is fully consecrated; has an amiable disposition; very modest and untiring in her efforts to do good; a very effective worker among the ladies.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God, in his infinite love, has blessed our organization in the world, nation and State; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we renew our consecration to him, and endeavor to serve him better by wearing the Christian armor more faithfully.

Resolved, That we express our allegiance anew to our beloved president, Frances E. Willard, and that we will constantly cherish her in our hearts and remember her in our prayers.

Resolved, That members of our union be urged to constantly wear the white ribbon.

Resolved, That the W. C. T. U. of Mississippi, in annual convention, express their continued confidence in the management of the Temple, and their loving faith in Mrs. Carse as the originator of one of the most important enterprises ever undertaken by any woman, which assures to us in the near future an era of substantial financial power and honor, far exceeding any other agency ever offered for our support.

Resolved, That unions in all counties yet licensing the liquor traffic begin agitation at once to secure local option elections in such counties.

Resolved, That we have learned from experience that when the wicked rule the land mourns, and that we have reached the conviction that he serves God well who votes as he prays. Until men do this, iniquity will be enthroned by law and cities be built with blood. Therefore we entreat our men to vote the conscience ballot for home protection.

Resolved, That we formulate a petition to the governor of the State, requesting that in his proclamation for a special session of the Legislature to meet January, 1894 he name, among the subjects for their consideration at this special session, the submission of a constitutional amendment prohibiting forever the licensing of the liquor traffic in Mississippi.

Resolved, That we secure upon this petition the names of legislators, judges, lawyers, superintendents of public education, presidents and professors of colleges, and superintendents of asylums and penal institutions.

Resolved, That a superintendent be appointed, who shall at once begin the work of circulating this petition.

Resolved, That, as we have no present prospect of a State W. C. T. U. organ, we accept with thanks the generous offer of Messrs. Henry Ware and B. T. Hobbs of space in the Leader.

Resolved, That an agent be appointed by every local union in the State to get subscribers for the Leader.

Resolved, That the Mississippi W. C. T. U., in convention assembled here, will express their faithful services rendered by our retiring treasurer, Miss Zelle McLaurin, who has done the work much of the time under serious difficulty.

Useless Controversy.

It is one thing to let what light of truth there may be in us shine forth clearly and calmly—in other words, to state in simplest language our opinion—and quite another thing to enter on a more or less heated disputation in the vain attempt to teach somebody who has no desire to learn. Controversy is smoke, and serves to obscure the light. The winds of opposition have a tendency in most cases to root people more firmly in their own ideas. When others are deaf, it is just as well for us to be dumb; and nothing deafens more easily than arguing with a quick-tempered, ignorant, obstinate man or woman. He who is beguiled into it wastes his time, imperils his patience, and casts his pearls, if he has any, before an animal very poorly fitted to appreciate them. It is only a very few who are qualified for profitable debate. Hence, in nine cases out of ten, it is wise to decline the challenge and resist the temptation.—Zion's Herald.

THE NARROW WAY.

BY CHARLES N. SINNETT.

We slowly climbed the rugged mountain path,
Gray rocks around us gilt with darkling trees
The thunder echoed in its solemn wrath,
And wailed and sobbed the sympathetic breeze.

"The way is dark like narrow roads of life,"
One climber said, thinking of buried hopes;
When suddenly died out the storm's wild strife,
And glowed the sun across the mountain slopes.

The dark trees glistened on the solemn rocks,
The busy beams showed tufts of brilliant moss,
The flowers and ferns waved on their slender stalks,
Some leading out our upward way across.

"How bright the shine is in this shut up way," Spoke cheerily our hopeful little Joe;
"'Tis all kept in—it can not run away—
I'm glad we climbed here just to see it so!"

Is the Methodist Church Discriminated Against by the Revised Laws of Mississippi?

The new code (1892) in the section on religious societies, contains some rather peculiar provisions and provisions, which if not intended to discriminate against our church, should have been omitted.

Section 859, of said code, after providing how any religious society desiring to act as an organized body may do so, and sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, and hold and own property, goes on to insert this dubious and strange clause, to wit: "But the society so organized at each particular locality shall be a distinct and independent society."

Now, in order to fully appreciate this enactment, we must bear in mind a few well-settled principles of law, to wit: First. To take and hold the title to property the grantee must be either a natural or artificial person—a corporation. Second. No person or thing (corporation) can be a trustee or agent of property who or which could not be the grantee of the legal title (though there has heretofore been some difference in this respect, there is practically none now). Third. An ecclesiastical body, not being a natural person, if it holds the legal or beneficial title to property, must so hold as a corporation or quasi corporation. (Under the head of quasi-corporation are included churches holding property under such enabling acts as the one above cited—section 859 of code of 1892).

Now, how does the Methodist Church in Mississippi hold its large and valuable property? As a corporation? Then, where is your charter? and by what authority was it granted? Has the State of Mississippi issued to the Methodist Church a charter? If so, when? But it may be said that the title to a vast amount of our church property is conveyed in trust for the church—that is, that each church has elected certain of its members as trustees to receive and hold the title to the church property, and the title has been made to them in trust for the church. This brings us to the second legal proposition laid down at the beginning hereof, to wit: That unless the church has the legal capacity to take the legal title it can not be a legal trustee or agent of property; if it can not take the legal title, it can not take the beneficial interest. This being so, what would be done with and what would be the consequence of the vast amount of property which is conveyed to trustees for the benefit of the church? If the church is a legal corporation, or is included in an enabling act, of the character of the one just cited from the code of 1892, then she can be a legal cestuis que use or beneficiary of the legal title, which is conveyed to the trustees for her benefit. But if she is neither a corporation or a quasi-corporation she can derive no benefit from the conveyance to the trustees, and the words used purporting that the conveyance is to the trustees for the benefit of the church, will be held to be merely a descriptio personæ and the trustees will take the legal title, the whole and entire interest in the property discharged of the trust.

Now, we will not discuss the question as to whether or not the church holds its property by virtue of a charter—that is, as a corporation, because that matter can be settled by the production of the charter, if such charter is in existence. But we will confine our discussion to the question of whether or not the Methodist Church is or can be included in the section just cited from the code of 1892 of the State of Mississippi.

The qualification in the law is that "the society so organized at each particular locality shall be a distinct and independent society." Now, this qualification exactly applies to a Baptist Church or, perhaps, a Presbyterian Church, because each Baptist Church is, from the constitution of this church, a distinct and independent society at each particular locality. And in all probability a Presbyterian Church is a distinct and independent society at each particular locality. Therefore, the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches, being separate and distinct societies at each particular locality, are entitled to all the benefits of this law, and are by this law made and constituted quasi-corporations. The powers of these quasi-religious corporations are stated, the most important of which is to hold, own and possess property. This is a very important law, and, indeed, without it a church could hardly be said to exist, because a church must own a house of worship and the land whereon it is erected, and this right to hold and own property is given by this law, thereby impliedly stating that without this enabling act the church could not own its house of worship or other property, which it is permitted by this act to own. Now, is the Methodist Church included in this law? This depends on: First. Is a Methodist Church at each particular locality a distinct and independent society? Second. Can a Methodist Church, under its organic constitution as a church, be a separate and independent society at each particular place?

The words of this law are striking. To obtain the benefits of the law, each church must be distinct and independent. Independent! How can an individual church be in the sense of this law independent, and at the same time be a Methodist Church? Does not each church in the Methodist system belong to the Conference, and each Conference to the General Conference? Can a Methodist Church be independent of the Conference? Would not a Methodist Church cease to be such the moment it became independent of the Conference? It has been suggested that the Methodist Church, as a whole, could take the benefit of this law; that the whole church might come under the designation of any religious society. But the trouble is, that the condition imposed by this law is that the society so organized at each particular locality shall be a distinct and independent society. So we come back from whence we started, Can a Methodist Church at any particular place be a distinct and independent society? We think that further discussion of this question is useless.

Then, why this discrimination? Why insert this clause, "That the society organized at each place shall be a distinct and independent society." Why make a law and then insert a qualification which excludes nearly one-half of the church members of the State? The reasons that led to the passage of the ancient British statute of Mainmain have long since ceased. At this day, and especially in this country, we want no statute of Mainmain. There are no class of persons, except convicts, who are civiliter mortuus, hence there is no danger that property will pass into hands which can not reconvey it. Every person, who, under our laws, is competent to receive the title to property is also competent to convey that title. There is no danger and, in fact, no possibility of property passing into dead hands.

Religious bodies should be left as free to take and hold property, within the limits of their organization, as other bodies. But if a qualification must be thrown around their capacity to take and hold property within the purposes of their organization, then, pray do not insert a qualification which excludes the largest religious denomination in the State. We would ask, Why was this qualification inserted? Nothing could have been more pointed than this is. The framer of this statute had a clear idea of the nature and constitution of the leading denominations in this State. He knew well what would include one and exclude another, and by a carefully worded qualification he excludes the Methodist Church from the benefit of the act. No Methodist Church can hold property or do any other act by virtue of this law. The most powerful, intelligent and wealthiest church in the State is placed on a level with the mushroom religious growth of a night, with no power to hold property, to contract or be contracted with, and, in short, with no power to do any legal act whatever—merely a loose association of individuals—completely denominationalized. Things can not remain in this condition. At the next meeting of Legislature this qualification must be removed, and the Methodist Church—that glorious church whose mighty hosts swell the ranks of Prince Immanuel's army—shall be placed on a level with other churches before the laws and in the courts of the land.

LAYMAN OR SEXTUS.

A Needed Change in the Ritual for Infant Baptism.

"O merciful God, grant that the old Adam in this child may be so buried that the new man may be raised up in him." "O merciful God, grant that the old Adam in this child may be so crucified and buried that the new man may be raised up in him." Or I think still better: O merciful God, grant that this child may be baptized into Jesus Christ and into his death (by spiritual crucifixion), and that from the death of sin he may be raised to a newness of life in Jesus Christ our Lord.

It is well known that from the origin of the Methodist Episcopal Church to this day that immersionists have been strong opponents, if not enemies, to our churchism, on the ground of baptism, denying us the title of a Christian church, charging us with great unworthiness because of our indecision as to one mode of baptism. They also charge us with inconsistency, while we hold that pouring or sprinkling is the scriptural mode, and yet admit immersion and practice it. They have taken from us a great many who would have done better if they had remained with us. They still constantly aim to unsettle the minds of the uninformed, not only in our church, but of all others, by referring to what they choose to term our mistakes and inconsistency. In the absence of a clear understanding of the figures employed upon the subject of baptism, they say we connect the idea of burial with water baptism when baptizing the child. We say, "Grant that the old Adam in this child may be so buried that the new man may be raised up in him." The intelligent Christian, of course, knows that the idea of death-burial and resurrection is drawn from the figure of the cross as a baptism, and not from the water; yet the uninformed are easily misled, and especially in religious matters, substituting ignorance for mystery.

That there are three forms of baptism in the Bible no intelligent Christian will deny. They are water, the cross, and fire. These figures carry essential truths that can be seen only as you hold the figure before the mind. The water conveys the idea of cleansing by washing, and appeals to the sprinkled blood. The cross conveys the idea of death-burial and resurrection, appealing to the spiritual baptism by which we become partakers of Christ's nature, and, at the same time and in the same experience, be partakers of his death and resurrection. This could not be taught from the water, nor could it be learned from any other figure. Hence our Lord, when referring to the spiritual baptism to be had daily ever after the Christian life is begun, said to his apostles, and to all others who would become true Christians, "Ye shall drink, indeed, of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with." (Matt. xx, 23.) Likewise Paul, referring to the same experience of a genuine work of the Holy Ghost, says, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" This is no formal baptism, but a spiritual one, and the lesson is drawn from the figure of baptism on the cross, to which our Lord referred in Matt. xx, 22, 23; Luke xii, 50, and to which Paul refers in Rom. vi, 3-6; Col. ii, 11-13.

Now, since inspired men and our Lord clearly referred to the baptism of the cross, I say let us be clear in our ritual. Let the baptism of crucifixion, as an associate form with the water and fire, come boldly and forcibly to the mind of the subject and audience. The fire appeals to the Word of God applied by the Holy Ghost, by which ignorance is removed, and thereby sin from the heart and life. John said of Christ that "he would baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire," meaning that the Holy Ghost, using the Word of God, would consume ignorance and sin, and turn the foot of man in this path of light. That God's Word is as fire see Malachi iv, 1; I. Cor. iii, 13-15, and various other places.

Christian Practice.

Every true Christian has not only repented of all his sins and has been renewed in heart, but he has wholly surrendered himself to a life of physical, mental and spiritual activity for God and for the good of his fellowbeings, and, we may add, for his own good, too, and, therefore, in order to the success of such a life, he has to regulate his activities by those laws, the observance of which will ultimate in the object desired. We are not to understand by this, however, that he is to be the originator, or even the judge, of those laws, for from a human standpoint some of them savor of too great harshness, while others appear unreasonable, and hence the failure, and the everlasting failure, of those who fabricate and observe laws of their own liking. The true laws of human life find their origin with God, and, therefore, when they are rightly observed they make sin appear as a deadly poison and as a mighty monster. They are a mighty rebuke to sin, and hence the company of those who observe them as they should is not sought by those who love sin. This is why Christ did not capture the world, especially the Jews, during his stay in the world; his life and his teachings were too harsh for those who loved sin. And yet no man ever lived who possessed more meekness and tenderness than Christ. The practice of foregoing certain laws of Christian life in order to be popular with the godless, is false in principle and, therefore, un-Christlike. The world can never be won to Christ truly by such a course, for there is no Holy Ghost in it, and without the Holy Ghost dead and fruitless is every effort to save men as they should be saved.

A person who is popular with the disloyal and godless, the lovers of sin, is himself disloyal and godless. He may not appear to be in every respect, it is true, but, nevertheless, he has compromised a vital principle of the blessed religion he claims to possess in order to be popular with those who, in a sense, hate God. It should be the practice of everyone to be popular with God all the time, and he should endeavor daily to become more and more popular with him, and then and not till then will he be rightly adjusted to the world and to his fellowmen, generally. Our popularity with the world will not save them. By it we may get them in the church and keep them there as long as we ourselves are loose in religious living like themselves, but we will never get them to love God supremely and to hate sin so that they will shun it as a deadly thing. We are not only to live in such a way before God that our lives shall be a mighty rebuke to sin, but there are circumstances under which we should rebuke it with all the boldness of Paul when he said to the high priest, "God shall smite thee, thou whited wall" (Acts xxiii, 3), or as he commanded Titus when he said, "Rebuke with all authority" (Titus ii, 15), or, "Rebuke them sharply." (Titus i, 13). Let us avoid that sweetness that smiles at sin and incites to its toleration in order to be popular. Let us hate intentional violation of the laws of God, Church and State, and let us endeavor to impress the violators that while we love them, and that we are sorry that they have thus done, and that we will do what is honorable and right to restore them, that we will not shield them an iota in their evil practices. "The servant is not greater than his Lord. If they have persecuted me they will also persecute you; if they have kept my sayings, they will keep yours also." (John xv, 20.) "And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." (Job i, 19.)

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

Enterprise, Miss.

The Preacher a Tax Gatherer.

MR. EDITOR: I was much pleased with your editorial on money matters, a few issues back. I am in favor of the church having money to meet all laudable demands. We are, as a people, too slow to realize our obligations to God and his church, financially, and but few, if any, pay more than they ought to pay, for a man's ability is the measure of his obligation, and few come up to their ability. But it is very certain to my mind that we have too many collections to bring before our people annually, and thereby discourage them in a great measure rather than stimulate them to give.

Now, it is expected that these collections be taken separately, and we have heard some preachers receive mild reprimands from the chair of an Annual Conference for mixing their collections. But let us take an inventory of the annual collections to be taken by the preacher. Of course, the stewards are expected to collect the salaries of presiding elder and pastor in charge. Then sometimes they call on the preacher to make a "short talk" for them in behalf of these collections. But it is expected of the preacher in charge to take the following collections: Bishops' fund, Conference fund, church extension fund, foreign missions, domestic missions, education, Bible cause, publishing Minutes, and expenses for delegates to the General Conference (once or twice every four years). Here are nine regular collections that the preacher is expected to come before his congregations with every year. Suppose he should take these collections separately in his circuit congregations where he preaches once a month. There would be nine Sundays at each appointment, out of eleven or twelve Sundays in the year, that he would be before his congregations with a collection. Would his people stand it? Now, add to these all the special collections, such as missionary debt, Children's Day, Epworth Leagues, now and then an agent for some college, Scarritt Bible Training-school, or Easter Day, Parsonage Aid Society and Woman's Missionary Society, and we have about fifteen collections brought before our congregations every year. But some one will say, "These last three belong to the women." True; and the women belong to the congregation also. Beside, a great deal of their money comes from the pockets of the men—at least, this is both my observation and experience.

Now, if it is necessary to have and raise all these collections, can there not be some plan instituted by which the preacher could be relieved of these great duties? I am certain it injures his usefulness as a successful preacher. If the people submit to it, how can he preach successfully in winning souls for Christ, whose mind is constantly harassed with money matters? If he fails in the public congregation, in his pastoral visits from house to house it is money talk nearly all the time. In his private devotions it is: "Lord, help me to get my collections. Put it into the hearts of the people to pay." He don't have much time to talk about and pray over spiritual matters. He has no chance to talk up, or preach up, or pray up a revival among his people, and so the spiritual is lost to the temporal prosperity of the church, and, in fact, in a great measure his character and standing for usefulness is measured from a financial success rather than a spiritual success. I fail to see how a preacher whose mind is crammed full of money all the year round can preach successfully on the new birth or experimental religion; his heart set on his collections, therefore full of the temporal. How can he be full of the Holy Ghost, which is so necessary to his power with God and man? As these temporal burdens are laid upon the preacher's heart and shoulders, just in that proportion does he lose his opportunity for successful religious work among his people. I fear we are much hindered in our work by too much organization. Every organization demands an additional collection, and it seems that the church, in her organized capacity, is insufficient for the work before her, so we must have these side tracks; but it seems that some people will work with more energy on the side track than the main line; consequently, "our society."

"Look ye out seven men of good report," in each work, "to look after this matter." Not seven societies, and one overcrossed preacher to do the work for these societies. Pay all we can to the cause of Christ. Loose the preacher from tax gathering; let him preach for the salvation of souls.

That Sabbath Resolution.

SOME 'NON SEQUITURS."

In the article under the above caption, published in the ADVOCATE, of April 20, and criticised by two in the last (May 11):

1. There is not an expression or intimation of opinion as to whether or not a minority of a deliberative body is pledged to the acts of a majority. The critic himself admits, "that in their views the minority might not agree with the majority."

2. There is not an expression or intimation as to who voted for or against the Sabbath resolution, or who was silent on its passage.

3. There is not an expression or intimation of opposition to a resolution of Conference endeavoring to enforce a faithful observance of the Sabbath, either at the time of its passage, or afterwards.

4. There is no expression or intimation of admission that it is wrong to go to Conference on Sunday, or that it is not wrong to use the Sabbath trains to go anywhere else on Sunday, though not in cases of necessity.

5. There is not a word or syllable expressing views on the observance of the Sabbath as a great moral and religious duty.

There is absolutely no opinion or view expressed or intimated on any of these subjects. All the expression or intimation in the whole article is that certain things are not so because other things are so. That however true in themselves they may be, they are not true because other things are true. It was simply a sort of logical effort to help a good brother, who seemed to have gotten into trouble by a sort of logical process.

In our criticisms of others I reckon there is often a want of consideration, sometimes a lack of conception, and, it may be, occasionally, an absence of conscience, and we involve ourselves in errors, and commit wrongs that are far more harmful than those we seek to correct and remedy. Then, again, we are always loaded. We go loaded for particular game, and we fire at the sound of the least rustling, whether there is any game there or not.

R. J. JONES.

The Reason Why.

MR. EDITOR: I note in our ADVOCATE, of eleventh instant, that in giving partial list of episcopal appointments for this year, you say of the Mississippi and Louisiana: "Why these two were appointed to begin on Thursday instead of Wednesday we do not know." I may be able to suggest the reason. At last session of our (Mississippi) Conference, we unanimously passed a resolution requesting our college of Bishops to change the day for holding the Conferences from Wednesday to Thursday. In heeding this request (which was forwarded to them at Kansas City), so far as our own Conference was concerned, they, or Bishop Key, thought it expedient to put Louisiana Conference for following week on similar day of the week. This, for obvious reasons, we could wish that all the Conferences and Bishops were of same mind. Why so? do you ask. It has been found by actual experience that a large number of our under-graduates and committeemen for examining these, in order to be in place by Monday night or Tuesday morning (as in duty bound) must either leave their works prior to Sunday preceding Conference, or use public conveyances for travel on the Lord's Day. With what show of sincerity can we by resolution, sermon or advice pronounce against that crying evil of the day while we continue thus to profane the Sabbath. But why not go or start before Sunday? We all must or should stay at Conference one Sunday. To be absent two successive Sabbaths is a serious drawback, specially at that season of the year. Then many have no "half-way home," nor do they feel welcome to drop in on the most hospitable host two days before they are naturally expected. Another subordinate, but cogent reason we had in mind is that by beginning on Thursday our Conference Sunday will fall right in the heart (where most needed) instead of on the eve of adjournment. As lately carried on, the appointments are booked for some time Monday. They often have been mapped out by Saturday night. Then begins the leakage. So our Sabbath, instead of being a season of rest and spiritual joy and edification, becomes a time of feverish inquiry and excitement as to where this brother is "sent," or why that brother is to be "removed," etc. While we do not hope the change of day will entirely correct this, we do expect and pray for large and good results in this direction. At all events, it is practically certain to prevent the adjournment of Conferences on Saturday night and the consequent rush toward home on Sunday. Why should laymen fail to rush home from St. Louis, Chicago, etc., on Sunday, when their business is over, if their pastors are in the habit of going to or returning from their special business appointment. It will take echo long to answer why. Yours for Sabbath observance, by preachers first of all.

In Answer to "What Next?"

In the first place, the clipping from the Yazoo City Herald is not true. The entertainment was not given for the benefit of the church; but for the building of a parsonage under the supervision of Messrs. H. B. Keith and S. Castleman. Now, be it understood that Mr. Castleman does not represent the Methodist Church in Belzoni, nor is he a member of any church; but a warm friend of the Methodists, and gave the entertainment without being supported or even encouraged by the church.

It is known that the church did not acquiesce in this matter, but denounced it as sinful, base and diabolical, and as the church is not responsible for the acts of the world, she does not propose to interfere with those who are not within her pales.

As Bro. Burton seems to think I must have been asleep or off on a spree, I will say that I was about fifteen miles from the dance, preaching the gospel and minding my own business, just as he was or should have been doing. The parsonage for which the dance was given is now nearing completion, and I will soon have the pleasure of resting my weary limbs in a neat little cottage, with the consciousness that no unfair means were used nor the rules of the church violated in building it.

Help Needed.

MR. EDITOR: Will you allow me space in your valuable paper to ask the readers to assist in a good cause. One of the oldest Methodist Churches in all this part of the country has not been blown down, neither has it been consumed by fire; but age has done its work, and we are out of doors. To rebuild we must have some help, as the success of Methodism in this part of the vineyard of the Lord depends largely upon the erection of a new house of worship. We can not be comfortable in the house we have either Winter or Summer, hence the congregation during the Winter runs down for the want of comfort, and in search of the same the people go somewhere else to worship, and as the preacher's time is taken up in building up a congregation. Our sister church has a comfortable house, and we must have or suffer. Will each subscriber to the ADVOCATE send as much as fifty cents to Miss Mamie Young, Hermanville, Miss., to assist in this good work. This much will enable us to rebuild, with what we can raise at home, and we are not idle.

INTRODUCTORY.

The chapter from which our lesson is taken probably formed no part of the original collection of proverbs at Solomon, but was added subsequently. It consists of two parts: the counsels of the queen mother to her son, King Lemuel (vs. 1-9), and the description of the excellent woman (vs. 10-31) the latter being the lesson for the day. Whether or not the description of the excellent woman is a continuation of the counsels of the mother to her son is uncertain, though it is probable that it is the work of a different hand—a separate and independent poem, appended to the Book of Proverbs, to guard against its being lost, to which a short a poem would be especially liable. The fact that in the Septuagint the first nine verses of the chapter, together with the whole of chapter xxx, are placed after the twenty-fourth chapter, this poem standing alone at the close of the twenty-ninth chapter, would seem to favor this view. The poem is an alphabetical acrostic, its twenty-two verses beginning successively with the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet. As a description of an excellent woman, it may have been written in honor of some particular woman, though it seems more probable that the picture is an ideal one. It is a beautiful and worthy tribute, and shows the honorable position occupied by the Jewish women. We have no right to make the duties, for the faithful performance of which she is praised, the test and standard of womanly employment to-day; but the character portrayed is worthy of emulation by the women of every age. Christianity holds up the ideal of a noble womanhood, and makes its realization possible. An exalted woman is the child of our holy faith alone, and the woman who repudiates Christ is a miracle of moral obliquity and the final demonstration of human depravity.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—THE GOOD WIFE.

Ver. 10. As elsewhere in the Book of Proverbs, this word "virtuous" means more than "chaste;" it means an excellent, a worthy woman, a woman of force, energy, capacity, executive ability. Nor does the question, "Who can find," etc., imply that such a woman can not be found. Such women there are, but they are not found every day, and when found they are to be appreciated, for they are more valuable than the most costly gems.

Ver. 11. With perfect confidence in her practical wisdom, her prudent management of affairs, her husband is inspired to cheerful and earnest labor, and in his home there is no lack of the spoil—the rewards—of honest toil.

Ver. 12. The confidence of her husband is worthily bestowed; for her wise management and loving sympathy "will do him good and not evil all the days of her life." His interests are hers; and her loyal love will bring to bear all the forces of her well-rounded character upon the securing of his truest good.

II.—THE INDUSTRIOUS HOUSEKEEPER.

Ver. 13. She is an industrious woman, delighting to collect the wool from the herd and the flax from the field—the materials for clothing and other household uses.

Ver. 14. She is a provident woman, gathering from every source the goods needed in her household. She does not limit her comforts to the things raised at home, but secures by purchase or exchange the commodities sold by the merchants.

Ver. 15. She is an early riser, leaving her bed before the dawn of day to prepare the morning meal for her family and servants, and to assign to her maidens their daily tasks. Her work does not drive her, she drives her work.

III.—THE CAPABLE MANAGER.

Ver. 16. Her energies are not circumscribed by the walls of her home; she sees her opportunity to make a good investment and takes advantage of it, and from the savings of her industry and economy she plants a vineyard. This verse is indicative of the wide field of womanly activity under the Jewish kings.

Ver. 17. She is a strong and sensible woman. By active exercise she preserves her health and strength, and is always "girt" and ready for vigorous and energetic labor.

Ver. 18. She is a conscientious woman, seeing to it that the products of her skill and the produce of her farm are of superior quality, and, when the necessity demands, her tireless energies prolong her labors into or through the night.

IV.—THE CHARITABLE NEIGHBOR.

Ver. 19. She not only sets before her maidens their tasks, but by her own example inspires them to industry and trains them to skill. The spindle and the distaff were the most ancient implements for spinning thread.

Ver. 20. Her untiring industry and thrifty habits are not indicative of avarice or covetousness; she loves these virtues for their own sakes, and not for love of gain. Her thrifty hand is outstretched to the poor, and from her well-filled stores the wants of the needy are supplied.

Ver. 21. The unusual snow, that so severely tries the poor, and the improvident has no fears for her, for the inmates of her home are protected by clothing at once comfortable and attractive. The word "scarlet" is thought by some to signify "double garments." Thus Coverdale quaintly says: "For all his household folkes are duble clothed."

V.—AN HONOR TO HER HUSBAND.

Ver. 22. She is a woman of culture and refinement. Her rooms are adorned with tapestry, and embroidered carpets and cushions add to the comfort and beauty of her home, while she herself is clothed in fine linen, costly and white, and in purple, as befits her station. (Silk, it is said, was not known at this time outside of China.)

Ver. 23. That the husband of such a woman should be "known in the gates" is not surprising. If worthy of his wife, he would be a notable man; and whether her equal or not, in this will she "do him good," that the very excellence of her character will foster and develop the best that is within him, and he will be all the more favorably known for being the husband of such a wife.

Ver. 24. That a woman surrounded with prosperity and comfort, the rewards of her frugality and toil, should continue to labor with her own hands is remarkable. She was no idler; she worked because she loved to work and because it was right to work. The soft, white, gauzy linen was used for the undergarments, and the curiously wrought and elaborately ornamented girdles were necessary to bind about the body the flowing outer garments.

VI.—THE WISE COUNSELLOR.

Ver. 25. Not with purple and fine linen only is this excellent woman clothed; but with becoming dignity and honor is she robed as with a garment, and with cheerful confidence she looks forward to the days that are to come. The future has no fears for her.

Ver. 26. Wise in work, she is also wise in word. Wisdom adds its charm to womanly dignity, and a gracious, kindly heart sets its crown upon the queenly woman. It is not improbable that the word "law" here carries with it its usual idea of the divine law, and that the thought meant to be conveyed is that God's revealed law of loving kindness is "in her tongue."

Ver. 27. These higher gifts do not hinder the exercise of the humbler virtues. She carefully superintends, even at the cost of personal labor and fatigue, the affairs of her home, instructing, reproving or commending her children and her servants as the need may be.

VII.—THE GOD-FEARING WOMAN.

Ver. 28. This section gives us a fitting close to this beautiful poem. She stands before us the recipient of the loving testimony of those who know her best, and the secret of her exalted character and successful life is revealed to us. Her children arise in filial reverence to do her honor, and her husband gives utterance to grateful and affectionate praise.

Ver. 29. "Among the daughters of men there are many noble and true, but thou excellest them all." No words of praise could say more, and the loving husband could not say less.

Ver. 30. Favor and beauty are charms of form and face, and we know not what may be hidden beneath them; but a God-fearing spirit is the ornament of the soul. It is the jewel within the casket. Safe from the blight of accident or disease, and the invidious touch of age, it smiles at these things and transforms them into means of increasing loveliness.

Ver. 31. The picture is finished and a prayer alone is added. What shall we ask for her? "Crown her with the laurel and the bay, and let the ivy and the palm proclaimed her glory?" No. "Give her the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates."

Foreign Missions.

BY R. M. M'GEHEE.

[A paper read before the Woodville District Conference at Centreville, Miss., April 27, 1893, and published by request of the District Conference.]

How many of us appreciate the fact that the divine injunction, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," is as applicable to each of us to-day as when addressed by our Lord to his disciples. If the Methodist Church, South, was disposed to compare her work in the foreign fields with that of some of her sister churches, she might find grounds for self-complacency; but we are told that "they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise." We must aim to see ourselves as we appear in the sight of God. It should never be forgotten that in the last day the condemnation of many of those who are cast off to the left of the Judge will be for the sin of neglect.

No words can express the infinite pity and sorrow with which our Lord looks down on the people of this world who are ignorant and out of the true way. Of the 1,400,000,000 now on the earth, after all that has been done in preaching the gospel to the heathen, more than 800,000,000 have not heard the message of salvation. The man who looks on this spectacle, and then can close his heart and his pocket-book (if there is anything in it), "how say you, dwelleth the love of God in him?" What right has that fossil to bear the name of Christ?

The churches and missionary societies of the United States, Great Britain, Canada, Germany and Continental Europe have, according to the summary given by the American Board, 8,472 missionaries in the foreign field, and the amount contributed for foreign missions, in one year, $14,588,354, and yet in Thibet, with a population of, perhaps, six million, the natives use hand prayer mills, similar to coffee mills, with which they grind out prayers to a chunk of wood, while they lie supinely on their backs with their faces illuminated with a grin that would make some of our close-fisted psalm singers shudder.

The emergency has arisen in the foreign mission work of our church which calls for energetic effort and liberality such as have never been known before among us.

The Rev. Maurice Phillips, of Madras, writes: "The painful part of the work among the educated classes in India is that the only organized opposition which Christianity has yet had to meet has been from the efforts of Hindu graduates of our universities. They remain as bigoted and as bitter against the gospel as the most ignorant village 'goora.' The Hindu Tract Society has for its president a graduate of the Madras University. His creed is most violent and idolatrous."

The divine injunction still applies: "Sell that ye have, and give alms, provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth," for "my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

A father, not long ago, at a valedictory missionary meeting, said, in reference to his daughter, who was going to the mission field, "I have nothing too precious to give to Jesus."

"Nothing too precious to give to Jesus!"
O faithful, rejoicing soul;
Nothing too precious to bring as tribute
To him who hath made thee whole.

"Nothing too precious to give to Jesus!"
Lord, look on thy servant's heart;
Give grace for thy cause to win the children,
Then strength—at thy call—to part!

"Nothing too precious to give to Jesus!"
Lord, let it be even so;
Talents, time, health, our gold and our dearest,
All at thy feet laid low.

"Nothing too precious to give to Jesus!"
Hush! listen! for lips divine
Make answer: "Son, thou art ever with me,
And all that I have is thine."

THE WORLD'S FAIR

And American Railways.

THE QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE, widely known as the road running the "Finest Trains in the South," is in the field to carry everybody from the South to the World's Fair at Chicago. No part of the Southern country is left uncared for by this great railway and its connections. The Through Car System is an admirable exposition of the wonderful capabilities of American railroading. From New Orleans Through Sleeping Cars run daily, morning and evening, carrying its passengers via Cincinnati or Louisville as they may select.

From Shreveport, Vicksburg and Jackson another Through Sleeping Car Line comes to join and become a part of the magnificent Vestibuled Through Trains, which passing through Birmingham and the famous Wills Valley of Alabama, is joined at Chattanooga by the train from Jacksonville, Fla., Brunswick, and Atlanta, Ga., over the E. T. V. & Ga. Ry., and proceeds north over the beautiful Cincinnati Southern, through the grandest natural scenery and most attractive historical country in the world, to Oakdale, where another magnificent Pullman car is received, coming from the Richmond & Danville System from Charleston, S. C., through Columbia, S. C., the beautiful French Broad country, and Ashville, N. C., and Knoxville, Tenn.

The time to Chicago is made so as to afford the most convenient hours for departures from the principal cities, and arrivals in Chicago.

Passengers can purchase tickets good over one line north of the River, and returning via another if they desire a variable route without extra charge. Or they can go via Cincinnati, returning via Louisville, or vice versa.

Round-trip tickets on sale at reduced rates. Agents of the Chicago line will on request assist in looking up rooms or accommodation for visitors to the Fair.

Everything that an almost perfect system can devise to deserve the praise and patronage of the traveling public has been provided. BRIEFS.

"Stand for the right! Humanity
Implores with groans and tears
Thine aid to break the fettering link
That binds her toiling years.
Stand for the right!
Though falsehood reigns,
And proud lips coldly sneer;
A poisoned arrow can not wound
A conscience pure and clear."

The table of seventeen members of the Methodist family shows that it numbers 51,489 organizations, 46,138 church edifices, with a seating capacity of 12,863,178, and valued at $132,140,179, and 4,589,287 communicants.

We have received the prospectus of the Standard Dictionary of the English Language, now being prepared by the ablest and most erudite English scholars, and to be published by Funk & Wagnalls, of New York. We have examined these pages, and hesitate not to say that if all the work is done in the same manner, it will be a most superb dictionary. It is characterized by a thoroughness which is exceedingly rare. It will contain many more words than any dictionary extant. The illustrations are very fine. It is the cheapest of all. To see it is to want it, while to possess it is to have the mastery of our mother tongue.

"Christians are surely responsible for the desecration of the Sabbath to the extent of their ability to prevent it. In 1886 there was one communicant to 4 8 of the population of the United States; one evangelical church to 518 souls; one minister to 692 souls. Who can estimate the power of such a body to prevent Sabbath desecration, if only united and loyal to the gospel of Christ? It seems to me perfectly clear, therefore, that what the Sabbath reform requires is an awakening of Christian principle, an arousing of Christian conscience and devotion on the part of the people at large, and especially in the bosom of the church."—Advance.

The Supreme Court having passed favorably upon the constitutionality of the Geary law, it now seems that there will be trouble in several different quarters. In the first place, the government finds itself without money to execute the law—that is, means to deport the Chinese who have refused to register back to China. It will take quite a sum to carry the Celestials back. In the second place, there is strong talk of retaliation on the part of the Chinese government. In that case every American, it is said, will be driven out of the Chinese Empire. That means an utter destruction of American Christian missions in China. Thus there seems to be trouble brewing. The President will have to wait for Congress to vote him the money to carry out the law, and while he is waiting there is an uneasiness as to what the Chinese government will do.

The Ruston Chautauqua begins its second session, June 21, at Ruston, La., and will continue six weeks. There will be popular addresses, lectures by eminent specialists and eloquent platform speakers.

The Old Men—The Young Men.

An editor is often interrupted with an intelligent and pleasant and profitable interruption. In that case, if his liver is not out of order, he blesses those who interrupt the everlasting humdrum of office routine. We had such a blessedness last week. Two preachers—one from the M— and the other from the L— Conference—met in our office. Preachers, in one respect, are like ordinary mortals: they like to talk about their business, and it was not long before these two brethren began to talk about preaching. They are men who occupy good positions in their respective Conferences and stand in the space betwixt the young preachers and the old preachers, about midway. They not only occupied this space, but their conversation soon showed that each had been scanning closely both ends of the line. Each had been looking back at the young men behind him, and forward at the old men before him, and had been comparing the results of the work done by young and old.

One said that it appeared to him that the old preachers were not doing as vigorous and solid work as the young preachers; at least, the visible and tangible results of the ministry of the older men were not as great as those of the ministry of younger men. It seemed to him that the old men were weakening in their faith in God and his gospel; that they had seen so much of trouble and disappointment, so much of the deceitfulness of the human heart and so much of the hypocrisy of human life, that it had the effect to weaken their power in wielding the gospel weapons. He thought it ought to be the other way. The more a man learns of God and his redeeming grace, the stronger he ought to be in faith and the more effective ought his ministry to be. But his observation led him to the conclusion above stated—that the old men were not as effective as the young men. He said, however, that, as for himself, he had much more profit from the ministry of the old men. Their preaching built him up.

The other brother took square issue with all this except the last statement. He contended that the old preachers were doing as good work in the ministry as the young ones, and, in many cases, a far better work. It was just what they ought to do, because of larger experience and wider range of knowledge, and in his Conference they were doing it. He brought forward several examples of old men doing grand work in building up the kingdom of God. He did not discount the work of the younger men at all; thought it excellent, and that it gave fine promise of what they would do when they got to be old.

We were very much entertained by this conversation, and it suggested some reflections. Here were too observing men, in different sections, looking over the church work, and making comparisons as to the efficiency of the workers and arriving at almost opposite conclusions. They were both in position favorable to the study of the subject, and yet they did not agree. This suggests to us the possibility that each conclusion is true in part, and in part defective. Our observation is that time alone can never make an effective minister. There are some old ministers who are ineffective today because they were always ineffective. They never formed habits of industrious and painstaking study in their young days, and now they can not or do not acquire such habits, and they find themselves in their old days without capital with which to work. Where such habits have been formed in youth and adhered to till old age, you find a man thoroughly equipped and marching with enthusiastic tread abreast of any young man to be found. These are the effective old preachers of to-day, and they were the effective young preachers of the past. Bishop Keener says a "preacher can never acquire capital enough to go out of business." Earnest and faithful study of God's Word not only puts a man in communication with the fountain of spiritual knowledge, but puts him in contact with spiritual life, and spiritual life never grows old. Spiritual knowledge and spiritual life make up spiritual power, and where this is, whether with young men or old men, there will be an effective ministry. We do not believe that the effectiveness of any man's ministry depends upon his age in years. It depends upon his faith in God and his use of the weapons God puts in his hands.

Is He on Trial?

We speak of receiving a preacher "on trial;" but is he really on trial? In some things he is, in some things he is not. He is allowed to preach, but he is not allowed to perform the marriage rite, nor to baptize, nor to administer the Lord's Supper. He is hampered right at these points, and, in some instances, it is of vital importance that he be authorized to do these things. We allow him to do the greatest of all things—preach the gospel—but forbid him to do lesser things. If the greater includes the less, then we are inconsistent. The brother is not really on trial. This ought to be remedied by the next General Conference. We are in entire accord with Dr. Glenn, in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, when he says on this subject:

There has been considerable inconvenience and hindrance to our work as a church because of the necessity for having unordained preachers in charge of circuits, stations and missions. The trouble is apparent, the remedy is not so clear. But why not take another step in the same direction that we have gone in other things? For instance, a preacher applying for membership in an Annual Conference is received on trial for two years. During those two years he exercises all the functions of a member of the Conference except in the right to vote and a few other minor matters. In all essential work he is recognized as a member of the Conference, and his acts are recognized as official. We also take a man on trial for two and four years for the office of deacon and elder, requiring that he compass a course of study and prove himself worthy. Why not allow him to exercise the office of a deacon and elder during his probation, as in the above case, and then at the end of the periods, if he is found worthy, ordain him formally for permanent work? This would be in harmony with the idea of probation, and at the same time obviate most of the difficulty under which we now labor.

The Institute for the Blind.

Through the kindness of Dr. Magruder, the principal of the above-named institution, located at Baton Rouge, we have received an invitation to attend a "musicale" given by the inmates. We regret that we could not attend, for we would have enjoyed the occasion; but we are moved to say a few words in regard to this institute. We have on several occasions visited it, and always came away with mind full of wonder and pleasure. We wonder that blind people can be taught so much, and are pleased to find those willing to devote themselves to the task of lightening the burdens of that unfortunate class. In Dr. Magruder's Institute they are taught the ordinary and extraordinary branches of education and also various kinds of handicraft. In learning these things the blind really become self-supporting. Besides this, they are taught, that best of all sciences to blind people, music. They become adepts in this "art divine." We heard from the orchestra of the institute pieces rendered in a manner which would have done credit to some "far famed bands."

The grounds around the institute are lovely, and everything within the walls speaks of wise and thoughtful supervision. Dr. Magruder has an able corps of experienced teachers, and the work they are doing rises like a sweet incense to heaven.

If any of our preachers or other readers in Louisiana have knowledge of any blind children, Dr. Magruder will take it as a special favor if they will communicate their whereabouts to him at Baton Rouge.

Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University.

The new catalogue of the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University has been received. Fifty-three ministerial students have been enrolled during the current year. These students come from twenty-two of the Conferences of the church, and represent sixteen Southern colleges and universities. There are twenty-five free scholarships of the value of $100 each. These have been held this year by the graduates of Randolph-Macon College, Emory and Henry, Roanoke, University of Virginia, University of North Carolina, Wofford College, Emory College, Georgia; Southern University, Alabama; Tulane University, Southwestern University, Kentucky Wesleyan, University of Tennessee, and other institutions. These scholarships cover the cost of board in Wesley Hall, which, with tuition and room rent free, puts it within the power of every young minister of the church to take a post-graduate course of biblical and theological study at the Vanderbilt University if he desires to do so. The course of study, embracing exegetical, doctrinal, historical, homiletical and pastoral theology, elocution, and local music, is well adapted to the wants of those preparing for the ministry of the M. E. Church, South.

Among those enrolled are Rev. B. M. Drake, an A. B. graduate of Centenary College, and Rev. Thomas Carter, an A. B. graduate of Tulane University.

The Raging River.

The floods are again pouring down upon our people. The river is high all the way up and down. Four crevasses in Arkansas and one on the Lafourche in Louisiana have been reported. The breaks in Arkansas will very seriously affect large portions of Louisiana. The flood of waters pouring down Boeuf river and Bayou Macon will submerge large parts of Carroll, Madison, Tensas, Concordia and Catahoula parishes and utterly destroy the crops, for it is now too late to count on anything being raised after the waters subside. There will also be serious interference with the church work in the Delhi district; so serious, indeed, that it will almost come to a standstill. How the people are to bear this overflow we do not see. Repeated overflows and short crops have brought many of them down to the lowest condition financially, and how they are to secure subsistence is a very grave problem. Our brethren in the Delhi district have our sympathy, and if we knew what to do to help them in their trouble we would gladly do so.

If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal minds, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of our fellow-men, we engrave on those tablets something that will brighten to all eternity.—Daniel Webster.

A Portending Social Revolution.

There is in this city an organization of very intelligent women given to thinking and reading on subjects of sociology, political economy and other matters which engage the attention of statesmen and philanthropists. This organization is the Portia Club, named from the celebrated female doctor of laws who figures so brilliantly in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice."

This club connects the discussion of such subjects with literary and musical recitations, and altogether its exercises are of a high class. It is given out that within a few days past the Portia Club held a discussion concerning the influence upon civilization and social life of the extensive introduction of women into wage-earning occupations. It further appears that a decision had upon the subject was that such a state of affairs had not been beneficial.

This theme is one of such vast importance and of such far-reaching influence upon humanity that it is not likely that any desultory discussion of it, either by women or men, can exhaust it. There is so much to be said on the subject that it will continue to furnish material for political philosophers for years to come. It is, then, not here proposed to espouse any particular side in so momentous a question, but simply to offer some observations in connection with it.

As far as the aspirations of women for prominence in the broad ways of business and industrial life, or for eminence in the high places of letters, art, science and philosophy are concerned, it is admitted that the softer sex should be entitled to such fair and free entrance as their condition may warrant. There have been from earliest times and in every age women who were the rulers of nations and even some who, with unusual courage and skill, led their people to war. Semiramis, Tomyris, Zenobia, Bodicea were great rulers and warriors. In every age there have been women learned in the law, in theology and in science and philosophy, not to speak of art and letters. Possibly, the newest feature in the development of woman's sphere of action is her entrance into the various departments of commercial and industrial pursuits. But while it is given to comparatively few women to be monarchs, warriors, philosophers, learned doctors and high in literature and art, they are invading by wholesale walks of life which were once wholly occupied by men. If success for women lies in those paths, there is none who shall say them nay.

The accepted theory of life in every age has been that the men should work to support the women who were to be maintained in a condition of dependence. The innovation under consideration emancipates woman from such subservience and sends her forth to earn her own support. As a consequence, when she occupies fields heretofore held by men she serves at a lower rate than has been paid for male labor, and the men are driven out, or are forced to competition to work at reduced wages. It is a question whether or not, if women had not made this new departure, the men, by earning larger salaries, would not have been able, as before, to support the women in as much comfort as they have since enjoyed.

Perhaps, the most serious effect is upon family life. The family is the foundation of all organized society. In the family the men go out to labor while the women keep the home and the children. When both men and women go the family life is disturbed, and the gradual emancipation of both sexes from mutual obligation will operate to prevent marriage in order to escape its cares and to maintain the independence of both men and women.

Will this be a beneficial state of society? It would be a bold and radical move to advocate it. The question is so many sided, it is of such far-reaching effect, it must exercise such potential influences upon the entire fabric of human society and human morals that the ablest statesman and the most devoted philanthropist can not but consider with profound anxiety, if not with extreme apprehension, the extraordinary social revolution which seems to be portended.—Picayune.

NOTES.

"The heights by great men reached and kept,
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night."

The Texas Advocate calls attention to one commendable thing in Judas Iscariot. "After he had sold his Lord for thirty pieces of silver, he had the decency to go and hang himself." Some people now-a-days don't begin to have that much decency. They sell out "lock, stock and barrel" to the devil, and yet claim to be Christians. Judas will rise up in the judgment against all such.

The Nashville Advocate, referring to the debate in the Board of Missions, says:

With such speakers as Bishops Haygood and Wilson on one side, and Bishops Hendrix and Keener on the other, the hearers listened to an impromptu debate which would have done credit to the United States Senate.

We suppose Dr. Hoss meant in compliment the United States Senate, for if what we read from time in time about that body is true, it can not be a compliment to the speakers named.

The Parsonage and Home Mission Society, at its recent meeting in St. Louis, reported good work done. Miss Helm's report was a review of the organization of the society eight years ago, and recited that in that time $1,230 89 had been raised, 241 parsonages built, 550 parsonages aided, 58 adult Parsonage and Home Mission and 87 juvenile societies organized, $31,232 87 invested in houses for preachers and $52,901.05 in parsonages and appurtenances. During the past year there has been an increase of $9,424,24 in dues paid; an increase of $9,742.71 in funds raised for the general work. The total amount collected during the year for general and local purposes was $14,273.28.

There is a difference in sins. I have been accustomed to think that for a good, usable, dead-sure way of losing your soul, the best was to keep a saloon. To sit behind the till and take in the wife's dress and bonnet and shoes and good looks and home and friends and baby, and wifely, motherly heart all broken; to take in the children's clothes and red cheeks and merry laughter and schooling and hoped-for manhood, and leave not enough to pay for the rough pine box, three feet long; to take in the drunkard's soul; to take in the nation's honor, smirched and fouled all over by the public corruption of the saloon, to sit behind this till, is sure death. That chair behind the world's saloon till should be reserved for one alone, the devil's own. And the man who presses into it, it's sure death for him. —Sam'l T. Carter.

We shall reach the masses whenever we put away certain unconfessed paganism prevalent among us, and dare to believe the gospel of Christ is really feasible in our times. "Society" and "fashionable churches" (a horrible combination of words) can never reach the masses—not until the second generation when most of "society" (now) becomes a part of "the masses." It is a sickening sight to see a church dominated by the ton, and the nausea is uncontrollable when such a church has a spasm of sentimental zeal to save the neglected classes. It builds mission chapels for the poor, and its leading members drive past these humble structures on Sunday morning (after a week of hard bargaining with sewing women) to be present at the aristocratic cathedral, and join in a discussion of "How to reach the poorer classes?" The discussion should be dramatized in low comedy, and the farce called "Dives in the Diaconate." —Dr. Candler.

Sunday-school workers are requested to ponder this paragraph from the Memphis Christian Advocate:

The brother who heads the Sunday-school, and whose whole heart is in the work, and swells with joyful pride as he looks into the faces of a happy crowd of little ones, a crowd that is twice as large as the audience that will greet the pastor in the "upper sanctuary," has a responsibility on him which he does not fully appreciate if he supposes that his work is accomplished when the Sunday-school hour has passed, or that he has no responsibility beyond the mere management of the school. If his work stops there, then so far as many children are concerned it is a miserable failure. His authority may go no further. His influence ought to be greater than his authority, and that influence, enforced by example, ought to lead the children from the school-room to the public sanctuary. And it will lead many there who otherwise would not go did he not try to lead them.

Grasping pussy's soft fur, fearless of her claw;

Eyes, with beauty borrowed from the sky

Lips of dainty curving like the bow of love,

Mr. Editor and Cousins: With your permission I will just step in and "chat" a few moments. I have long wished to join this happy band of "cousins," but could not find courage until this evening to knock at the "open door." If I am friendly received, I will call again soon. How calm, how beautiful come on the stilly hours when storms are gone! We have had some fearful winds, and for the past three days it has been raining. The whole country looks like an overflow around here. Owing to the bad weather, I did not go to church nor Sunday-school Sunday. Rev. W. H. Lewis filled his pulpit. He always keeps his appointment. We all like him very much. Mr. Frank Bryley, our superintendent, held his Sunday-school, which is progressing nicely now. For some time we began to despair of having a Sunday-school. Patience is a bitter root, but it yields rich fruit; so we kept trying, and now we have a very good attendance, and the children are taking great "interest," and every Sunday-school knows what that means for it. Oh, if we could only increase that interest! Any idea the cousins will suggest will be gladly received by our Sunday-school and superintendent. He will do anything to make it a success, I believe. I will answer C. M. Hart's question. It is Lazarus. I will close by asking. Who was Joram? Where do we read that the prayer of the wicked availeth nothing? Best wishes to the ADVOCATE.

FROM CARY SUNDAY SCHOOL.

A Young Evangelist—A True Narrative.

BY ELIZABETH GORDON.

The shortest sermon I ever heard was preached by the shortest preacher I ever saw; and it was not on Sunday, nor in a church, but on Monday, in a small steamer plying between Toronto and the Island.

Ever since the boat left Church Street Wharf I had been amused by hearing a clear, high-ace voice asking questions, one after another, as fast as the little tongue could go. Nothing could be seen from our point of view but a great hat of fine brown straw, which covered it like a tent, underneath which an edge of white skirt showed, and from it peeped a pair of tiny slippers.

Some of the questions asked by the voice were so original that I thought I would move around and see what was to be seen on the other side of the big hat; so I sat down on the other side of the lady, and looked on one of the loveliest child faces I had ever seen. But, O, such a delicate-looking mite! features perfect, eyes of softest hazel, and rings of silky brown hair curling all around the blue-veined forehead.

I was wondering how long the fragile little body would stand the wear and tear of that voice, when the boat touched at the Wiman Baths, and a big policeman came on board and walked toward a vacant seat beside the child. The little one looked around, then turned to the lady, and put a little hand in hers.

"You need not be afraid of the policeman, darling. You are a good boy. It is only bad boys who are afraid of policemen."

"O!" said the child with a bright smile. And when the policeman sat down beside him he turned up the beautiful face to him and asked:

"Are you a policeman?"

"Yes," answered the man, looking down at him kindly.

"Why are you a policeman?" was the next question.

The policeman gave a puzzled laugh, but did not seem to have an answer ready. So the child helped him by asking:

"Is it 'cause you like to be a policeman?"

"Yes," said the man. Then, as if afraid of any more questions, he took out the key of the patrol box and a pair of handcuffs, and began to explain that they were to put on bad boys when he took them away.

"You won't take me away," said the little fellow, bravely, looking him straight in the face; "I am a good boy."

"No, my boy; I won't take you. Whom do you belong to?" asked the big man, still smiling at the mite.

"I belong to Jesus," said the child.

The big policeman got very red in the face, and, rising hurriedly, jumped on the wharf at Island Park.

So you see, dear children, that the sermon was only four words. Could any of you preach it?—Exchange.

A South Side man took his little girl, just able to talk nicely, to the lake shore on Sunday afternoon. The waves were gently rippling on the beach, and when her father was not looking, the child managed to get one foot wet. She ran to her father with tears in her eyes, and sobbed: "Papa, lake step on baby's foot."—Babyhood.

Theories Don't Count for Juice.

The difference between common sense and mathematics was illustrated in a remark which Tommy Jones—who is not exceptionally bright, but just a common, natural boy—made in his class at school the other day.

It was the class in mental arithmetic. The teacher asked Willie Smith:

"Which would you rather have, Willie; half an apple, or eight-sixteenths of an apple?"

"Wouldn't make any difference," said Willie.

"Why not?"

"Eight-sixteenths and one-half are all the same."

At this reply Tommy Jones, who was several steps lather down the class, sniffed scornfully. The teacher heard him.

"Well, Tommy," said she, "don't you agree with Willie."

"No'm," said Tommy. "I'd a good deal rather have one-half an apple."

"And why, please?"

"More juice. Cut up half an apple into eight-sixteenths and you'll lose half the juice doing it!"—Youth's Companion.

Birds Learning to Sing.

A wren built her nest in a box on a New Jersey farm. The occupants of the farm-house saw the mother teaching her young to sing. She sat in front of them and sang her whole song very distinctly. One of her young attempted to imitate her. After proceeding through a few notes, its voice broke, and it lost the tune. The mother recommenced where the young one had failed and went very distinctly through with the remainder. The young bird made a second attempt, commencing where it had ceased before, and continuing the one song as long as it was able, and when the notes were again lost the mother began again where it had stopped, and completed it. Then the young one resumed the tune and finished it. This done, the mother sang over the whole series of notes the second time with great precision, and again a young one attempted to follow her. The wren pursued the same course with this one as with the first, and so with the third and fourth, until each of the birds became a perfect songster.—The Musical Messenger.

Thinking Something Good.

Little Majorie was by no means fond of going to church. She had to sit too still, and "the man" talked about things she could not yet understand.

"What is it for, mamma?" she asked one day. "What do you go to church for?"

Mamma tried to tell her the reasons, and said:

"And when you can't understand what the minister means, you must remember he is talking about good and beautiful things; and you must make up your mind to think of something good yourself."

That day Majorie was very quiet in church, and her mother praised her for it on the way home.

"I did just as you told me," said the wee maid. "I thought of something good."

"What was it, dearie?"

"Apple pie!"—Exchange.

Stick to It.

The Religious Telescope gives this New Year's advice to the boys and girls: "Have you resolved to be more diligent in your school and college work? Stick to it. Have you resolved not to wound and worry your parents by staying out late at night? Stick to it. Have you resolved that you will during this year be especially kind and helpful to your parents? Stick to it. It may be the last year they will be with you. So carry out to the very letter all your New Year's resolves, and at the end of the year you will be surprised and gratified to note how much real pleasure and profit have come to you through your faithfully sticking to your good resolutions. But remember, also, that the wise man has said: 'Better is it that thou shouldest not vow than that thou shouldest vow and not pay.'"

A Personal Pronoun Makes Trouble.

Johnny was writing a letter, and Willie was looking over his shoulder.

"You're not making that 'I' right," said Willie.

"What's the matter with it, I'd like to know?" replied Johnny.

"You're running it below the line, that's what's the matter with it."

"I guess I'm writing this letter, aint I? I'll want to make it that way it's my business, aint it?"

"Course. If you want to make a J of yourself go ahead."

The awe with which a small boy looks upon a retired mariner is probably due to the marvelous experiences the mariner remembers to have had. An example of this extreme marvelousness came up recently in the course of a conversation between a lad of six and an ex-sea-captain. "Captain Skaggs, did you ever get your leg bit off by a shark?" asked the boy. "Did I, sonny?" he replied—"did I? Well, rather. Dozens of times."—Harper's Magazine.

The Sabbath.

[Preached in the Methodist Church, Abbeville, Miss., by Rev. J. Waller, Pastor of the Presbyterian Church at College Hill, Miss.]

"Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work: but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is in thy gates; for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it."—Ex. xx, 8-11.

Every fundamental doctrine of God's Word has had to endure the persecuting fire of criticism and opposition. The doctrine concerning the observance of one day in seven for the worship of God is not an exception. The contest concerning this day is at a crisis. As Satan is ever vigilant and seeks new occasions to assail that which is vital to the peace, prosperity and happiness of man here and hereafter, so is he now endeavoring to lead this nation to say in the whole world, through its representatives, we are no longer a Christian nation, and owe no allegiance to God, by opening the gates of the World's Fair on the Christian's Sabbath.

There are two prevalent opinions concerning this day:

1st. The sanctification of one day from every seven was a ceremonial, typical and Jewish custom. This view is held by the Lutherans and most of the continental communions of Europe, and also by the Romish Church to some extent, which claims that other church holidays are sustained with equal authority with the Lord's day—the authoritative tradition of the church; thus making the Scriptures the product of the Spirit through the church, while, in fact, the church is a product of the Spirit through the Scriptures. The Lutheran Church holds that it is lawful for the church to ordain rites that are not contrary to God's Word; but that it can not make them binding on the consciences of men. So by the church (and not jure divino) the Lord's day was ordained, but it can not enforce its observance.

2nd. That the observance of this day is a duty of perpetual and moral obligation, and has been appointed from creation for all mankind. This view is held by the great majority of the Protestants of our own land, as evidenced by the petitions, representing more than twenty-five million of our people, to close the gates of the World's Fair on this day. The observance of this day is a moral and perpetual law, binding upon all men of all ages. The duty to set apart a portion of our time for the worship of God is founded upon the permanent relations of man to God. God has chosen one-seventh of our time for that purpose, which, from the creation of the world unto the coming of Christ, continued to be the last day of the week. But since then, for wise reasons and by competent authority, the time was changed unto the first day of the week, and was called the Lord's day. This proof is chiefly historical, and divides itself into two branches: 1. That drawn from the practice of the apostles and Christians of that time as recorded in the inspired history of the New Testament (Acts xx, 7; 1. Cor. xvi, 1 and 2; Rev. i, 10), and, 2. That found in the authentic, but uninspired testimony of primitive Christians. But our authority, as well as the primitive Christians, is based upon the teachings and examples of those who were disciples of Christ. That the Sabbath was not a ceremonial law like the Jewish feasts, etc., is clear, for it is coeval with man. (Gen. ii, 3.) Marriage and the Sabbath are two institutions coeval with man. Seven has ever been a sacred and symbolical number among patriarchs, Israelites and pagans—"ced of days." (Gen. iv, 3.) Concerning the flood, it seems that God himself observed the weekly interval. (Gen. vii, 10.) Noah observed this division of time to send out his dove. (Gen. viii, 10-12.) A wedding festival was continued a week. (Gen. xxix, 27.) This was the length of the most honorable funerals. (Gen. l, 10.) "The feast of the Passover was appointed to last a week." (Ex. xii, 3-20.) When the manna was given the Sabbath institution was already in force. (Ex. xvi, 22-30.) It was enforced before the ceremonial law was given. The words, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," imply that it was no new institution. "The seventh day once more, the splendid dawn of the Sun." Homer said, "The seventh day then arrived, the sacred day." But the Sabbath is a moral law. I. Because it was placed in the Ten Commandments. From this may be inferred the original and universal obligation of the law. All the other commandments are moral and permanent in their obligation, and it would be unnatural if this one should be a solitary exception. Whenever the Decalogue is read, this is read, and the people are taught to say, "Lord, have mercy upon us, and incline our hearts to keep this law." The ground assigned in Gen. ii, 3, for its observance is here repeated. 2. Because its observance was enjoined on the stranger. To participate in any of the ceremonial ordinances, a stranger had to become a Jew; but this law was obligatory upon both.

3rd. Because it is necessary to man's religious interest, which is the same to all men in all ages. That it is man's duty to worship God all agree; also, that this worship should be in part social, because of man's own social nature, and because the great end of this worship is the display of God's grace and glory before our fellow-man. Social worship demands a set time; and who could better set the time than God himself, who is the object of this worship?

We might speak upon the great need of this day for the preservation of man's health of body and mind; but as this is patent to all, and has been demonstrated by actual experience a time without number, we will forbear. If this law was in force before the levitical law of Moses, the passing away of his law did not affect it. If this law is binding on grounds as general as the human race, then the dissolution of a special covenant with the family of Jacob did not repeal it. The ceremonial law was temporary, but the practical need of the Sabbath is the same in all ages.

I. The New Testament does not abrogate it. Some hold that Christ, in his exposition of this commandment as recorded in Matt. xii, 1-8; Mark ii, 23-28; Luke vi, 15, did. Let us take Matt. xii, 1-8, supplying what is omitted from Mark and Luke. "At that time Jesus went on the Sabbath day through the corn, and his disciples were an hungered, and began to pluck the ears of corn and to eat." "But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful upon the Sabbath day". "But he said unto them, Have ye not read what David did, when he was an hungered, and they that were with him; how he entered into the house of God, and did eat the shew-bread, which was not lawful for him to eat, but only for the priests? Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the Sabbath days the priests in the temple profane the Sabbath, and are blameless? But I say unto you, that in this place is One greater than the temple. But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice; ye would not have condemned the guiltless. For the Son of man is Lord, even of the Sabbath day."

Now, our Savior has advanced several distinct ideas: (1) That which they did the law permitteth. (Dent. xxiii, 25.) (2) That their acts were not a violation of the spirit of the Sabbath law, for the necessity occasioned by their hunger permitted this under the circumstances, as in the case of David, who, when fleeing for his life, ate the shew-bread to satisfy his hunger (1. Sam. ii, 6). or as in the case of the priests who performed necessary manual labor around the temple, and were blameless. (3) That God preferred a compliance with the spirit of the law. (4) That the Sabbath was made for man's good, his true welfare. Now, we all know that this true welfare demands a Sabbath day, not only for God's chosen people, but for all mankind. (5) He was the Lord of the Sabbath, and he knew that they had not violated the law. Now, he did not abrogate the law, which was binding under the Old Testament dispensation, but he defined how it should be kept, and lived up to its requirements. The new dispensation had not yet come.

II. But there is another group of the New Testament Scripture which seems claim an authority for the abrogation of this law. (Rom. xiv, 5 and 6; Gal. iv, 9-11; Col. ii, 16, 17.) But from a proper understanding of the facts we see that these passages have no reference to the observance of the Lord's day, or Christian Sabbath, as called by many. Under the new dispensation many of the Christians converted from the Jews combined the practice of Judaism with the forms of Christianity. Some even wished to enforce the combined system upon the Gentile Christians, but were rebuked by the council at Jerusalem. (Acts xv.)

Now, in the churches of Asia Minor and the west, there were Christianized Jews who held to both systems. Some kept both Saturday (Sabbath) and Sunday, while others kept only Sunday. Some felt bound to keep all the Jewish feasts and ordinances, even going so far as to insist upon these as necessary to salvation, while others considered them as non-essential. Under these circumstances many weak, unenlightened consciences were grievously burdened because they knew not what to do. Paul's object in writing was to quiet this trouble.

Now, concerning the observance of the Lord's day, baptism and the Lord's Supper, they were in perfect harmony. These gave them no trouble, but all felt bound to keep them. But they differed about the observance of Saturday (Sabbath), circumcision, passover, and other rites. These things gave the trouble, and it was in reference to these that the apostle wrote. As the Christian Sunday, which was observed by all, even the apostles themselves, was not in the one don ot dispute, therefore "the beggarly elements" were days, months, times, holy days, new months, Sabbath days, feasts, and the typical aspects placed upon the Old Testament Sabbath by the ceremonial law, the substance, or moral aspects, of this day having been transferred to the first day of the week. As the Sabbath, under the old dispensation, commemorated the work of creation, so the Christian Sabbath, possessing its moral aspects, commemorates the great work of redemption through Christ. Each Sabbath morn is an Easter morn, declaring to the world, "He is risen: he is not here; behold where they laid him." Since it is moral and perpetual, it is still binding upon all men of all ages.

III. How is the Sabbath day to be sanctified? (Ex. xx, 8-11.) In addition to God's Word, I can give you no better answer than contained in our confession of faith. "The Sabbath is to be sanctified by a holy resting all that day, even from such worldly employments and recreations as are lawful on other days, and spending the whole time in public and private exercises of God's worship, except so much as is to be taken up in the works of necessity and mercy." The Fourth Commandment forbiddeth the omission or careless performance of the duties required, and the profaning the day by idleness, or doing that which is in itself sinful, or by unnecessary thoughts, words or works, about our worldly employments or recreations." The reasons annexed to the Fourth Commandment are God's allowing us six days of the week for our own employments, his challenging a special property in the seventh, his own example, and his blessing the Sabbath day.

Now, for the observance of one day in seven in this way, which we have shown to be the first day of the week under the new dispensation, God has promised a blessing. "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day, and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable, and shalt honor him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words, then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord, and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob, thy father, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." (Isa. lviii, 13 and 14.) The curse for disobedience, see Jer. xvii, 27. For a fulfillment of this curse upon Israel see Neh. xiii, 18.

But how great is the Sabbath desecration today! It has reached such vast proportions that hundreds of thousands of trainmen, mail agents and other laborers are forced to leave home and desecrate this day, or give up their occupations. When did this evil begin? In the family where parents, either by neglect or overt act, by visiting or seeking their own pleasure, taught their children to disregard this commandment of God. Who are to blame for the running of trains and the distributing of mail on this day? The Christians of this day through their representatives. The Christians of this day could stop such if they would. Men forced to such work are longing for them to do so. There is a cry of hard times. Jabin and Sisera may oppress, but our own sins are the cause of the curse. If we expect better times, as God's people of old when afflicted for their sins, we must return unto the Lord. But, instead of this, many are seeking to force a greater desecration by opening the gates of the World's Fair on Sunday. For four hundred years this nation, called a Christian nation, and so decided by the high courts of the land, has been ascending the hill of wealth, power, intelligence and influence, until it has reached a great crisis when, by our act, it will either say to the whole world that the Triune God is the God of this nation, and that it is by his power we are what we are, or no longer do we owe allegiance, by closing or opening the gates on this day. Other nations as great as ours, by denying and forsaking God, have gone to ruin. Even God's own chosen people, of whom came Jesus, the Son of man and the Son of God, the Savior of the world, fell under the curse of God for refusing to keep this commandment. So we, as a nation, may expect to reap a curse, if we turn from him in this way and refuse to obey. Shall it be so? What part shall we have in destroying or saving this nation? May God hear and answer the prayers of his people for the overthrow of the schemes of wickedness, and for the salvation, not only of our own nation, but of the whole world?

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." "Them that honor me I will honor, and they that despise me shall be lightly esteemed." (I, Sam. ii, 30.)

CLARK—Mrs. PHEBE LUCY CLARK was born ...n Northampton county, Va., June 17, 1810, ...nd died in Hinds county, Miss., March 26, ...893.

She was nearly eighty-three years old, hav... ...ing come to her grave at a good old age, like ...shock of corn cometh in his season. She was ...arried to George W. Clark, April 7, 1825. Five ...oys and five girls came to bless their union of ...earts and lives. Five have already passed ...over into the beyond, and five are lingering on ...the shores of time. They are all members of ...the church, and I trust will follow the godly ex... ...ample of her, whose heart's desire and prayer ...to God was that they might be saved.

Sister Clark was a life member of the Method... ...ist Church. She rejoiced in everything that ...was good and glorifying to God. Her faith in ...his personal Christ was constant and abiding. ...The last Sabbath she spent on earth she took ...the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in memory ...of Him who loved her and gave himself for her. ...The last audible utterance was, "Lord, take ...me to thyself."

The writer preached her funeral sermon ...from these words: "To me to live is Christ, ...and to die is gain."

Sweet be thy rest, my well-beloved sister, ...from care and pain. God comfort and sustain ...the loved ones who linger yet behind!

ADAIR.—The following private letter of a bereaved sister is an obituary of a preacher, once a member of the Louisiana Conference:

Dear Brother: My husband and your warm friend, Rev. R. H. ADAIR, is no more. He was born near Delhi, La., Dec. 25, 1847; raised an orphan by a pious aunt; taught, as Timothy, the things of God from a child; professed religion at nineteen, and was licensed to exhort by Rev. Geo. H. Clinton, of Mississippi Conference, and licensed to preach, March, 1868, by Rev. B. F. Alexander; married, Oct. 20, 1867, to Miss Lizzie Kennedy, of Washington, Tex. He served as supply to Louisiana Conference two years, was admitted on trial in the Fall of 1869. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Doggett, elder by Bishop Marvin. He served the following work. First year, Many mission; second, Anacoco circuit, as supply; third, Anacoco, from Conference; fourth and fifth, Keachi; sixth, seventh and eight, Caddo circuit. Transferred to North-west Texas Conference in the Fall of 1875; served Fairfield, Buffalo, Hillsboro, Peoria circuit as pastor in charge: Acton, as junior preacher; Mountain Creek and Weatherford circuits. Located one year; then Fort Worth circuit, Marystown and Arlington. Located Fall of 1887, and was afterwards engaged in surveying and as architect.

The dearest affections and memories centered in and clustered round the illcreaney. He died of pneumonia just at the hour for worship, Sabbath morning, April 16. While not able to bear testimony at his dying hour, he had the day before stated to a friend at his bedside, who nursed him in his last illness, that all was well. In frequent conversations we had the last few weeks of his life he expressed perfect faith and resignation to the divine will, and the thoughts of death and anticipations of endless life and joy were present with him while engaged in his official duties. His last public service was assisting in the woman's missionary service, Easter night. Though he had no intelligible conversation for some hours before his death, I think he was fully conscious of his approaching end and was ready for the messenger when it came.

We had nine children, three of whom have preceded him to the glory-world. While we are deeply bereaved and feel the stroke with peculiar force, we all, as a family, submit with unmurmuring submission to our Father's will, and rejoice with him in his release; for we know that for him to depart and be with Christ is far better, and God, who can not err, "doeth all things well."

In the Louisiana Conference the buoyancy and strength of young manhood were spent, and its associations, ties and memories were to the last the dearest of his life.

MRS. R. H. ADAIR.

INGRAM—NATHAN INGRAM, subject of this notice, was born in Sampson county, N. C., April 12, 1808. Removed to Hardeman county, Tenn., in 1828. In 1832 he was married to Miss Pernecia Caraline. In 1834 professed religion and joined the Methodist Church at Salem Camp Meeting. In 1844 he came to DeSoto county, Miss.

Bro. Ingram was twice married. The second marriage was with Miss Amanda Sago, who survives to mourn her loss. Bro. Ingram, perhaps, never made an enemy. None knew him but to respect and reverence him. He was a noble man, a devout Christian, an ardent Methodist. No stain of sin was on him for the past sixty years. He trusted God at all times, and the Lord did honor his servant. It is easy to write of such, that he was "true in all the relations of life."

Bro. Ingram mastered his carnal nature by grace divine, and the fruit of the Spirit clustered around his life. He lived well and died well July 10, 1892. A long and painful sickness wore the outward man away, but the inner man was renewed day by day. The grand old servant longed for the day of his release. His Lord came and granted all and more than was thought of or asked for. Uncle Nathan is gone from us, but he is had in fond remembrance. He was righteous. May all of the company meet in our Father's house!

DUNN—DRURY THOMAS DUNN, son of Mary P. Dunn, was born in Oglethorpe county, Ga., March 30, 1825, and departed this life in Sunflower county, Miss., Dec. 25, 1892.

He leaves one sister and brother and one daughter and three grandchildren to mourn their loss, but not as those that mourn without a hope. He professed religion and joined the church about six months before his death. On being asked by his daughter if he was prepared to die, he said he was, and the following day passed away as quietly as in sleeping. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord," for their rest shall be sweet.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THOSE SENDING MONEY.—Remittances should be made only by money orders, express company orders, registered letters, drafts or checks on New Orleans banks or merchants. Drafts on country banks occasion a loss of from 15 to 25 cents per check. Drafts on country merchants we have no facility for collecting. Checks and drafts, also money orders, should be made payable to D. L. Mitchel, Publisher.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep—had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

NINETEEN VOLUMES OF SERMONS

PREACHED BY

CHARLES HADDON SPURGEON

(THE GREAT LONDON PREACHER)

FROM 1856 TO 1889.

By special arrangements made with the Funk & Wagnalls Company, publishers, we are enabled to offer our readers complete sets of nineteen volumes, each, substantially bound in good cloth, and printed in large, clear type, on good paper, at $12.00. The regular price, per volume, for these is $1.00; total, $19.00 a set, so that by taking advantage of the opportunity we now offer, purchasers will save $7.00 on each set. The binding, paper, etc., of these volumes, are exactly the same as of those selling for $19.00 the set, or $1.00 per volume.

The size of each of the volumes is 12mo., 7½ x 5¼. About eight thousand pages are contained in the series (19 volumes), and copious indices to texts, titles, and topics, are found in the books.

Spurgeon's sermons are of great value to all denominations. They are read wherever the English language is spoken. They have been translated into many languages and are popular throughout the world. In this country alone, we are told by Mr. Spurgeon, in the preface to one of his volumes of sermons, that sold, over thirty years ago, more than one hundred and fifty thousand volumes of his sermons had been sold. It has been well written: "It is hardly an exaggeration to say that Spurgeon's parish has been the whole English-speaking world. Besides the multitudes who have heard him in his own great Tabernacle in London, and the millions of people who have read his sermons, his name almost from the very beginning of his ministry has been a household word everywhere familiar and everywhere standing for one who gloried in this, that it was given him to proclaim the good news of the salvation through Christ. Kingdoms might wax and wane, revolutions might come and go, speculative theories might succeed each other in brilliant succession, yet the constant factors—human nature and the redeeming grace through Jesus Christ—remained the same."

No family library, no church worker, or Christian layman should be without a set of these remarkable and invaluable sermons.

James McCosh, D.D., ex-President of Princeton College, says: "Sound in faith and at the same time eminently practical and searching . . . clear and picturesque . . . full of lively illustrations, and faithful throughout."

J. W. Bashford, D.D., President of the Ohio Wesleyan University: "The great preacher of the common people among English-speaking nations."

Golden Rule, Boston: "Above our praise and beyond even our criticism."

Church Advocate, Harrisburg, Pa.: "A mighty spiritual power."

The Standard, Chicago: "As sermons they stand alone, unequaled by any other published sermons, by men now in the pulpit or by those of other generations."

The Congregationalist: "Full of the true spirit of Christ. No man since Paul could say with more emphasis than could Mr. Spurgeon, 'I believed, therefore did I speak.'"

President Andrews, of Brown University: "No preacher since the Apostle John has maintained himself in genuine pulpit power so long."

New York Observer: "Out of the fulness of the heart, his mouth poured forth treasures of wisdom, even the wisdom of God."

The Religious Telescope, Dayton, Ohio: "A wonderful spiritual insight into the spirit of God's word and its special adaptation to the needs of the race."

The Christian Advocate (Meth. Epis., New York): "He spoke as one having authority, not original, but derived from God. Every tone implied a consciousness that he was an apostle of Jesus Christ, placed there by Him, and speaking in His name."

The Churchman (Epis., New York): "This century has not heard a voice raised for Christ with so complete a mastery of Scripture, thought, and language as was that of Spurgeon."

The Christian Intelligencer (Ref., New York): "The Gospel preached by Mr. Spurgeon was the power of God unto salvation."

Sympathy for the Distressed.

Our lives are all music if we but touch the chords rightly, so says one of our poets, and we all know there is a golden thread entering into the warp and woof of every day life that is touched by sympathy for the distressed and suffering. At such a time what a boon to have on hand Hicks' Mul-en-ol to offer as a relief for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains and colic. It is soothing and cooling. Large bottles 50 cents.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. Is is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

DOMESTIC.

The World's Fair, in Chicago, was closed last Sunday.

Governor Foster is making a thorough inspection of the levees in Louisiana.

A fire in Saginaw, Mich., on May 20, destroyed several industrial establishments and 200 residences. The loss is $1,000,000.

It is hard to estimate at the present time the amount of damage that has been sustained by the railroads in eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania on account of the great floods, but by many it is placed at more than $1,000,000.

The five-story brick building at Illinois and Dearborn streets, in Chicago, occupied by the Price Baking Powder Company, was almost totally destroyed by fire on May 18. The loss on the building is $20,000, and on the machinery and stock $70,000; fully insured.

In the presence of the congregation that crowded the immense tabernacle to the doors, on May 20, the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage officially announced that the floating debt of the tabernacle had been liquidated, and that his remaining with the church as its pastor was assured.

According to information received the Nicaraguan revolution has taken an unexpected turn. Unofficial advices have been received at the State Department in Washington that an agreement for an armistice has been reached by the government and the revolutionary faction in Nicaragua.

The White Star Line does not mean to be behind in the matter of giant ships. It has given an order to a firm of English ship-builders for a vessel to be 600 feet long. This will be the biggest ship afloat, and the company says that it will be the fastest. She will be larger than the famous Great Eastern.

A disastrous accident, on May 20, marred the close of the Women's Congress at the World's Fair. A section of the floor, forming an entrance to Washington Hall, in the Art Institute, suddenly gave way and fell to the ground, a distance of twelve feet. Seventy-five women were precipitated to the ground. About eight persons were seriously injured, but none of them fatally.

The Spanish princess, the Infanta Eulalie, the representative of the Queen Regent of Spain, was accorded a grand reception in Washington City on May 19. President Cleveland sent his carriage to the depot for the use of the princess. The Infanta and suite were received at the White House on May 20, and Mrs. Cleveland returned the call a few hours afterward. On May 23 the President and Mrs. Cleveland gave a dinner to her royal highness and the royal party.

The Hungarian national government has given its support and indorsement to the arrangements for an exhibition in 1896, intended to celebrate the one thousandth anniversary of the foundation of the Hungarian monarchy.

The Italian government has closed the provisional council of the province of Boughan, in northern Italy, owing to a decision by the council to the effect that the temporal rights of the Pope of Rome are superior to the unity of Italy.

The German Emperor, accompanied by Prince Albrecht, regent of Brunswick; Prince Frederic Leopold, Count Caprivi, Dr. Bosse and many other notables, proceeded to Goelitz, in Silesia, on May 18, where he personally unveiled the monument to his grandfather, Emperor William I.

The government has denied the truth of the recent statement that Emperor William, in his capacity of supreme chancellor of the armies, would issue a manifesto concerning the army bill. To the denial is added the explanation that the emperor is supreme commander only in war; in peace the federated princes command their respective armies.

Hood's Cures.

In saying that Hood's Sarsaparilla cures, its proprietors make no idle or extravagant claim. The advertising of Hood's Sarsaparilla is always within the bounds of reason, because it is true; it always appeals to the sober, common sense of thinking people, and it is always fully substantiated by endorsements, which in the financial world would be accepted without a moment's hesitation.

Read the testimonials published in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla, all from reliable, grateful people.

They tell the story. Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures.

A new ukase has been issued expelling the Jews from the Asiatic provinces of the Russian empire. The enforcement of the ukase will cause widespread suffering, as the decree includes within its scope thousands of Jewish refugees from Shah Jeh Ali's persecutions, who had entered Russian territory under a guarantee that they would be protected in the enjoyment of religious freedom.

Herr Von Bulow, Prussian minister to the Vatican, applied late Saturday evening for an audience with the Pope on May 21. It was granted without hesitation, although the Pope desired to pass Pentecost Sunday in absolute seclusion and rest. The apparent urgency of Herr Von Bulow's business and secrecy surrounding it have excited much comment.

The International Miners' Congress will open in Brussels, this week, and will be attended by delegates from all the European mining districts. The Miners' Federation of Great Britain will be represented by a number of delegates, most of whom are members of the House of Commons. The British delegates are eager to get the congress to adopt a resolution declaring in favor of the establishment of a legal eight-hour day, and such resolution will be introduced by them. They will endeavor also to secure the sanction of the congress to a universal strike, if necessary to obtain eight hours as a legal day's work.

Camp Meetings.

The Orville-Whittington Camp Meeting will begin Friday night, Aug. 18, and continue to Aug. 27, embracing the third and fourth Sundays. The ground is in East Feliciana parish twelve miles southeast of Clinton, and four miles northwest of Grangeville. All preachers are cordially invited to attend, and will be cared for free of charge. There will be ample accommodation for all who wish to attend. There will be no gate fee.

The Scottsville Holiness Camp Meeting will begin on Tuesday night, Aug. 8, A. D. 1893, and run for ten days. Our faith looks forward to a glorious meeting. Let preachers and people come. We ask the prayers of the church and of every friend of holiness.

The sugar season in Cuba may now be considered virtually ended, as the yield of the few estates still grinding will have no appreciable effect on the total production. It is estimated that the yield of the whole island will amount to between 750,000 and 800,000 tons, a very large decrease from the average total production.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

ON THE BEACH.

The twenty-second annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 12, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 5, and remain on the ground until the twenty-sixth. All trains stop at the grounds during the meeting. Holders of camp meeting railroad tickets desiring to attend the session of the Biblical Institute and Summer School for Christian Workers, can get their railroad tickets extended until August 31.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing Districts Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds; and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the rush at the opening of the camp meeting should address communications to W. B. Thomson, chairman Tent and Cot Committee, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Cot Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution towards defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

Traveling Methodism.

There may or there may not be any special danger in the fact that "Episcopal Methodism is at the forks of the road." If the condition is a providential opening, our danger lies in the fact that we may not see it, and thus end the mission of the church. But if it is the invention of man, we may fall into error to the hurt of the church. Our fathers made ample provision for the march of the church in the beginning by disclaiming revealed authority for their peculiar organization. They were very bold in this assertion, and ingnoring the fable of apostolic succession, as they were in striking out on new and untried lines of organization and administration, purely as providential openings. And the successful journey we have made, even in passing so many "Forks in the Road," fully justifies our claim that Episcopal Methodism is the "child of Providence."

But shall our future justify this claim? That depends upon how we pass this and future danger-points. Is there enough sanctified wisdom in the church to apprehend the right thing to be done, and of holy courage to do the right when discovered? My own opinion is that there is both. I have an abiding confidence in the future of the church—a confidence that is not shaken by either incident or accident in personal or the general experience. I rejoice in the belief that the church is purer and stronger to-day than it was yesterday, and that it will be yet purer to-morrow than it is to-day. And yet I recognize the fact that the continued growth and development in purity and strength depends upon the life preceding each development.

But that we are now at the "Forks of the Road," and that a choice must be made between a radical change in administration or no change, there is not a shadow of doubt. Both preachers and people recognize the fact, and are anxiously awaiting the result, both as to the choice and the effects of the choice. We can no more remain "double in administration" and maintain our autonomy than we could be double in doctrines and maintain our unity. Then, if we must become Congregational in government, let us flie into the drift intelligently and as a body. But before we do go, let us consider well some of the leading consequences. The conditions of the contract between pastors and people will have to be agreed upon between the contracting parties, just as they are in other Congregational Churches, and they will not need the Bishop and presiding elder merely to "sign these contracts." And then, perhaps, the very conditions that make a certain man a necessity to a given church—and that under Episcopal Methodism places him where he is most needed—will be his reasons for declining the offer. As a rule, it is not the church that suffers under the administration of Episcopal Methodism—its interest is as carefully looked into and provided for as human wisdom can see and dictate—it is the pastor who suffers, and he often goes to his appointment with a heart as heavy as he can well carry. None but God can fully comprehend what they often endure to serve a people who do not appreciate them, and even slight and criticise them, without a word of protest or complaint, because they feel they are doing the will of Christ. That churches and preachers may sometimes suffer from the abuse of power may be true; yet both should and usually have the grace to await God's own time for final adjustment.

But do our people want a change of administration, and is it too late to seek out and to follow the old paths? Bishop Fitzgerald says: "It is not too late to mend." To this "Gilderoy" replies: "I seriously doubt the correctness of this statement. I think the disposition, the desire to mend, is wanting." My own opinion is, that it is not too late to mend, and for the following reasons: First, I do not believe that the present state of things has grown out of the dissatisfaction of the best judgment of the churches where it now exists, with Episcopal Methodism. It is the effect of a forced attempt on the part of some who are without the qualifications of leadership, to control in church affairs. This forces good men and true to take an active part in appointments, that they may save their local church from damage. But the position, though justified by existing conditions, is humiliating, because condemned by all others, and, finally, to escape such odium, they simply agree to agree on a pastor beforehand.

It is my opinion that the breakdown is at the office of presiding elder. Certain it is that the success of Episcopal Methodism depends more upon that office than upon any other in the church. It represents the whole administration of the church, in Bishop, preachers and people, as no other office does or can do. And if the Bishops will only respect its responsibility and its utility, the people will soon learn to do it. This fact alone would rally the loyal of the church everywhere to the constituted authority and methods of administration; and if there be any among us otherwise minded, let them seek other relations.

In the second place, I do not believe there is any great number among us who want a change. A combination of circumstances have forced upon our people a method of administration, that we are now in danger of having enacted into law, that they do not want, and that will not be satisfying when they get it. I am glad some of our Bishops see the danger; and now, Bro. Gilderoy, I have strong hopes that when we, and this generation, have gone to our long home, the old ship of Episcopal Methodism will be seen moving proudly over time's sea, and in no danger from the "Forks in the Road." Kosciusko District Conference.

The second session of the Kosciusko District Conference was held in Eupora, Miss., May 18-21. The presiding elder, Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan, D. D., presided. R. G. Porter sat at the secretary's table. Owing to the pressure in farming circles, the attendance of the laymen was small. The reports of the preachers were made in writing and referred to appropriate committees, and the reports of these committees were discussed, giving us a Conference in the fullest sense of the word.

Rev. J. W. Malone, of the Sardis district, was present, and assisted in organizing a Preachers' Loan Association to aid young preachers in obtaining an education. More than two hundred dollars was promptly subscribed to this fund.

Rev. T. J. Newell, A. M., president of Grenada Collegiate Institute, was present, representing the great connectional enterprise over which he so ably presides.

The entertainment of the Conference in the bright, new town of Eupora was all that could have been desired.

The next Conference meets in Ackerman.

The preaching, which was done by Dr. Sullivan, Bros. Malone, Newell, McCullough, Evans, Leech, Rogers and Myers, was good to the use of edifying. The communion service, on Sunday, was one long to be remembered. The invisible Christ was present in the visible signs of the Eucharistic feast. Not more than a score of persons in a large congregation stayed away from the table of the Lord.

There was much complaint of worldliness and love of pleasure in the church. On closer examination, however, it was found that the great body of the church was true to Christ.

Steps were taken to organize a Preachers' Pastoral and Theological Society some time in the month of September.

The finances of the church were in a deplorably low state. The preachers were never so closely pressed before.

Mrs. Mary McGee Snell, of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, was present, and in the interims of the Conference addressed the citizens twice on the great work in which she is engaged.

The following-named persons were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference: Col. J. G. Hamilton, J. F. Lamb, Prof. W. H. Smith, and S. C. Conly. Alternates: J. E. Bridges and F. M. Glass.

A Board of Trustees was elected for the district parsonage.

The report of the Committee on Missions excited more interest and provoked more discussion than any other subject before the Conference. It was generally agreed that we needed larger and more adequate appropriations to the home mission work. This fund, as now administered, is dribbled out in little bits, so that it does but little good. The Conference, by resolution, requested the Board of Missions to assess for the home work fully one-half as much as is assessed by the General Board for foreign missions. The meager support given preachers where appropriations are made, and on many charges where no help is afforded, greatly hinders and retards the work. They are compelled to supplement their salaries by engaging in secular work, which hinders them from giving full and efficient pastoral and ministerial service. This disheartens and discourages the preacher, and tends to paralyze the energies of the people. If we are going to develop the field at home, we need more money to carry on the work. This is as much the Lord's work as any on the face of the globe. A full appropriation will develop a self-sustaining work at once, while a small allowance will keep it on the mission list for years.

DOTS.

Eupora, Miss., will ship more than thirty thousand dollars' worth of chickens and eggs this year. The hens would support the preachers if the people would let them do it.

The harder the times the more the hens lay. Eggs supply the place of meat. They say the chicken and egg crop of Mississippi will be worth more this year than the cotton crop.

We take our eggs boiled now, as it costs too much to fry them in lard.

Quarterage might be paid weekly in chickens and eggs. The problem of supporting the ministry would be solved by the hens if we only gave them plenty of parched corn.

In some places in Mississippi small change is made in eggs. They are current across the counters of nearly all our stores. Many farmers pay cash for all their supplies with the product of their hens.

We are beginning to learn the value of little things in Mississippi since the hard times came upon us. A dozen eggs, that costs no labor at all, except the labor of laying them, is worth as much as two pounds of sorry cotton. It requires a year of hard work to grow the cotton, while a hen will lay an egg a day and cackle herself hoarse for the privilege.

[To these paragraphs we can but say, Egg-act-lay.—EDITOR.]

A half-dozen dancing and card-playing young gentlemen and ladies will ruin the reputation of a church of two hundred right-living members. Why be continually exhibiting a few warts to public gaze as if the whole mass were warts? What proportion of the members of your church dance and play cards? There was one bad man among the number of the apostles.

We do not shout nearly so much as we used to do, but we pay far more money to the cause of God than we ever did before in the history of the church.

"The love of money is the root of all evil," and the right use of money is the cause of much good. The members of the church, generally, never used money more wisely than they do now, and still there is room for improvement.

THE NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE was strongly and heartily endorsed and commended to our people. It is the best paper in the church for Methodist people in North Mississippi.

A good lady said our rotund Conference colporter looked as if he were well filled with fried chicken, and his teeth well set with a taking slant for more. He is no "balk man" at the table, and, for the matter of that, in no other worthy work. He eats to live, while some people live to eat, or they seem to.

Dr. Sullivan is cultured, sound, deeply pious, and exact and painstaking in every matter, be it great or small. GILDEROY.

Woodville District Conference.

The Woodville District Conference convened at Centreville, Miss., April 27, Rev. P. A. Johnston in the chair. Rev. J. J. Smylie was elected secretary, with W. J. Roberts as assistant. All the preachers of the district were present but two; also a goodly number of lay delegates. The regular routine work of the Conference was taken up immediately in connection with a carefully prepared programme made out beforehand by our wide-awake presiding elder. He always has an eye to business, and knows exactly how to make things interesting; a fine executive officer. (We hear a great deal about District Conferences being dead, cold and formal; no interest taken. If you want to know how to make it interesting and attractive, write to our presiding elder for his methods of conducting; or, better still, come to our next session and catch the fire.) We were at high tide all the time. It was the universal verdict of all the members that this was the best and most interesting District Conference they ever attended. Great prominence was given to religious exercises. The preaching was of a high order, deeply spiritual and pungent. Sinners were "pricked to the heart," and a great many became "renewed in their minds." Revs. Haynie, Johnston, J. W. Brown, Galloway, Tucker, Dominick, Linfield, Hunnicutt, W. J. Roberts, Sullivan and Featherstun did the preaching. The Conference passed resolutions commendatory of the sermon preached by Dr. Featherstun on "Christian Education," recognizing its high merits. He was requested to have it published in pamphlet form. A collection was taken to have 2 000 copies gratuitously distributed over the district.

Bros. Mitchel, of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE; McLaurin, of the American Bible Society; Dominick, Conference colporter, were with us, and their presence appreciated.

H. C. Newsom, R. Babbington, H. B. McGehee and G. H. Packwood were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

The next Conference for this district will be held at Clinton, La.

The church throughout the entire district has experienced a gracious "uplift" through the influence of our District Conference.

May God ever bless the good people of Centreville! Their hospitality was only exceeded by their large-hearted Christian liberality. SECRETARY.

[This paper came to our office since the last issue.—EDITOR.]

Resolutions adopted by the Woodville District Conference, and ordered published in the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE:

Whereas, The legal status and real functions of camp meeting associations constitute a question of profound interest in some parts of our district; And, whereas, The peace and prosperity of our church requires that this question be speedily and finally settled; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this District Conference that no camp meeting association or kindred organization should attempt to control or direct in any way the appointments to preach at our camp meetings, this being the function of the regularly appointed presiding elder and preacher in charge.

Resolved, That any infringement of the legal method of filling the pulpits at our camp meetings is not only subversive of Methodist polity and good order, but tends to the establishing of precedent dangerous in the extreme.

Resolved, That all of our preachers and all camp meeting associations are similar organizations are hereby earnestly exhorted not to permit the slightest violation of our law and usage in this matter.

Woman's Work.

We call the attention of auxiliaries to Woman's Missionary Society, Mississippi Conference, to Plan of Work paragraph 2: "That we insist upon members attending our annual meetings, and earnestly request that we send such delegates as are most interested in the work, such as will remain during the Conference session."

Paragraph 9: "That the invitations extended to the Annual Conference be presented in writing."

Let us not neglect the duty of collecting the fifteen cents per capita for Conference Contingent Fund, twenty cents per capita for Auxiliary Contingent Fund, and the forwarding to the recording secretary at the Conference money for the publication of the Minutes. MRS. E. D. JONES.

Woman's Work.

MR. EDITOR: Please announce in your valuable paper that the Woman's Missionary Society of Aberdeen, Miss., has compiled and had published by the Methodist Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn., a cook book entitled, "True and Tried Recipes," to be sold for the cause of foreign missions. Price, seventy-five cents per copy. The delegate from the Aberdeen auxiliary to the Missionary Conference, to be held in Water Valley, Miss., in June, will have with her some of the books for sale. It is a valuable work, neatly bound, and we hope all Christians whose hearts are interested in the Master's work among heathen nations will assist us in the sale of the book.

MRS. THOMAS B. SYKES,
Cor. Sec. W. M. S.

Aberdeen, Miss.

FROM THE WORK.

M. Alice Brown, district secretary, Sallis, Miss., May 27: "The district meeting of W. M. S., Kosciusko district, North Mississippi Conference, convened in Eupora, May 17. The meeting was pleasant and, we hope, profitable. Auxiliaries all represented by report or delegate. The outlook for our woman's work is encouraging, showing great possibilities for our district in the future. May God speed the good work, and may all we do be done for his honor and glory!"

Rev. R. S. Isbell, Lake Providence, La., May 24: "A deep gloom has settled upon our parish and people. The year opened propitiously for church and parish. Our people cheerful, and anticipating a prosperous year; planted largely of cotton and corn. The crops were well worked, and growing beautifully. Now all is desolation. But a small portion of our parish not under water. Providence is now virtually an island. You can see the water around us, and gradually creeping up to the corporate limits. The end is not yet. Many have lost all, and others still to follow. With all our disaster, God has been very gracious to us. More anon."

Rev. C. G. Andrews, Vicksburg, Miss.: "Children's Day was observed with great success by the Sabbath-school of Crawford Street Methodist Church, in Vicksburg, at 5 P. M., May 21. The large and handsome auditorium was completely filled by the interested spectators, some standing throughout the whole exercises. The children were well drilled and performed their parts admirably. The procession was formed in the Sabbath-school room and marched up to the room above and round and round through the aisles to the inspiring strains of 'Joyfully march along,' members of each class bearing the banners and the floral decorations. The altar and pulpit were ablaze with beauty, as the banners and decorations were artistically arranged. Around one of the banners was an exquisite work of hand painting by one of the scholars, representing a cross with the passion flower and vine gracefully pendent. Other banners were of shining silk and golden fringe, inscribed with appropriate mottoes. The flowers exceeded in quantity and in richness and in beauty of arrangement. One floral tribute by a young man, formerly a member of the Sunday-school, consisted of a pillow of brightest, rarest flowers, out of which arose a floral cross twined round with a graceful wreath, the whole surmounted by the motto in purple immortelles, 'God is Love.' Another pillow was constructed of a ground of white flowers, principally of cape jessamines, with the words, 'Children's Day,' formed of bright crimson flowers. A large shepherd's crook, made of choice flowers of various hues, very appropriately hung near the pulpit. Recitations and songs were well rendered by the bright, interesting young people. A brief address was delivered by the pastor. The collection was taken by six little misses in white, and amounted to a nice little sum, considering that it was entirely voluntary."

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, P. C., Buena Vista, Miss., May 24: "I am traveling my first 'work.' You will appreciate my feelings of gratitude and of pleasure when called upon to pass through my first 'term,' and my experience of mingled pleasure and anxiety attending my first Quarterly Conference. With what joy and delight we welcomed our genial presiding elder! How we were edified by his sound gospel preaching, strengthened by his wise counsel, and helped on the way by his words of encouragement! We thought, during this glad event, that our souls could not be more joyful; but we were mistaken. In the language of Dr. Joseph Parker: 'There is always a higher wave; beyond is a fuller billow.' Thank God we have not yet exhausted the possibilities of Christian enjoyment.' We began a meeting at this place the fourth Sunday night in April, which continued for ten days, with glorious results. Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Aberdeen, joined us Monday afternoon, preaching twice each day until Friday night. His preaching was of the highest order, and attended with great power. Under his influence the church was raised to a higher plane of Christian experience and activity, and souls were converted to God. He and his good wife won the hearts of all our people, and, with many regrets and hearty expressions of appreciation and love, we saw them leave Saturday morning for their own important field of duty. Bros. J. R. Courtiss and John C. Park, of Houston, came to our assistance on Saturday and Sunday, and did faithful and efficient preaching until Wednesday night, when the meeting closed with eighteen souls happily converted to God, and nearly all added to some church. All denominations entered faithfully and earnestly into the work, and, as a result, we have a community strongly united in the bonds of Christian fellowship, working hand in hand for greater things in the 'kingdom of God.' May this be but the beginning of a gracious revival that will spread all over our work during the year! To say that we appreciate the valuable services of these visiting brethren would be putting it but mildly. Not only did they win to themselves golden opinions, but the sympathies and prayers of our people will follow them wherever they may be called to labor."

Rev. J. S Parker, Purvis circuit: "A few days ago we closed a glorious revival meeting of twelve days at Poplarville. The Christian people were greatly blessed, and many solemn vows of reconsecration to God's service were made. How these dear friends of ours prayed for a higher Christian experience! Thirty persons were happily converted, and twenty-five became members of the Methodist Church. Others will, doubtless, join other churches. Our beloved brother, Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, did the most of the preaching the first week. Our people fell in love with him, and he will never be forgotten by many who heard his delightful sermons. Bro. D. C. Rawls preached us one sermon, and did fine work in the altar services. Sister E. Lou Whyte, of Purvis, was with us, and how she did work and pray for the young ladies, boys and children whom she had been leading into the flowery paths of knowledge for the past nine months! Sister Whyte is one of the grandest workers I have ever known. She is humble, sweet-spirited, and wholly consecrated to God. At the last of the first week the pastor was left alone, and yet he was not alone, for the blessed Master was with us in every service. What a delight it is to work for the salvation of souls when our Savior is present! How the loneliness of the way is brightened when we can know that he is with us and in our lives! Thank God our prayers were heard, and the labor of our hands and hearts was greatly blessed! Our second Quarterly Conference at Purvis was a great blessing to that place. Bro. H. E. Partridge, our wide-awake and beloved presiding elder, was with us in the spirit of Christ. He is a man that lives every day near the cross. His preaching and godly living are making a fine impression for good on the whole district. At this meeting two were converted and joined the church. There have been forty accessions to the church up to this time. The assessments are all coming up grandly. This charge will come out ahead on all the claims against it. Near $200 have been expended on the parsonage. Three rooms have been added, refurnished, and the rooms covered with beautiful matting. We have now a delightful preacher's home, and during the year we expect to build a beautiful church at this place. We have organized the Lumberton and the Poplarville 'Dike Builders.' These two missionary societies are doing a grand work for the cause they represent, and the children and young people are becoming thoroughly enlisted in all church work. Mrs. Parker has organized a Woman's Missionary Society at this place. We have three regular prayer meetings, one class meeting, a woman's prayer meeting, and one children's prayer meeting. Our work is in a very good condition in every respect. We have a noble-hearted people, and the Purvis charge will soon stand at the head of any charge in the district."

GOD'S POEMS.

BY REV. DAVID H. RIDDLE.

Master, we are thy work, create in thee,
For good alike in lofty ends or lowly,
Poet divine art thou, thy poems we
The strife, thy will to do, thy truth to be
Is beautiful and holy.

The heroes brave by voice or vision sent
Forth to sail seas, find worlds or free a nation,
Thine epics these, but those by suffering spent,
The good who bear, the weak with strong intent
Fulfill as high a station.

Natures that harp-like through each tender chord
Yield to his touch in tones of joy or wailing,
These are, and make the lyries of the Lord
Rich in the lore of life, their songs afford
Comfort when hearts are failing.

And those, whose deeds like flowers by woodland stream
Their fragrance felt, the quiet sources hidden,
Kings idyls are, though onw his secret theme
Some day his face in open praise shall beam,
They to his table bidden.

The loving are night songs, to those that weep,
Glad hymns of day to those whose mouths are filled with laughter,
The David's psalms, whose strains of soothing keep
The sad Saul-heart from a despairing leap
Into the dark hereafter.

Approve the poems, Lord, we bring to thee,
Despite each faulty line and jarring measure;
Not the rough orm, but the inner motive see,
Let discords here blend it to harmony

The Fourth Commandment.

"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."—Ex. xx, 8.

No doubt this commandment is violated as much, if not more, as any one of the ten given to Moses.

Rev. L. L. Pickett speaks out in words of truthfulness when he says, "There is in this land of Bibles and churches a wholesale system of Sunday travel and commerce."

The railroad trains and the steamboats run on Sunday as though it were Monday, or any other day; the hum of the factory is heard in many of our large cities on the Sabbath as much as any other day; the press runs on Sunday as well as Monday, and the "Sunday newspaper" is a disgrace to any press, and a shame on any city or town, and a dishonor to the God who said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." These, with many other things, are cursing our fair land, and robbing hundreds, thousands—yea, millions—of hard-laboring men of their holy Sabbaths, their God, and their souls.

Now, what is the cause of and the remedy for this great evil?

Brethren, a truth is a truth, and a lie is a lie, and a great many Christians dread to utter things that are true, and I am now grieved when I see the reality of a fact, or an assertion that can not be denied. It is, indeed, with holy dread that I here make the assertion that one great cause of this curse of our land is, that the running of Sunday trains, steamboats, factories, etc., is supported by church members, and we might go a little further and add that these things are not only supported, but they are sanctioned, encouraged and patronized by members of the church and so-called Christians.

God pity that merchant, a member of the church, who will not go into his store from Saturday night to Monday, and yet on a Sunday morning will go to a station agent, buy a ticket, pay his bill, receive his change, and board the cars, and rush through the land on what has been termed "the devil's carriage." Yet there are hundreds of church members and some preachers seen going through our country on these Sunday trains.

My brethren, whither are we drifting? If it is wrong to sell goods on Sunday, it is wrong to ride on a Sunday train. Work is work, no matter where it is done, by whom it is done, or when it is done. Whether in the store or on the train, by church member, preacher or sinner, on Sunday or on Monday, or any other day or place, or by any other person, work is work, and we can not make anything else out of it. Things are not called by their right names enough at this day.

Now, I repeat that these evils are very extensively encouraged by church members and Christian professors. This is one cause I assign for this great curse of our land.

Now, as to the other part of the above question, What is the remedy for this? One very important remedy, brethren, is this: for the church and her people to take a firm stand against it, and fight it as severely as possible from the pulpit, pew, and through the church papers. The church has been sitting down for years, and only occasionally she would raise any cry against Sabbath desecration. We are neglecting our duties, brethren. Our people do too much work on Sunday. Too many of our good sisters stay away from preaching on Sunday to prepare dinner for the preachers. We have too many Marthas in our church to-day; too many who are cumbered about much serving. Many of our preachers to-day, instead of preaching against Sabbath desecration, are desecrating it themselves by going to their appointments on a Sunday morning's train. No wonder they don't preach against it.

God grant that all the churches of Mississippi and these United States of ours would wake up and take a stand against these evils as the Second Presbyterian Church, of Charleston, S. C., has done, which action has created quite a sensation with some of the secular editors, for instance the editor of the Memphis Appeal-Avalanche, who says, "A strange case of modern intolerance has just come to light in South Carolina." Yes, no doubt it is a strange case, and why is it thus strange? Simply because we, as a church, generally, have let these things go on so long, raising no cry against them, until now, when a church stands up against violating the holy day, it is astonishing to a great many people.

The readers of the ADVOCATE, I suppose, have read the account of the case referred to above, in reference to the action of the South Carolina church; consequently, I will not give it here, but I will say I uphold the action of our Presbyterian brethren, for this is what we need—i. e., preachers and people who will take a firm, decided stand against all forms of Sabbath desecration.

Brethren of the ministry, let us wake up from our sleep of many years and condemn these things, for they are certainly a curse to our land, a disgrace to Christianity, a dishonor to God, and a shame to those preachers and church members who lend their sanction, support and patronage to these Sunday trains, steamboats, or any other devil arrangement to get gain on Sunday.

God help us, as preachers and people, to obey his command, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

F. B. ORMOND.

Why Not, Miss.

The Lord and Storms, etc.

It is a little wonderful how readily and earnestly some people, and occasionally some preachers, try to relieve God of all responsibility in the matter of wind, rain, storms, cyclones, pestilence, diseases and deaths. They lay all these things on the "laws of nature," or charge them upon the devil. They seem to think they have done some great thing when they have gotten the Lord out of this difficulty and free from all moral responsibility for the damage done by wind and rain, and the lives taken by cyclones, by pestilence and by disease, malaria, and the like of that. I have just listened to a sermon of this sort. The preacher ridiculed the idea that God sent rain, or that he sent the wind, or had anything to do with cyclones, storms or the death of people from malarial poison. He laid all these things on "natural law," and on the agency and power of the devil. The preacher evidently thought he had done some great thing—had removed a great stain from the character of God and offered solid comfort to God's suffering and stricken children. He had solved the riddle by getting God's hand out of the affairs of this life. He asserted, again and again, that the views he presented were the truths of God's Holy Word. He told us, over and over, that he would prove it clearly by the Bible before he was done. I listened attentively for the proof. One plain passage from the good Book would have been worth more to me than all his statements, assertions and attempts at arguments. I was not one bit uneasy or troubled about vindicating the character of God. I believed in the "laws of nature," and I believed that these laws were enacted and set in operation and were kept in operation by our God. Nature is not self-creative and self-operative. Something or somebody made nature and gave nature her laws. If God made the laws that work out a storm or a cyclone, he is just as responsible for it as though he blew each separate breath of wind out of his mouth. This explanation of the preacher explained nothing to me. Indeed, it made matters worse. It took God out of the world. It gave to nature and the devil a power over which God had no control. It took away all incentive to pray for rain, or for the rain to stop, or to pray for protection from a storm, or in time of a storm, or to pray for myself or others in time of sickness, pestilence, disease and death. If this were true, then, in all such matters, if I prayed at all, I must pray to nature or to the devil, and not to God. The preacher said God had nothing in the world to do with particular or individual things; but by a general supervision over all things he caused them to conspire so as to "work out good for them that love God, to the called according to his purpose." It seemed to me that things in general—things taken as a whole—were made up of special things, or separate and individual things. Just how God was to control and manage the whole without managing the several parts the preacher did not explain. He evidently held and taught that the devil and the "laws of nature" managed the parts until they got things into inextricable confusion, and then God came in and extracted good out of the tangled mass for the benefit of the godly. In other words, there was a general Providence, but no special Providence.

As the preacher proved nothing by the Bible, when I got home I took my Bible and sat down to see what the Book did say about God sending wind, rain, thunder, lightning, storms, whirlwinds, pestilence, disease, deaths, earthquakes, sunshine, moonshine, clouds, and many other things the preacher said God had nothing in the world to do with—things that were wholly in the hands of the devil and under the control of the "laws of nature." The teaching of God's Word was exactly opposite to that of the preacher on all of these points. How it was that he could have blundered so on matters so explicitly set forth in God's revealed Word was a puzzle to my mind. He must have followed his own mind, or the mind of some other man, for he certainly did not follow the mind of God as set forth in the Bible.

God is a great God, and as great in little things as he is in big things. He numbers the hairs of our heads and marks the fall of a single sparrow. A world inhabited by beings such as we, without wind and rain and storm and sunshine, would be either a desert waste of sand, or an iceberg. Rain, thunder, lightning, storms and cyclones save a thousand lives to one destroyed by them. God gave life and he has a right to take it away when, where, and as it may please him. If we violate the laws of nature, we suffer the natural consequences. God made the laws of nature that way and for that purpose. This was an act of wisdom and of the best special providence. Suffering is essential—yea, absolutely indispensable—to the development of virtue in beings such as we are. It is not a curse for sin, but a grace for virtue, that we suffer in this life. This life is a school, and our best lessons are learned while suffering. "We are made perfect through suffering."

GILDEROY.

"The Death of the Righteous."

From whatever point of view we may contemplate the death of the righteous, it is desirable, and only desirable. Consider it retrospectively, and it has much to make it delightful. It is blessed with holy memories of the well-spent past. The flow of their life-stream has been marked with usefulness, with blessing and moral beauty. Such a death is like a Summer sunset. There is a glory on the evening sky that tells of the shining path the good man has trod, and that he has gone forward to brighter realms above. All the gracious and gentle deeds of the past come about him in his closing hour like angel visitants, looking beautiful as the morning light, to cheer the parting hour. The remembrance of virtuous and successful doing is most grateful to us all. Old people love to tell how they began poor, what hardships and self-denials they endured, and how, by honest industry and honorable dealing and prudent frugality, they made character and won an independence. Old sailors, in the evening of life, when they have retired from the perils of the sea, love to tell how they breasted the storm and outrode the angry waves. Old soldiers tell of hard marches; of mud, cold, and storms; of the perilous assault; of the battle's fiery and dreadful front. Warming with their theme, they shoulder their crutches and show how fields were won. Old ministers, like St. Paul, love to recount their experiences of toil, self-denials, conflicts and victories won for Christ. These thrilling memories cheer and plume the soul for its upward flight.

The death of the righteous is most desirable for its serenity, an inward peace and holy comfort. No remorse; no fear; no work to do. Some one said to Bishop Soule, as he was quietly resting, not long before the last earthly moments, "Bishop, are you praying?" "No, not now; I am waiting." Life's labor was all done, the time of his "loosing" had come, and he was "ready," and now all was quietness, peace and assurance forever.

"So fades a Summer cloud away,
So sinks the gale when storms are o'er,
So gently shuts the eye of day;
So dies a wave along the shore."

The death of the righteous is most desirable in view of its blessed consummations, as the proof and period of the good man's final victory over all his enemies. It is the last fight in the long war for heaven, the battle that secures eternal victory. Always until now, like his Master, the Christian had been tempted, but now temptations are left behind forever. Always until now self-denials had to be endured, but now they are felt and borne no more. Always until now there was work, perhaps, toilsome work to do, but now they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.

The death of the righteous is most desirable because of its glorious anticipations. Now, the good man is going to realize his long-cherished hopes. The rough voyage is past, the sea's tempestuous waves are left behind, his keel is cutting the last wave as he crosses the bar, just ere he lets go his anchor, and furls his sails in the calm haven of endless rest. Through all the past the good man had, through all his toils, his sicknesses and bereavements, looked forward to this hour, as the hour that would end his sorrows, wipe away his tears, and introduce him to the society and the joys of the glorified. We are all of us but the broken fragments of half-buried families. The righteous man had buried full many a loved one, and sorely had he missed and much had he longed to meet them, and greet them again—among them honored parents, precious children, and a great company of faithful friends and companions in warfare and toils. Now the veil that but thinly intervenes between him and the vision of the redeemed and crowned is lifted, and as earth fades away heaven is fully revealed to his raptured vision, and at once he is forever with his Lord and all his saints. What more of majesty, glory and blessedness there is we must die to know. Then every longing shall be satisfied with full salvation blest.

Annual Conference Resolutions.

The action of the Board of Missions in calling for the week of prayer and self-denial was suggestive to Conference Boards that something must be done. We can but commend the zeal of the Boards, yet zeal without sanctified common sense is prolific of evil.

At the Natchez session of the Mississippi Conference the report of the Board was read with the "inevitable" resolution. And in this case, at least, the resolution was a lawless procedure; nevertheless it was adopted by a majority vote.

The resolution seems to have been purposed to have a binding effect on the members of that body after its (then) present session was closed. In other words, a law was adopted in regard to the conduct of certain affairs for the forthcoming year. Now, I submit that the Annual Conference was organized for certain purposes, and beyond those purposes it has no authority whatever.

It is not in the disciplinary purpose for the Annual Conferences to make any "rule and regulation." That power resides in the General Conference, and until that body delegates its rights in that respect it must so remain. But all the powers of the Annual Conference were derived from the General Conference. But there is no record of its ever having derived this one of making "rules and regulations." Indeed, it would be an absurdity to have each Annual Conference a law-making body, and where a thing is wrong in principle it can't be right in particular cases, for all innovations of principles are errors.

Then, are we expected to regard these resolutions or not? We are answered that they express the will of the majority and that the majority rules. But that don't make it right. A majority of the people in a certain community are lawless, and mobs thrive in that section. Who will say, therefore, that mobs are right? A majority should rule only when the majority acts in accordance with the law in the case.

Sometimes it occurs that the last hours of a Conference session are very mob-like. An almost insane eagerness to get away makes level-headed men giddy for the time, and measures are rushed through in a most careless manner, and the actions of men in such times astonishes no one else more than themselves when they see it down in cold, hard type.

Imagine a half-dozen committee reports, each with a set of resolutions that are to go out to the world as the sense of a hundred and fifty or seventy-five ministers and laymen, met in solemn, serious Conference, being rushed through within half an hour, and you see a fair picture of the closing hours of the last session of the Mississippi Conference.

It is good for us that such majorities are not given law-making power.

The Bible in Japan.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me through our Conference paper to give some account of the "Japanese Bible Work" committed to me. Five years ago I felt impressed to go to Japan and distribute the good Word of God among those who needed it so greatly, and it seems were made ready for it, as "a people prepared of the Lord." About this time Dr. J. C. Hepburn, "the veteran translator," with others, had completed the translation of the Old Testament, and on Feb. 3, 1888, before a congregation made up of Christians from three continents in the city of Tokio, Japan, took the Old Testament in one hand and the New Testament in the other, and reverently laying them down, said: "In the name of the whole body of Protestant missionaries in Japan, and of the whole church of Christ in America and England, I make it a loving present to the Japanese nation." The people prepared, the book ready, an agent called.

At the last session of our Conference the good Bishop unbolted the door, and by the help of the Lord the agent will soon be in the field with a thousand copies of this precious Word to give to the destitute. Those books are "free-will offerings" from persons here whose names and addresses will be written in the books before they are given away.

Twenty-six towns and villages in Mississippi and five in Arkansas were visited in the interest of this work, and contributed as follows: Shuqualak, 11; Muldon, 22 (all from the Lenoir families); Strongs, 61; Prairie station, 19; Bowling Green, 25; Lexington, 14, Early Grove circuit, 57; Victoria, 29; Holly Springs, 57; Byhalia, 16, Red Banks, 6; Acona, 31; West, 18; Durant, 19; Grenada, 28; Goodman, 11, Jackson, 55; Pelehatchie, 10; Morton, 12; Forest, 23; Newton, 9; Hickory, about 17 (exact number not at hand); Meridian, 37; Macon, 21; Mayhew, 10; Aberdeen, 44. Other places in Mississippi (one or two in a place) 15. The total number in Arkansas, 371.

These numbers may not be exactly correct in every case, for several times subscriptions were received by mail after leaving a place and entered with other towns. With these most valuable of all gifts, I go rejoicing, feeling that they are accompanied by earnest prayers. And the Lord saith, "My Word shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

Early in this work some friends encouraged me. May the Lord reward them all! Among them let me mention Rev. L. M. Stone, of the Baptist Church, and Rev. T. J. Newell and Dr. J. W. Price, of the North Mississippi Conference.

My address will be Bellbuckle, Tenn., till the thirtieth instant; then Chicago till June 10; then Vancouver, British Columbia, till the day of sailing, June 26. Stopping at Yokohama for a day or two, I expect (D. V.) to go to Kobe to attend the session of our Japan Mission Conference. Letters addressed me at Kobe, Japan, after the twenty-sixth, will probably reach me earlier than to any other point.

Yours in the love of Christ,

BENJAMIN S. RAYNER.

Woman's Work.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Columbus district convened in Columbus at the Methodist Church, April 10, at 10:30 A. M.

The Conference president, Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, with her usual dignity and executive ability, ably presided over the meeting, urging not only diligence in the business workings of the auxiliaries, but especially diligence in spiritual affairs.

Truly, the Spirit of God was with us in all our deliberations, from the beginning even to the close. With appropriate devotional exercises the meeting was opened by the president, thus preparing us spiritually for the day's work before us. A fair representation from the district was present, each face beaming with enthusiasm and interest in the great "woman's work for woman"—the cause which lies so near every Christian heart.

After the roll call of delegates the address of welcome was most ably delivered by Mrs. J. W. McElroy, in which, after assuring all visitors of a most cordial welcome from the workers of Columbus, she portrayed in most touching manner the welcome in store for those who love the Lord in our Father's mansion, "the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

In behalf of the district, Miss Evelyn Connell, of Mayhew, responded to the address of welcome, after which the district secretary, Mrs. McElroy, made an encouraging report of her work for the past year. We have eighteen societies in working order and flourishing condition, with the missionary spirit continually increasing. Our pastors, Bros. Standefer and Harrison, with the Sunday-school superintendent, Dr. W. L. Lipscomb, were introduced by the president and greeted by the society, after which a motion to adjourn to meet again at three P. M was carried.

The afternoon session was opened with devotional exercises by Mrs. Dr. Ervin. The house was called to order by the president, and the minutes of the morning's work read and adopted. The roll of auxiliary societies was called, and reports from thirteen were read. After hearing these reports we more fully realize the immensity of the work before us, and though most of the organizations are in thriving condition we think the spiritual tonic—viz.: a mixture of fidelity, service and love—prescribed and successfully tried by one of the societies would materially benefit each society in our district. Sisters, let's try it.

The president sketched most forcibly the plan and workings of the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, showing most clearly that it supplies a long-felt need. She also urged the necessity of enlisting the women of every community in the parsonage and home mission cause, the twin sister, as it were, of the foreign mission work. The minutes of the afternoon session were read and adopted, and the business having been finished, the society adjourned to meet for a literary meeting at eight P. M.

The night session was opened with devotional exercises by Bro. Standefer. For a short time Mrs. E. D. Yeates, of Starkville; Mrs. Saunders Billups and Miss Nannie O'Neal, of Columbus, entertained the audience with papers and readings on the subjects, "Should the Stringency of the Times Justify our Neglect of the Nickels and the Dimes?" "Methods of Work," and "Thanksgiving and ——." But the special order of entertainment was an address by our president on the subject, "Does God Have Need of Woman in the Spread of His Kingdom, and Has She a Place in the Labors of His Vineyard?"

Mrs. Hargrove highly entertained a large and appreciative audience for quite a while, proving satisfactorily the affirmative side of the question. After the address a test was made of the true missionary spirit of the audience by passing around the collection baskets.

After a song, the benediction was pronounced by Bro. Standefer, and we feel that each missionary worker went away with renewed inspiration, renewed energy, and renewed resolve to "toil and pray till from pole to pole the tidings of free salvation roll."

Assistant Secretary.

Indian Mission.

MR EDITOR: Please allow me to report the following amounts received since last report on Indian Mission: NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, $5; Rev. J. D. Crymes, $2; P. H. Hale, King, Miss., $2 50; Miss M. E. Robinson, Brandon, Miss., $2; and last, but not least, Mrs. Rev. P. A. Johnston, Jackson, La., $5 on salary of missionaries, $5 to help build churches, and $5 to buy land for the Indians. The $10 to build churches and buy land to be paid when needed.

Many thanks to the brethren and sisters, and a fervent prayer to the great Head of the church for a special blessing upon them all. Oh, that we had many like Sister Johnston, that are able, that would send me something for all of the above purposes! If we did, we would soon make it a grand success, and something we would all be proud of.

Brethren and sisters, I ask you, in the name of our Lord, not to defer this matter longer. Do not hold the Lord's money, for he hath need of it. Surely we have waited too long already. To delay is death. What we do ought to be done quickly. We have everything to encourage us. The Lord has blessed our efforts far beyond our most sanguine expectations. "The Lord has done great things for us, whereof we are glad." Just think of twenty-four souls being brought from heathen superstition and darkness to the glorious light of the gospel of Christ, with only one missionary, and everything against him, in one year, and then doubt, if you can, if the hand of the Lord is not in this matter!

Now, what will we do? One quarter has passed, and nearly half of the second quarter, and we lack about $71.75 of having enough to pay first quarter, and none on second. Now, shall we let our faithful missionaries labor in a hard field and us withhold their pay? If so, I am afraid the Lord will visit us with his judgments more severe. May God help us to do our duty in this matter, and do it at once! Many subscribed on the installment plan, with the understanding that when it was needed, it would be paid. The second installment is and has been due for some time, and is very much needed. And I was appointed at our last Annual Conference to collect and pay the salary of our missionaries quarterly; but have not been able to meet the payments promptly.

Now, that our missionaries be paid, it is necessary for all that have subscribed to pay promptly, and many others, as we have not enough subscribed by half.

Now, brethren and sisters, please do not wait one for another. There is no danger of getting too much; the great danger is that we will not get enough. If you have subscribed, it is now due, and please do not delay, but send it as soon as you read this; or if you feel that you owe the Lord and the poor Indians anything, and purpose helping, please send amount at your earliest convenience. Send, as before stated, to me at Oak Ridge, Warren county, Miss. Send check, draft, or money order on Vicksburg or Jackson, Miss., or by registered letter. I wait anxiously.

Your brother in Christ,

A. D. MILLER.

Oak Ridge, Miss.

P. S.—Any amount will be gladly received for salary, building, or buying.

INTRODUCTORY.

The Book of Ecclesiastes is one of the so-called "Wisdom Books" of the Bible. The name is applied to those books in which the importance of obtaining wisdom is the most prominent thought presented. Under this head have been grouped Job, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes and Solomon's Songs. This book (Ecclesiastes) is usually attributed to King Solomon, and, while the tendency of modern criticism is rather against this view, we can not do better than adopt the generally accepted view as probably correct, satisfied that though the question of its authorship can not be certainly known, the teachings of the book are in large measure the same as those of Solomon's acknowledged writings, and that the book is intended by its author to present the teachings of the great king. It is well to note the fact that the question of authorship, though interesting, is not of very great importance, as it effects no doctrine, and the question of inspiration does not turn upon it. The purpose of the book is to guide men in the search for the greatest good. This is done in a series of skillfully selected pictures, in which the objects of human effort are shown to be fruitless and vain, until at last "the conclusion of the whole matter" is reached, and human good is found in human duty, and human duty in obedience to the divine command.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—THE FEAR OF GOD.

Ver. 1. The fear inculcated is a filial, reverent fear. This is God's house, and he is the infinite and holy one, and thou art finite and unholy. Go reverently and with a teachable spirit. The rash and presumptuous worshiper offers the sacrifice of fools. To be reverently silent and teachable is better. David prayed: "Keep back thy servant from presumptuous sins," and Samuel said to Saul: "Obedience is better than sacrifice and to hearken than the fat of rams."

Ver. 2. Reverence in worship is still the thought. Discreet lips and an humble heart should characterize the inhabitant of earth who approaches in worship the Lord of heaven. Use not vain repetitions, imagining that thou shalt be heard for thy much speaking. "Let thy words be few."

Ver. 3. Just as the dreams of night reflect the engrossing thoughts and varied business of the day, so the weak and endless chatter of a fool gives evidence of his weakness and folly. But reverence and wisdom teach us to be careful of our words in God's house.

II.—FIDELITY TO GOD.

Ver. 4. From hasty words of prayer to hasty vows the transition is easy, and the "preacher" declares the necessity for fidelity in paying the vows made to God. The inference is that he who makes a vow to God and breaks it is a fool. To make a vow and not pay is trifling; to be a trifler is to be a fool; and there is no pleasure to God or man in a fool.

Ver. 5. The lesson is not that vows are wrong or that a man may or may not vow. Some vows must be made, and a failure to vow is to repudiate just obligations. The great lesson sought to be inculcated is the importance of keeping or paying one's vows.

Ver. 6. Let not thy mouth frame excuses for the non-performance of duty, and thus cause thy body to sin. "He that sweareth to his own hurt and changeth not" is the man who finds favor in God's sight. The angel of the covenant is a listener to the debate which one carries on with his other self in getting his consent to violate his vow to God.

Ver. 7. By many words in prayer and by a wordy tissue of sophistry concerning our vows we may deceive ourselves, but God reads the heart. A loyal heart is better than a wordy excuse. "Therefore fear God."

III.—JUSTICE TO MAN.

Ver. 8. From fidelity to God we easily pass to fidelity to men, and from fidelity to men to justice to men. When thou seest the strong oppress the weak, do not marvel at it as though the watchful and merciful God had forsaken his people. God's providences may be mysterious, but it is never at fault. There are no dropped stitches in God's sewing. God sees it, and from one hand retributive justice shall fall upon the oppressor and from the other the reward of the righteous shall be bestowed upon him.

Ver. 9. In this verse a great economic truth is stated. The high are dependent upon the low; the rich upon the poor; the king upon the subject. As Solon said: "A damage to the meanest citizen is a damage to the whole state." The very act of oppression shall be made to recoil upon the head of the oppressor. The king is dependent upon the labors of the meanest tiller of the soil.

Ver. 10. And if the oppressor should succeed in hoarding up his ill-gotten gain, it will not satisfy him: If by his oppression of his people the king should not impoverish himself, but should become possessed of the silver that he loves, it will not satisfy him. It is not what he has, but what he is that makes a man happy.

Ver. 11. Comment is useless here. Who has not seen or felt the force of the wise man's words? All any man can get from his wealth is what he eats and wears, and the frugal needs of the poor man are as perfectly supplied from his modest income as the ever-increasing demands upon the fortune of the rich. The muster roll of unhappy rich men in every land and time is a striking witness to the truth of this verse.

Ver. 12. By "the laboring man" is meant the man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow. His honest and laborious toil and his freedom from many anxious cares secure him sleep, while many things conspire to rob the rich man of that which comes to his humbler neighbor, a gracious gift from God.

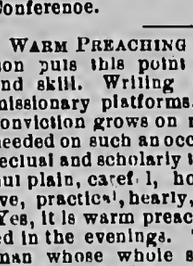
POINTS FOR PREACHERS.

FAITH IN GOD.—When I look at the ministry to-day, I confess to some fears. There is too much place-seeking, too much worldly ambition, too much personal ease. When you are asked, "Have you faith in God?" it means more than simple saving faith. Any Christian has that. It means that Christ is all in all—that he is head over all things to you. If that is not consecration, then I do not know what consecration is. I want you to know fully what you are doing. Every man who enters this ministry must be willing to give up everything else. You must guarantee to use all your powers for personal advancement in knowledge and piety. You do not know everything. When you come to look back after forty years of ministerial life, you will wonder that you opened your mouth to utter God's Word. These old men have forgotten what you now know, and I trust that when you are old you will have forgotten it too. The movement onward and upward involves Paul's statement, "forgetting the things which are behind." The movement is upward. We are not bound by any ecclesiastical claims. If there is any freedom of thought and power, it is in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. I do not want you to stagnate. I do not want you to spend a single day without learning something. If ever the day comes when you feel like doing nothing go into your closets, and stay upon your knees till you feel the electric fires thrilling every fibre.—Bishop A. W. Wilson, at Little Rock Conference.

WARM PREACHING.—Dr. A. T. Pierson puts this point with sharpness and skill. Writing of speeches on missionary platforms, he says, "The conviction grows on me that what is needed on such an occasion is not intellectual and scholarly treatises or essays, but plain, careful, thoughtful, suggestive, practical, hearty, warm speeches." Yes, it is warm preaching that is wanted in the evenings. The work of the man whose whole soul is all aglow with thankful joy in the great redemption, and passionate longing for the honor of the Redeemer in the salvation of men. It may be that what is called gospel preaching is too often the utterance of mere platitudes; but it is not such preaching that we commend. What we mean is the consecration of the very highest intellectual and spiritual powers to the work of grasping clearly, and setting forth effectively and persuasively, the great primary truths of the gospel. That is the hardest work that any man ever undertakes to do. No graver mistake is ever made than that of calling the primary truths of the redemption "simplicities;" they are in fact profundities, calling for our best and noblest powers. And it may be added that it is no easy thing to get simple truth into men's minds, and hearts, and lives. The late Henry Simon had a sharp saying, "It is not our work as ministers to tell the truth, but to make the truth tell." But how few men can really do that!—Treasury.

Eyesight Saved

After Scarlet Fever, Diphtheria, Pneumonia and similar diseases, Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled to thoroughly purify the blood and give needed strength. Read this:



Clifford Blackman.

"My boy had Scarlet Fever when 4 years old, leaving him weak and blood poisoned with canker. His eyes became inflamed, his sufferings were intense, and 7 weeks he could not open his eyes. I took him to the Eye and Ear Infirmary on Charles street, but their remedies failed to do any good. I began giving him which soon cured him. It saved his sight, if not his very life." ARMOR F. BLACKMAN, 2888 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

THE WORLD'S FAIR
And American Railways.

THE QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE, widely known as the road running the "Finest Trains in the South," is in the field to carry everybody from the South to the World's Fair at Chicago. No part of the Southern country is left uncared for by this great railway and its connections. The Through Car System is an admirable exposition of the wonderful capabilities of American railroading. From New Orleans Through Sleeping Cars run daily, morning and evening, carrying its passengers via Cincinnati or Louisville, as they may select.

From Shreveport, Vicksburg and Jackson another Through Sleeping Car Line comes to join and become a part of the magnificent Vestibuled Through Trains, which passing through Birmingham and the famous Wills Valley of Alabama, is joined at Chattanooga by the train from Jacksonville, Fla., Brunswick, and Atlanta, Ga., over the E. T. V. & Ga. Ry., and proceeds north over the beautiful Cincinnati Southern, through the grandest natural scenery and most attractive historical country in the world, to Oakdale, where another magnificent Pullman car is received, coming from the Richmond & Danville System from Charleston, S. C., through Columbia, S. C., the beautiful French Broad country, and Asheville, N. C., and Knoxville, Tenn.

The time to Chicago is made so as to afford the most convenient hours for departures from the principal cities, and arrivals in Chicago.

Passengers can purchase tickets good over one line north of the River, and returning via another if they desire a variable route without extra charge. Or they can go via Cincinnati, returning via Louisville, or vice versa.

Round-trip tickets on sale at reduced rates. Agents of the Chicago line will on request assist in looking up rooms or accommodation for visitors to the Fair.

Everything that an almost perfect system can devise to deserve the praise and patronage of the traveling public has been provided. Any of the agents of the company named below, will cheerfully give all possible information and assistance. R. H. GARRATT, New Orleans, La.; I. HARDY, Vicksburg, Miss.; J. R. BRIEFS.

Remember this: Not all the wild,
Huge, untamed elements have force
To reach thee, though the seas were piled
In weltering mountains in thy course—
Only thyself, thyself can harm.
Forget it not; and full of peace,
As if the South wind whispered warm,
Wait, then, till storm and tumult cease.

Celia Thaxter.

See how this country is growing! In 1850 there was one criminal in every 3,500 of our population, but in 1890 there was one criminal in every 786. That is a growth to be deprecated.

The circulation of the Bible is most wonderful. "Since 1804 no less than 230 000,000 copies of the Word of God have been put in circulation by Bible societies alone, to say nothing of all the private publishers and booksellers who have been engaged in their distribution. The American Bible Society has sent out 55,531,908 copies. Last year it printed 400,900 complete Bibles, 370,705 Testaments, 141,000 portions of the Bible, and 682 Bibles for the blind." And yet some people tell us religion is dying out.

There started in Scotland, we believe, a semi-religious organization called "The Boy's Brigade." The boys are organized into military companies, but the only religious feature of this army of youngsters is that membership is conditioned on good behavior and attendance at church. The organization is growing in this country, but we doubt that good will come of it. How you can make boys religious by fostering the fighting spirit is an insoluble problem. As a rule, brass buttons, parades and military airs will catch the boys, but such are not becoming to the soldiers of the cross. We do not believe the Prince of Peace ever smiles approval upon a military training. The whole thing is opposed to the principles enunciated in the Sermon on the Mount.

A good many churches are born of religious spunk and sectarian zeal, and both are out of place in this evangelistic age. No denomination should now attempt to plant a church of its own in a field already occupied without conference with representatives of sister denominations. To do so is to ignore all the principles of Christian comity and economy as well. It is a sin in these days to oversupply a community with missionary churches, for among other things injurious it involves the misapplication of funds given to supply the really destitute with religious privileges. Two-fifths of the Presbyterian and Congregational Churches average less than fifty members, yet each of these dependent struggling churches wants the entire time and service of one missionary. Why not unite where two or more such weaklings are found in the same village or town? Our missionary field has been so long studied from a denominational view point that it is all the more difficult to introduce the idea of co-operation and union.—Review of Reviews.

Unload the Preachers.

The first work of the next General Conference should look in the direction of protecting our preachers, by taking off their shoulders the burdens which do not belong to the preacher's calling. That they are now burdened with duties which do not belong to their office, and that these duties are increasing to an extent that seriously interferes with their legitimate work, is apparent to the most casual observer. The preacher is no longer a preacher! He is a sort of "Jack of all trades." He has to dabble in so many things that he does nothing perfectly. If St. James' "double-minded man was unstable in all his ways," what shall we say of the modern Methodist preacher whose mind is drawn in a dozen different directions during every day of the week?

He is a general collector, having from five to ten collections to raise, and he is rated in the Conference Ministerial Agency according to his success in bringing up the money assessed to his charge. He is a general superintendent of church societies, having supervision of enough of these to take up every evening of the week and something more. He is pastor of a congregation numbering from one hundred to fifteen hundred or more, and nobody but such a pastor knows or has imagination lively enough to conceive of the multitudinous calls of that position. He is a funeral director, and is compelled by an absurd and unjust custom to spend three or four times as much time in attendance upon funerals as necessity demands. In fact, the Methodist preacher is now a sort of general purveyor to the public on many lines of service, where he has not the least business, and every one of which weakens his efficiency as a preacher.

It is a matter of surprise how soon the tendency to burden the preachers with extra work showed itself in the church. The halo of Pentecost had not faded before the effort was made to fasten upon the preachers the duty of "serving tables." But the apostles were wise enough to see that such action would greatly hinder the spread of the gospel, and firm enough to resist that action. They said: "It is not reason that we should leave the Word of God and serve tables." They said: "Look out men of good report whom we can appoint over this business, and we will give ourselves continually to prayer and the ministry of the Word." That disposition to burden the preachers with what does not belong to their office, and which in the early church was resisted by apostolic authority, has gradually grown in the church until to-day, and now the preacher stands, not only with the responsibilities of all church work resting upon him, but he is expected and required by custom to do a large part of it all. Is it any wonder there is so little thorough preaching. Is it any wonder there are so few pulpit prayers which take hold on heaven? Is it any wonder there are so few poignant convictions of sin under the preaching of the Word? Is it any wonder that the pew yawns under dry sermons?

If we could see into hearts and discover motives, would we not see in these unnecessary burdens one reason why so many of our preachers switch off into, what is called, "evangelistic work." They feel that God has called them to preach the gospel and not to serve tables. They know by experience that in the present economy of our church serving tables is the principal thing; so much so that it leaves little time for prayer and proper preparation for the ministry of the Word. By putting these duties upon them, the church itself hinders them from doing in an efficient manner the work God has called them to do, hence they turn aside to that field where prayer and preaching are the principal things, and where they are expected to do nothing but pray and preach. And as long as these extra burdens are put upon the pastors we may expect to see men continually leaving the pastorate for the evangelistic field.

We do not suppose that in the present condition of things the pastor can at once be relieved of all these extra duties, but we do suppose that enough of them can be lifted off his shoulders to bring a great sigh of relief that will reach the hearts of sympathizing angels. Let the General Conference take the burden of collections off the preachers and put it upon the Board of Stewards. That will be a relief which will cause the preacher's heart to sing for joy. If the General Conference will do that, it will do a great work. If it does nothing but that, it will not have met in vain.

Union in Temperance Work.

Good people have been working at the temperance problem for a long time, and we ought to be able to learn useful lessons from a study of that work. That much has been done is apparent, and yet the liquor traffic stands up to-day in larger proportions and in a more threatening attitude than ever before. No one can question the earnestness and sincerity of the temperance workers, and yet to-day the liquor traffic wields a much larger influence than it did twenty years ago. That traffic has "gone into politics," and to-day is the controlling power in every large city on this continent and seems to hold the balance of power between the two great parties in this Republic. A casual observer must see that a moral sentiment in favor of temperance has been created and has grown to be very strong, and yet its strength is not so large and imposing as the strength of the liquor traffic.

In our study of this question the history teaches us two lessons to which we call attention. In the first place, the saloon does not exist in spite of the wants and wishes of men. It is not a matter of "pure cussedness," as some say. Dr. Josiah Strong says truly, when he says: "The saloon flourishes because it meets certain wants, and if we would close it successfully we must put something in its place that will meet all those wants which are legitimate." Here is the cue for temperance workers. Already in England the temperance workers are working on this line in the establishment of coffee houses and cheap restaurants, where working men and women can satisfy their appetites away from the contaminating influence of the saloon. The testimony of those on the ground is that these places pay a fair dividend upon the money invested, and that those who frequent them rarely ever turn again to the saloon, and, best of all, the influence of the saloon is effectually crippled. The point proved is this: Put something in the place of the saloon that will satisfy the wants and appetites, and the saloon becomes a waning power.

The other lesson learned from the history of temperance work is this: Temperance people have not learned yet that in "union there is strength." There is just as much human nature in temperance people as in anybody else, and every little bit of human wants to have its own way and assert its own right to dictate what shall be done and how it shall be done. And while they have been divided the saloon powers have compacted themselves into a solid phalanx. While the temperance people have been striving with each other, the saloon people have been strengthening each other's hands, and to-day they menace Christian civilization at every point. Temperance people handicap themselves with irrelevant issues, while the saloon stands for one thing.

In the name of suffering humanity, we ask if this policy is to be continued? Can't we agree on some one line of work and pursue that with earnest unanimity to the end? What army ever gained a decisive victory with a separate plan of battle carried out by each separate captain? Such a course invites defeat and assures it. If the temperance people will drop everything, and come together and formulate a plan by which everyone can work—if it takes the remainder of this year to do it—it will be a grand presage of triumph.

An Inefficient Protest.

The prompt action of the evangelical churches protesting against the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday seems not to have had the desired effect. The greed for money has overbalanced all the expressed wishes of 20,000,000 of people. The management has turned a deaf ear to protest and remonstrance and openly disavowed its own contract with the government and shamefully violated the law of God and man by opening the gates last Sunday. We had hopes up to last Saturday that this would not be done, but our hopes died then, and Sunday witnessed the grossest outrage that was ever perpetrated upon the good people of the nation.

This action is not only a violation of the Sabbath law, but it is an exhibition of public dishonesty in carrying out a business contract, which puts us in a dishonorable light before the world, and sets an infamous example before the business men which should make their cheeks tingle with shame.

In taking this attitude the management, we think, has taken hold of something a good deal bigger than the Fair. A fight against 20,000,000 of people, backed by the Lord and the government, will just about take up all the attention of the Fair commissioners. Such a ruthless disregard of the principles which underlie the lives of those 20,000,000 of people—such an utter contempt of their entreaties and protests and remonstrances—must arouse the righteous indignation of every one of them. We are quite sure the management has not forecasted the future aright, and we trust it may yet see the folly of its course before it is too late. Otherwise it has in store for itself a conflict persistent and determined, which will keep it busy during the next few months.

The Raging River.

Since our last issue a great crevasse has occurred just below Lake Providence, La., and the Amos levee in Arkansas. The levee for 2,700 feet is entirely gone, and the water rushes through in great volume and with rapid flow. This break insures the complete overflow of the Tensas basin and much of Catahoula and Concordia parishes. Of course, the growing crops are entirely destroyed, or soon will be, as no effort will be made to stop the break. The suffering which will ensue can only be imagined. Thousands of people are reduced at once to the verge of starvation. The State can do nothing to help in the way of supplying provisions to the needy, for the reason that no emergency fund is on hand. The business exchanges in the cities and private parties must come quickly to the rescue of the unfortunate people in the overflowed districts, or there will soon be very serious consequences. Relief committees have been raised and have gone to work soliciting funds and provisions for the needy. The general government and the State are supplying tents to shelter the people who have been forced out of their residences. Gov. Foster has authorized the Relief Committee to draw on him for $2,000.

The outlook is certainly gloomy. The destruction of the crops and the loss of much stock and the throwing out of employment of thousands of people, and the casting of tens of thousands upon the charity of the country for the barest subsistence, brings a condition of things not pleasant to contemplate. Now is the time for everyone to show the quality of his love for his suffering kind. As in former cases of this kind, the ADVOCATE opens a help column. The editor will cheerfully receive and forward any amount the friends of the distressed and suffering feel moved to send for their relief.

A Successful Collection.

The pastor had decided upon the day for the foreign mission collection without announcing it to the congregation. He went ahead and thoughtfully and prayerfully prepared his sermon, and when the day came he delivered it with serious earnestness. At the close of the sermon he announced that the assessment upon the congregation was $290; but he did not want anyone to allow that sum to enter into his calculations as to how much he should give. No one must figure upon what proportion of the assessment he would be required to give to make it up. Let every man and woman give according to ability. Having made this statement, he called the congregation to prayer, and most fervently invoked the gracious presence of the Divine Spirit to enable the people to see their privilege in this matter, and to make them feel that they were giving under the inspection of the divine eye. After prayer, while a suitable hymn was being sung, the collectors passed quietly through the congregation and gathered the free-will offerings of the people, and it amounted to $481.

We would call that a religious collection. It was really an act of worship. How much better that than the calling out proposition plan! Here the matter was simply between each individual and God. There was no rivalry, for no one knew what another was giving. The matter was placed squarely upon each one's conscience, and the response demonstrated that the pastor had acted wisely. We commend with all our heart this kind of collection.

Revival at Louisiana Avenue Church.

We closed the meeting on Wednesday night. All agree that it was a good meeting, and we trust that results deep and abiding were had. There were very many professions of conversion, many persons were reclaimed and the Christians were strengthened mightily. There were preached just fourteen sermons by Dr. Carter, our zealous presiding elder, and by eight others of our brethren, every sermon being a clear, strong exposition of truth and accompanied by the power of the Spirit. Mourners flocked to the altar at every service, and we closed with a number still seeking salvation. There were thirteen additions during the meeting which, with those previously added, make for the year so far forty-eight new members. The faithful service of our organist, Miss Nettie Sutcliffe, and the hearty singing of the choir, under the leadership of Bro. W. B. Thomson, together with the active labors of the Epworth League, greatly contributed to the success of the meeting. The congregations were large from the start to the end, and gave respectful hearing and earnest heed to the messages of God's servants. Not caring to sum up in figures, which so easily mislead, we have only to say that God "hath done a great work for us whereof we are glad." To him be all the glory.

JOHN T. SAWYER.

May 26, 1893.

NOTES.

God made the country and man made the town,
What wonder, then, that health and virtue, gifts
That can alone make sweet the bitter draught
That life holds out to all, should most abound
And least be threatened in the fields and groves?

—Cowper.

The Interior says: "Some Christians use so much energy in making a joyful noise to the Lord that they have no strength left to do the Lord's work."

Rev. J. R. Day, D. D., in New York Advocate, says of the Methodist Churches in New York City, they "are in out-of-the-way places, making heroic struggle to defer the day of extinction."

When Christ calls us to himself to find rest, it is not the "rest of idleness" to which he invites us. It is a poise of soul in him, from which vantage point we can do our best work for his cause.

A pointer for our House. The Baptist Advance Quarterly is issued at nine cents a year, and has a circulation of one-half million copies each quarter. Our Senior Quarterly is issued at twenty-five cents a year, and has a circulation of—how many?

Having a purpose in life is essential to right living. If a man does not know what he is living for, he may well be in doubt whether life is worth living. Unless a man is now living to a purpose, he has either not yet begun to live, or he has got through living; and in either case he is out of place in the world.—Sunday-School Times.

A writer in the Christian at Work closes an interesting article on "Clerical Dress and Manners" with this common-sense remark:

In conclusion, other things being equal, the man who is so well dressed that no one notices his clothes, and has such good manners in the pulpit that no one thinks about his feet, or hands, or face, is the one whose message will engage attention.

A writer in the Chicago Standard gives this advice to young preachers:

Stir up the pews, start up the prayer meetings, stop up the grumblers, set up the socialties, shake up the sleepers, stock up the reading-room, strike up the march of service in all directions, but steer clear of the sewing-circle and the choir. To daily with the higher criticism is as nothing when compared to playing with these. Verily, these are the minister's Scylla and Charybdis, and innumerable are their victims.

While there has been immense improvement in all kinds of machinery that is moved by steam, there has been no improvement in the steam itself. So while there has been much improvement in the machinery for propagation of the gospel, there has been no improvement in the gospel itself. It is "the same old story of Jesus and his love." The most splendid engine is worthless without steam. The most approved methods of church work without gospel presence and power are of no value.

"Faster! faster!" was the cry of Napoleon as his coach whirled toward Paris from the disastrous campaign in Russia. The cry is taken up everywhere to-day. Nothing moves with rapidity enough to satisfy the swiftly-moving thought of the present. Steamships and rail-cars are built under the impulse to meet this demand. Faster and faster they go, and no one can predict any limit to speed. The New York Central sent out a train the other day that made a mile in thirty-two seconds—equal to 112 miles an hour; and the new steamer Campania made the eastern passage to Queenstown in 5 days, 17 hours and 27 minutes, beating all other records by two and a half hours! But even these will not satisfy for any length of time.

The Chicago correspondent of the Christian at Work thus speaks of the Louisiana Building at the World's Fair:

The Louisiana Building is in striking contrast. It is built and ceiled with pine throughout, after the fashion of a simple Southern farm-house. A staircase of cypress leads to the second floor, where already an Acadian colony is installed. A matronly woman is preparing the loom to weave the cotton which two girls are spinning on their wheels. These people are compatriots of Evangeline, known in Louisiana as "Cajans." The dark-browned youth under a light-colored sombrero speaks the dialect one loves in Mr. Cable's stories. They are simple-minded folk, and one can not fail to wonder what stories they will tell when they go back to the languorous sunshine of their cotton, rice and sugar fields. The sharp contrasts are not all between nation and nation.

"Is the Methodist Church Discriminated against by the Revised Laws of Mississippi?"

I suppose "Layman or Sexius" is a lawyer; I am not! Yet his article in the ADVOCATE, of May 25, under the above caption, has caused me to look into the matter complained of, with such aids as I could secure, with the following results: The language of the new code found in section 859, and to which objection is made, is also found in the code of 1880, section 1071; and in the code of 1871, section 2437; and in the code of 1857, art. 52, page 301; and the section in question had its origin, substantially and practically, in the act of Feb. 2, 1838. The new code does not, therefore, discriminate against the Methodist Church any more than has been done since 1838.

It follows, therefore, that the "discrimination" complained of has been on the statute books of Mississippi, substantially, for fifty-five years, and literally so for thirty-six years, and received legislative sanction, at least, five times. It seems to me these facts should have guarded "Layman or Sextus" against undue excitement, and certainly against the use of the following very strong language: "The framer of this statute had a clear idea of the nature and constitution of the leading denominations in this State. He knew well what would include one and exclude another, and by a carefully worded gratification he excludes the Methodist Church from the benefit of the act." I have known, at least, one of three gentlemen who were charged with the responsibility of codifying the laws of 1892, long and well, and I have never seen nor heard of any act of his that would justify the conclusion of "Layman or Sextus."

I submitted the clause complained of to one of the most competent lawyers in the State of Mississippi, and asked him to construe it, with the following result: "I suppose, and still suppose, notwithstanding 'Layman or Sexius,' that the words, 'but the society so organized at each particular locality shall be a distinct and independent society,' were primarily intended to prevent the debts of a particular society or local church from being obligatory and binding on the church at large. If the Methodist Church, the entire body, be a corporation, and the local churches but parts or agencies thereof, and the statute should be written as 'Layman or Sextus' desires, and such agencies be authorized to contract debts, be sued, etc., as is clearly the intent of the law, then without the language excepted to, the entire denomination would be responsible for whatever debts any local church might contract; the consequences of such a condition can scarcely be foreseen."

This seems to me to be a practical, common-sense interpretation of the words themselves, as well as the relation they bear to the entire section. If so, the laws of Mississippi do not discriminate against the Methodist Church; and if it be not so, what have our Methodist lawyers been doing all this long while that they have not discovered and corrected the evil? As stated above, I am not a lawyer, and do not feel myself competent of pursuing the investigation further. I hope, however, that some one who can do so will set the matter clearly before the church over his own signature.

Missionary Debt—Mississippi Conference.

BRANDON DISTRICT.

Fannin circuit, H. R. Caldwell, P. C. $7

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Hazlehurst station, I. W. Cooper, P. C. $5

In the report in ADVOCATE, of May 18, there should have appeared the item of $2 50 contributed by East Baton Rouge circuit, W. L. Linfield, P. C. The amount did not appear.

Many brethren are still in default, and one or two appear to think that getting mad with the Conference solicitor will be sufficient excuse for disobeying the orders of the Annual Conference. Read your vows over again, dear brethren; then keep and perform.

BRANDON DISTRICT.

Trenton circuit, R. A. Sibley, P. C. $2 15

Bro. Sibley writes: "This is the very best that I can do." God bless him for what he has done; and inspire the 427 members on Trenton circuit to greater zeal and liberality for the cause of missions. Nevertheless, they, in their poverty, have done better than several prominent stations in the Mississippi Conference.

One brother denies the right of the Conference to require him to lead his people in the observance of a week of prayer and self-denial! Others seem to think that way without putting their thoughts in writing!

VICKSBURG DISTRICT.

Rolling Fork, W. H. Lewis, P. C. $3 50

SEASHORE DISTRICT.

Big Point Sunday-school, by H. E. Partridge, P. E. $1 50

MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Chunkey circuit, L. P. Meador, P. C. ..... 90c.

Can not every Sunday-school in our Conference, whether in town or country, do as well as Big Point or Locust Grove?

MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Leakesville circuit, W. J. Dawson, P. C. $3

Bro. R. A. Sibley asks that the $2.15 be credited to Raleigh circuit instead of Trenton. "Honor to whom honor is due." Now, let Trenton circuit do better than Raleigh, and Shiloh and Homewood and Walnut Grove and Lake do better still.

Dr. W. R. Lambuth writes: "Old Mississippi must not let up on the missionary debt."

We still lack $1,567 95 of meeting our apportionment. Let the defaulting brethren move up and meet the obligations to the Conference as true sons in the gospel. No remittance from the Jackson district in two months; three from Woodville, three from Seashore, three from Vicksburg, two from Brookhaven, seven from Meridian.

Brethren, don't delay longer. Be hot or cold. Don't be lukewarm.

T. L. MELLEN, Miss. Conf. Solicitor.

Notice.

The Holly Springs District Conference will convene at Hickory Flat, July 7, at 9 A. M., and adjourn on the tenth at 12 M. Opening sermon by J. C. Lowe, Thursday evening, at eight. The Sunday-school Conference will be held Saturday morning, from 8 to 12.

What Science Has Done for Deafness.

TRANSMITTING SOUND TO THE EAR BY THE USE OF A SIMPLE DEVICE.

There is little doubt but that the treatment of deafness has been revolutionized by the invention of Sound Discs. The development and growth of the use of this device is phenomenal, and is well worthy the attention it has received in medical circles, where it has been widely discussed and most heartily approved. A prominent physician has gone so far as to estimate that fully three-quarters of all the deafness which has been relieved in the United States during the past two years has been by the aid of this instrument; and he considers it an easy triumph over this most distressing affliction.

While the idea of such an instrument is not strictly new, yet the restoration of such a large number of desperate and abandoned cases by its use has proven it to be of vastly more importance than was at first supposed. A recent interview with the inventor of the instrument, Mr. H. A. Wales, at his office in Ashland Block, Chicago, discloses how the idea of such an ingenious instrument occurred to him. It was learned that it was first suggested from the fact that most people who suffer from defective hearing, hear better in a noise, or on a moving train, which is caused by the increased vibration of the ear. From this Mr. Wales said he was confident that he could invent a device which could be worn with comfort by the patient, and which would focus the smaller waves of sound on the drumhead, thus increasing its vibration, and enabling the patient to hear ordinary conversation and public speaking. After many experiments the final outcome of this happy thought has been the present device, which must be an ideal one, as it is worn in the ear out of sight for months at a time.

Scott's Emulsion.

To NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE:

DEAR SIRS: It is our pleasure to inform you of a change in our address, owing to removal from No. 132 South Fifth avenue, to the new Scott & Bowne Building. Hereafter will you kindly send papers and address all communications to us to the Scott & Bowne Building, New York City. Our new building is located on New Chambers, Pearl and Rose streets. It is twelve stories high, and is considered the best building of its kind in this city.

It may interest you to know that this new and splendidly equipped building is the direct result of the public appreciation of Scott's Emulsion. You are, no doubt, well aware that we believe in advertising, and we are pleased to take this occasion of expressing our thanks to the newspapers and other periodicals of the country for their many courtesies, as well as to say a word about the importance of advertising any article of merit. While we naturally think that our great success would not have been possible unless Scott's Emulsion possessed superior merit, we do not under-estimate the value of advertising, and we would suggest to every business man that in advertising he finds the best and quickest way to public favor.

You are at liberty to quote this expression of our faith in advertising, if you like, provided, of course, you also set forth the fact that the merit of an advertised article must in the end determine its success. The new home of Scott's Emulsion surely testifies to the value of advertising a praiseworthy preparation.

Yours very truly,

SCOTT & BOWNE.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is, superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

The wonders of electricity are just beginning to unfold. In France very successful experiments in agriculture have been made. From the Manufacturer's Record we copy:

In last week's issue experiments in applying electricity to agriculture and horticulture by means of batteries and electric lamps were detailed at length. A French priest known as Bro. Paulin has also been conducting experiments near Montbrison, France, in the following manner: He planted a resinous wood pole twenty-eight feet high in a field of potato plants. The pole supported a galvanized iron rod on porcelain insulators. The top of the rod terminated in five upturned copper points, and the bottom was connected with a system of wires buried in the earth covering an area of sixty-five feet five inches radius. The result of the experiment showed that the area influenced by the wire produced 198 pounds of potatoes, while an equal area produced 124 pounds of potatoes cultivated naturally. The theory of the pole was that the wire points collected electricity from the air during storms, etc., and by means of the connecting wires distributed it in the ground.

We are glad to see our contributors interested in spelling reform and are perfectly willing that, on ordinary occasions, they shall adopt whatever phonetic forms they please. But in writing for publication they would save us much weariness if they would follow custom. Our pages would present a queer medley if we followed the varied "reforms" which our friends have adopted.—Advance.

HOME CIRCLE.

"THE UNDISCOVERED COUNTRY."

BY EDMUND CLARENCE STEDMAN.

Could we but know
The land that ends our dark, uncertain travel,
Where lie those happier hills and meadows low—
Ah! if beyond the spirit's inmost cavil
Aught of that country could we surely know,
Who would not go?

Might we but hear
The hovering angels' high imagined chorus,
Or catch betimes, with wakeful eyes and clear,
One radiant vista of the realm before us—
With one rapt moment given to see and hear—
Ah! who would fear?

Were we quite sure
To find the peerless friend who left us lonely,
Or there, by some celestial stream as pure,
To gaze in eyes that here were loveliit only—
This weary mortal toil, were we quite sure,
Who would endure?

Home-Keeping, a Source of Power.

BY J. MACDONALD OXLEY.

It is safe to assert that at no previous period in the history of our civilization have there been more influences at work antagonistic to the fullest extension of home life, while at the same time it may, with equal confidence, be claimed that never before was there greater need of this very factor in individual and national development being most sedulously cultivated.

The reasons for this state of things are not far to seek. As regards the influences antagonistic to home life, they are patent to us all. The welkin rings with voices calling us from our firesides. The ever-increasing pressure upon the heads of the family, in order that they may maintain or improve their positions in the commercial and social arenas, demanding more and more of the father's time for office, shop, or factory, and of the mother's for making and receiving calls, giving and attending receptions, and otherwise taking her part in a multitude of social functions; the bewildering legion of attractions and distractions for the sons and daughters—theater, opera, lecture, entertainments of every sort, good, bad, and indifferent—how they do multiply and abound on every side, as if recreation and enjoyment were to be found only by going from home to seek it!

But it is not only from the avenues of money-getting and pleasure-seeking that these voices call to us with ever-increasing insistence. Their invitation appeals to the higher and more altruistic side of our nature with equal, if not greater, force. The growth of organizations and societies having a directly religious or intellectual end in view is one of the most noteworthy phenomena of the latter half of this century. The marvelous Christian Endeavor Society, and its stalwart sisters, the Epworth League, and the Young People's Union, the King's Daughters, the St. Andrew's Brotherhood, the Women's and Young Women's Christian Temperance Union, the Look-up Clubs, Look-out Clubs, Lend-a-hand Clubs, and so forth, and so forth, all aiming at the religious and moral improvement of our neighbors and ourselves; and, besides them, the Shakespeare, Browning, and Tennyson Societies, the Reading Circles, the Conversation Clubs, and so forth, and so forth, designed to develop intellectuality; these gatherings together of men and women, of youths and maidens, admirable, excellent, deserving of encouragement and support as they doubtless are, as they flourish about us have a tendency not only to draw us too much away from our homes, but to create the impression that the best things in life are to be had outside our own family circle, and we must, therefore, go forth to possess them.

Now, in so far as we permit ourselves to be too much drawn away from the hearthstone on one hand, and on the other to come to think that, in order to have a good time, we must turn our backs upon our own doors, we are allowing a positive good to become, in a greater or less degree, according to the extent of our error, a hardly less positive evil; for assuredly no one would venture to argue that any other institution, however high its aim or pure its methods, can effectually take the place of the home for the cultivation of those graces of character and qualities of mind which we have been accustomed to associate with the most durably attractive types of personality.

There is an appositeness here in the well-known lines of Longfellow, himself an almost ideal illustration of the domestic virtues:

"Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest,
Home-keeping hearts are happiest,
For those that wander they know not where
Are full of trouble and full of care:
To stay at home is best."

And there is such a depth of truth in the second line of the verse, that, without undue presumption, we may take upon ourselves to set it off against the axiom of Shakespeare, that "home-keeping youth have ever homely wit," which would seem to consciously or unconsciously constitute a rule of conduct for so many of the young people of our day.

Let me not be understood as seeking in any way whatever to deprecate a due appreciation of the opportunities for mental, moral, and spiritual improvement which throng us on every side, for that is not the purpose of this writing at all. But I do wish to be understood as pleading for no falling off in the estimation of our home privileges, or weakening of conscientious regard for the home duties.

The home must ever be the well-spring of all that works towards the bettering of individual and national life; and this being the case, it is of paramount importance that no effort should be spared to give it the brightest and happiest atmosphere that is possible in this imperfect world of ours.

One point that can not be too strongly emphasized is the imperative necessity for no less courtesy and forbearance being shown one another by the members of the home than is demanded of them in their associate relations. No society, however noble its purpose or ardent the enthusiasm of its adherents, could exist for a week were the same blunt indifference to another's feelings or interest shown at its meetings that is all too common in many homes.

Now, in order for a right measure of home-born happiness to be enjoyed, it is vitally requisite that no less consideration should be felt for "our own" than for the "strange" and the "sometime guest;" and it is just here, perhaps, that so many go astray. Their brightest smiles, their most winning ways, their best stories, their deftest courtesies, are all reserved for outsiders, while those who live with them under the same roof-tree behold them in a state of chronic dishabille, so to speak, the "company manners" with which they clothe themselves in the presence of their friends and acquaintances being flung aside with a sensation of relief in the bosom of the family.

Not only must constant courtesy and mutual forbearance characterize the home intercourse, but it is no less important, particularly from the point of view of the young people, that there should be no undue restraint about the household life. The parents who want their boys and girls to believe that "home-keeping hearts are happiest" must allow them the full run of the house. There must be no "best parlor," as chill, dark, and dreary as a tomb, never used save for "company;" and there must be reasonable liberty allowed in the matter of inviting companions to share a meal or to spend the evening.

Nor must the parents feel that they have accomplished their whole duty when they have done this. They must, so far as other duties permit, give their children the benefit of their company. A striking illustration of the right and the wrong way of living has recently come under my notice. A house near by changed tenants last Spring. Curiously enough, the family that left and the family that came were almost similar in size and composition; and I could not help being impressed with the different use they made of their home. The first family lived in the back; the spacious front drawing-room was rarely lit up; the father went to his office immediately after the evening meal, and the mother seemed constantly cumbered with much serving, while the young people either hung about a stuffy dining-room or went to their own rooms, when they did not go out to spend the evening in some more attractive place. The second family use the drawing-room as if they were not a bit afraid of it. It is brilliantly illuminated as soon as night falls, and there the father, mother, and young folks gether to study and read, and chat in thorough comfort.

The fact of the matter is, that nothing is too good for home. Home-born happiness is worth having at any price that is likely ever to be asked for it. Money won't buy it, but love will; and love is the cheapest as well as the greatest thing in the world. Only let our homes be happy ones, and many of the problems now vexing society will solve themselves. In happy homes lies the secret of national goodness—and greatness, too.—Sunday-School Times.

Letters of Condolence.

To write a letter of congratulation on a happy event in the history of a friend is a comparatively easy task. Words of cheer and felicitation fall trippingly from the pen as from the tongue. The letter of condolence requires more care, more delicacy, a greater comprehension, a fuller recognition of the friend's character and environment. Many people hesitate to write their thought of sympathy to one who is suffering under the first surprise and bewildering shock of a deep bereavement. The impulse is strong to put forth a hand in the dark and give the warm clasp which means, "I am sorry," "I grieve in your grief," "I would help you if I could;" but quick upon its heels tread the suggestions of caution. "I do not know her well enough to intrude," whispers an instinctive refinement of pity. "My rude thrusting in of myself would only tear open the wound afresh." "Should I attempt to speak words of consolation they would sound like platitudes, appear conventional or perfunctory." The arguments are often so reasonable in their appeal to common sense that the original tender impulse is resolutely crushed back; one prays for one's friend, but does not directly address her.

In most cases the silence is a mistake. Occasionally it is better than speech, we grant, particularly when those of whom we think are mere acquaintances, not even in the outer circle as yet of friendship, or when the sufferers are specially shy of manner and reticent of nature.

Usually, however, the letter of condolence, if short, earnest and sincere, is an olive branch of promise borne as by a very messenger dove of peace over the wild, whirling waste of snow. The simpler it is, the surer its errand of mercy. The sooner it is sent, the more speedily its tender balm is laid on the aching heart. On the whole, it is always very nearly safe to trust to the early friendly impulse, and to disregard the later detaining hand of caution.—Harper's Bazar.

Giving Pleasure.

A little thought will show how vastly your own happiness depends on the way other people bear themselves toward you. The looks and tones at your breakfast table, the conduct of your fellow-workers or employees, the faithful or unreliable men you deal with, what people say to you on the street, the way your cook and housemaid do their work, the letters you get, the friends or foes you meet—these things make up very much of the pleasure or misery of the day. Turn the idea around, and remember that just so much are you adding to the pleasure or the misery of other people's days. And this is the half of the matter which you can control. Whether any particular day shall bring to you more of happiness or of suffering is largely beyond your power to determine. Whether each day of your life shall give happiness or suffering rests with yourself. —Selected.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

LITTLE GIRLS.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Where have they gone to—the little girls,
With natural manners and natural curls?
Who love their dollies and like their toys,
And talk of something besides the boys?

Little old women in plenty I find,
Mature in manners and old of mind;
Little old flirts who talk of their "beaux"
And with each other in stylish clothes.

Little old belles, who, at nine and ten,
Are sick of pleasure and tired of men,
Weary of travel, of balls, of fun—
And find no new thing under the sun.

Once in the beautiful long ago,
Some dear little children I used to know;
Girls who were merry as lambs at play,
And laughed and rollicked the livelong day.

They thought not at all of the "style" of their clothes,
They never imagined that boys were "beaux"—
"Other girls' brothers" and "mates" were they;
Splendid fellows to help them play.

Where have they gone to? If you see
One of them anywhere send her to me.
I would give a medal of purest gold
To one of those dear little girls of old,
With an innocent heart and an open smile,
Who knows not the meaning of "flirt" or "style."

MR. EDITOR: I thought I would write a few lines to the dear old ADVOCATE to-day, as I have never written a letter to the cousins before. I like to read the dear old ADVOCATE, as it is always full of good reading. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Miss Sarah Sherrod is my teacher. I like her very much. I was pleased very much indeed with the Book of Job. I think it was real interesting. I wonder how many of the little cousins have read through the Book of Job? Bro. K. M. Harrison is our pastor this year, and is a splendid preacher. We have preaching once a month. I will answer some of the cousins' questions. Annie Thomas asked who was the meekest man spoken of in the Bible. It was Moses. Belle Cook asked, Why was Daniel cast in the lions' den? It was because he prayed three times a day. I will close by asking the cousins a question: Where is "looking-glass" found in the Bible? I remain,

Your unknown friend,
MINERVA E. FARLEY.

Columbus, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old. I live with my grandpa and grandma. I will tell you about my pets. I have a cat named George, and a hen and twelve little chickens, and a sweet little canary bird named Dan. I have five cows. We have so many pretty flowers. I do not go to school, but study at home. I study second reader, geography, spelling and arithmetic. My aunt takes the ADVOCATE.

The Salmon's Annual Migration.

Every year, as the Summer season approaches the salmon of the Atlantic Ocean leave their feeding-ground in the northern seas and enter the clear, cool rivers of the extreme eastern United States and the Canadian provinces. Impelled by a singular instinct, this noble fish, day after day, week after week, works its way toward the heads of the streams, up the swiftest rapids and through the quiet pools, leaping every obstruction. During the whole Summer this great army pushes onward, dividing at the forks of a river and breaking up into still smaller bands where tributaries enter. Of the great multitude that left the ocean, every fish has reached the very spot, the very pool where it was born and lived the first eight months of its life—except the many that never passed the cruel nets, and those that jumped at the beautiful flies which are tied to long silken lines, or else, dazzled by the gleam of torches, were pulled into canoes by men with spears.

At length the object of their weary march is attained, and so the army disbands. The long journey has been conducted in a leisurely way, only a few miles each day, but with wonderful persistence. Enemies in the water, fishermen with rods and reels, and poachers with spears thin their ranks; but those that reach their home at the heads of the rivers are protected by a wise law, which prohibits their capture from the time when they begin to lay their eggs until the anchor ice, choking the streams, drives back to sea the fish, now lean and hungry with long fasting; for the salmon is a dainty feeder in its Summer home, touching the most tempting and alluring flies only occasionally. Yet a tiny young salmon, called a "parr," having attained the first six or eight inches of its length in fresh water, returns the following year a year-old salmon, or "grilse," of four pounds weight.—Tappan Adney, in May St. Nicholas.

A Mother Humming-Bird.

It is very hard to make acquaintance with humming-birds, they are so very shy and fleet of wing. A gentleman who had a rare opportunity to watch a mother bird and her tiny nest that was built near his room, tells this interesting incident: "One day when there was a heavy shower coming up, just as the first drops fell, the mother came flattering home, seized a large leaf which grew on the tree near her nest, drew it over the nest in a way to completely cover it, then went back to whatever work she had been about when the coming storm disturbed her. The watchers at the window wondered why the leaf did not blow away. They found it hooked to a tiny stick just inside the nest. The storm was over, the mother came home, unhooked the green curtain she had so perfectly put up, and found her babies all dry.

A LITTLE BOY'S REASON.—A little boy was being urged by his mama to go to Sunday-school, but he stoutly contended that he did not wish to go. "Why not, Harry?" said his mama. "Because I don't want to go to Sunday-school and learn to be a good little boy, for you said all good little boys go to heaven, and I don't want to go to heaven; I want to raise chickens this Summer."

Dr. Cuyler tells the story of a little boy, the son of good Presbyterian parents, who was asked the question in the catechism, "What is man's chief end?" and he answered it, "Man's chief end is to glorify God and annoy him forever." There are too many men, says Dr. Cuyler, who act as if that were their chief end.—Exchange.

"What is the meaning of the word 'tantalizing?'" asked the teacher. "Please, marm," said Johnny, "it means a circus procession passing the school-house, and the scholars not allowed to look out."

Why Not?

One evening, as the children were sitting around the table, occupying themselves in various ways, Charlie looked up suddenly from the book he was reading, and asked:

"Fan, do you know how Alexander the Great got his name?"

"Why, his parents named him Alexander, I suppose, and people called him great because he conquered so many countries," answered Fanny.

"Wrong," said Charlie.

"Then I give it up," said his sister.

"Yes, I guess you'll have to," returned Charlie; "you'd never guess. So listen to this," and he read from his book:

"'Alexander the Great was very fond of eggs roasted in hot ashes. As soon as his cooks heard he was coming home to dinner or supper, they called aloud to their under-officers, "All eggs under the grate!" which, repeated every day at noon and evening, made strangers think it was the prince's real name, and therefore they gave him no other; and posterity has been ever since under the same delusion.'"

"Nonsense!" said Fanny.

"Well, nonsense or sense," said Charlie, "here it is in the book, and here is something more: 'Julius Cæsar's name, to be properly spelled, should be Seizer, because he seized not only on most of the known world, but even on the liberties of his country.'"

"Well, I must say," remarked Tom, "you are making the study of ancient history uncommonly interesting. What author have you there?"

"Don't know," answered Charlie, "it is an old book I found in the library. The Odd Volume. A Collection of Odds and Ends, the title-page reads."

"By an odd fellow, perhaps," suggested Tom.

"Yes, that is what it says," said Charlie.

How many of the children who read this can tell why the things Charlie read were only meant in fun?—N. Y. Advocate.

Bruce's Boarders.

Mrs. Foster was busy dusting her dining-room. She had a white cap over her hair, and wore a long blue apron. Knock, knock, knock, went somebody's fingers on the door, and before she could whisk off her cap or say, "Come in!" the door opened slowly and cautiously.

"Who can be coming to see me so early?" thought Mrs. Foster. "O!" as a fair curly head presented itself, "it's Bruce Pettigrew! Well, Bruce, what can I do for you to-day?"

"Mrs. Foster," said the child, bringing in a small tin plate, "won't you please, ma'am, save me your crumbs and apple cores for my boarders?"

"Your boarders?" cried Mrs. Foster.

"Yes, ma'am—the birds, you know. So many of 'em come now, since the snow, that I don't have enough to give them, so I thought I'd bring over my plate and get you to help me. I'd come back for it after dinner," and the little boy was gone without waiting for any promise.

So day after day the little boy and the little tin plate traveled backward and forward, and the birds flocked more and more to the snow-covered ledge of that third-story window. But Bruce's plan did more than feed the birds—more than he knew of, as is the case with most plans for good.

"That baby has the right idea of helping," thought busy Mrs Foster; "he gives all he can himself, and then he takes the trouble to get other people to help. Now, there's Mrs Irwin, she has enough cast-offs to set the poor O'Connors up in comfort. I'll just step over and ask for them."

"An old dress?" said Mrs. Irwin, in a friendly tone; "why, to be sure, if you think that red dress that Mary has just laid aside would do any good;" and before the visit was over Mrs. Foster had more than she could carry home—enough to make the whole O'Connor family happy.

It gave the Irwins a new interest in the O'Connors, too, and in all those poor people in that alley.—Sunbeam.

"He's a Little Fellow."

Walking down the street the other day, says a correspondent in the Detou Journal, I saw a newsboy seated on a grating in the sidewalk, up through which came a little warmth from the basement below. He had something beside him covered up with a dirty ragged old handkerchief, and as I sat down alongside he cautioned:

"Look out, now; don't hurt him."

"What is it?"

He lifted the handkerchief with the greatest care, and there on one of the iron bars, huddled up and half frozen, was a little brown sparrow, just able to fly.

"Where did you get him?"

"In the street over there. Got so cold he was tuckered."

"What will you do with him?"

"Get him good and warm and let him go. He is such a little feller, and so he orter have a fair show."

"And he shall!" said I.

I added my efforts to Jack's, and after a few minutes the bird began moving about in a lively manner and giving vent to his satisfaction in a series of chirps. Jack lifted him, gave him a toss in the air, and away he sailed for his nest.

"He's all right now, Jack."

"Yes, 'cause he's had a boost. Boys kin git along most anyhow," said Jack, as he shivered in the cold blast sweeping up from the river, "but birds are such little fellows that we've got to sort u' h'ist and tote 'm round now and then. He's all right now, and we're all right, and good-by to you."

"Good-by, Jackie," I said, involuntarily raising my hat as the tattered chappie flew round the corner.—Selected.

Explanation Needed.

A few Sundays ago, just as my mission-class had sung the first verse of "Bringing in the Sheaves," I was astonished and greatly amused to hear one of the little boys pipe out, "Bringin' in the cheese? Bringin' in the cheese? I know what cheese are, but don't see none brung in." Another Sunday, while we were singing "Precious Jewels," one dear little fellow cried out excitedly, "There's precious jewel; look, teacher, there's precious jewel," his chubby hand motioning toward little Jule M., the youngest and best-behaved member of our school. Since my late experience I have deemed it wise to carefully explain the meaning of the hymns to these eager, wondering, childish, little minds.—Mary G. Woodhull, in Presbyterian.

"Johnny," said Johnny's little brother, "a fly is a fly because he flies, isn't he?" "Yes. That's it." "And a flea is a flea because he flees, isn't it?" "Shouldn't wonder." "Then why are bees bees?" "Because they be," laughed Johnny.—Harper's Young People.

SIMMONS—ROBERT FLOYD SIMMONS, son of Ducket and Mary Simmons, was born in Natchez, Miss., Aug. 28, 1891, and died April 18, 1893. He was sick only four days, and conscious until a few minutes before he died, calling mama and papa as long as he had any voice. We are so lonely and miss his sweet form everywhere. The home does not seem the same any more, but he is safe in the arms of Jesus. We will try to enter the golden gate, and be with our Floyd forever in the sweet by-and-by.

Floyd, darling, how we miss thee,
Miss thee from thy little chair;
Miss thy little voice at table,
Oh! we miss thee everywhere.

From every door that opens,
And every voice we hear,
We are listening for our darling,
And looking for him to appear.

Thy hands are clasped upon thy breast,
We have kissed thy lovely brow,
And in our aching hearts we know
That we have no darling Floyd now.

But thou art safe in the arms of Jesus,
Free from all sorrow and care,
And the angels seem to tell us,
"Thy Baby Floyd is here."

Yes, thou art safe, freed and at rest,
Thou art gone to thy heavenly mansion,
Taken by One who loved thee more than we,
And who doeth all things for the best.

Thou will watch for us, our baby dear,
At the gates of pearl and gold;
And when life's cares and troubles are over,
And we have run our race,
We hope to meet thee there,
And see thy lovely face.

In memory of dear little cousin Floyd.

RUTH RAAD.

WHETSTONE—MRS. E. C. WHETSTONE (nee Rawlins) was born in Wilkinson county, Miss., Oct. 27, 1819, and departed this life after a brief illness, of paralysis, at her home near Woodville, Miss., March 12, 1893, aged seventy-three years four months and fifteen days.

She was married, June 16, 1836, to J. C. Whetstone, whom, with five children, have gone before, and it is to be hoped that they have gone to the better world, where there is no darkness. She leaves five children and a number of grand and great-grandchildren and relatives to mourn her loss. Mourn not, dear ones, but prepare to meet your dear mama and grandmama in heaven, where there shall be everlasting life.

She has been a member of the Methodist Church for some fifty-odd years. She was a faithful wife and a loving mother. We will not call grandmama back, although our hearts have been torn by this sad affliction. Dear grandmama is not dead, "but sleepeth," and on the resurrection morn will be standing at the beautiful gate watching and waiting to welcome her loved ones.

Her granddaughter, MAY.

CHANEY—CHARLES POWELL CHANEY was born Jan. 27, 1817, in Darlington district, S. C. In 1842 he moved to Barbour county, Ala., and in the winter of 1847 to Clarke county, Ala. In 1848 he moved to Kemper county, Miss., where he resided until called home by death, Dec. 11, 1892, at the age of seventy-five years ten months and sixteen days.

Bro. Chaney joined the M. E. Church, South, in his eighteenth year, and lived a consistent member of the same till so afflicted that he could no longer attend his church. For two years he suffered severe affliction, but bore it patiently, and often sang the Wesleyan hymns he had loved when young and happy. On June 30, 1844, he was married to Miss Lydia Jane Spear, who lives to mourn his loss. No children blessed their home; but in 1852 he took into his home five orphan children, to whom he was ever a tender, affectionate father. Two of these remained in his home until his death, and with his wife gave him the tenderest care through his sufferings. God grant that he and all his loved ones may meet where there will be no more parting!

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THOSE SENDING MONEY.—Remittances should be made only by money orders, express company orders, registered letters, drafts or checks on New Orleans banks or merchants. Drafts on country banks occasion a loss of from 15 to 25 cents per check. Drafts on country merchants we have no facility for collecting. Checks and drafts, also money orders, should be made payable to D. L. Mitchel, Publisher.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results, the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Sympathy for the Distressed.

Our lives are all music if we but touch the chords rightly, so says one of our poets, and we all know there is a golden thread entering into the warp and woof of every-day life that is touched by sympathy for the distressed and suffering. At such a time what a boon to have on hand Dicks' Mul-en-ol to offer as a relief for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains and colic. It is soothing and cooling. Large bottles 50 cents.

25c. for a box of BEECHAM'S PILLS, worth a guinea.

The religious new-paper makes the teaching of the Bible practical and present. It applies revealed truth to daily living, makes it a power in the decisions which must be made in those smaller affairs where the purposes of life are shaped and developed for its great crises. It re-enforces the utterances of the pastor, instructs the church in many ways by the recorded experiences of other churches, and helps to guide and quicken its spiritual life. Most of the new movements by which the churches advance in strength and influence are started by information which is first spread through the religious newspaper. Christians who do not read it know little and feel little their relations to the body to which they belong, and are little moved to join its work to bring the nations to Christ.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The "Exposition flyer" of the New York Central and Lake Shore roads rolled in to Chicago on May 29, making the trip from New York City in twenty hours.

Secretary Gresham has received official notice of the purpose of the Italian government to raise its diplomatic representative at Washington to the grade of an embassy.

The World's Columbian Exposition was opened to the public on last Sunday, and Jackson Park was filled. It is estimated that over 200 000 people visited the Fair on that day.

Wyly's crevasse, in Louisiana, was said to be 2 700 feet wide on May 29, and twenty plantations in East Carroll parish were overflowed on that date. It is stated that the loss entailed by the break will be 250 000 bales of cotton, amounting to $7 500,000.

Secretary Shields, of the Levee Board, left for Lake Providence, on May 27, with 160 tents, 150 barrels of meal, 10 barrels of beef, 4,000 pounds of bacon and 2 barrels of molasses, the greater part of which will be left at Wilton, La., below the Wyly crevasse. Governor Foster has placed $2 000 at his disposal for the benefit of the sufferers.

It is announced that Lieut. Peary's preparations for his coming expedition to the north of Greenland are about complete, and he expects to sail, on June 15 in the sealing steamer Falcon. The expedition will take the same route as the previous one, establish its Greenland quarters in nearly the same place, and expects to spend two years among the polar snows.

The 410 tents ordered by the War Department from St. Louis to Louisiana are said to be sufficient in size to accommodate at least ten persons each, or over 4,000 in all. This is about all that the government can do for the relief of the overflowed. It can not furnish rations, as there is no provisions for such a contingency, and Congress will not be in session until Fall.

Figures from the Treasury Department at Washington give some insight into how the Sherman silver purchase law is forcing the government to pay out gold for silver. In the past year the treasury issued in payment for silver bullion something more than $60 000,000 of coin certificates. During the same period there were presented at the treasury, for redemption in gold, $45 000,000 of these coin certificates.

On May 28 the remains of Jefferson Davis, the lamented President of the Confederacy, was taken from Louisiana soil to their last resting-place in Virginia. There was a brief and impressive ceremony at Memorial Hall, during which Governor Foster officially surrendered the remains to the custody of the State of Virginia. The funeral car was escorted to the train by the veterans and militia. The train left the city at 7:50 P. M.

The season for weighing and testing maple sugar and syrup in Vermont is just closed, and it is reported that the yield has been unprecedentedly large this season. The yield in the Montpelier district is 70 per cent. larger than last year, amounting to 2 390 000 pounds. Nearly the whole of this calls for the 2-cent bounty, and it is estimated that Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont will get some $70 000 this year, which is twice as much as last year.

Now that it has a monopoly of the liquor business within its borders, the State of South Carolina intends to work it for all it is worth, and will not be content with any small margins of profit. The governor says that the cheapest whisky that will be offered for sale will be sold at $3 a gallon, and proportional prices for less quantities, and that none but pure liquors will be sold, and he says that the State will make a profit of $1 a gallon on all the liquor sold.

The expected bill for an injunction to prevent Sunday opening of the World's Fair was filed in Chicago, on May 27, on behalf of the national government by United States Attorney Milchrist, in the Federal Circuit Court. The district attorney does not ask for a temporary injunction, and consequently the case will not be argued until this week. Mr. Milchrist preferred to wait until Chief Justice Fuller arrives in the city. The chief justice will probably hear the case, with two judges of the circuit court.

Probably the most important pension decision ever sent from the office of the Secretary of the Interior to the Commissioner of Pensions was filed last week. It is believed by those high in authority in the Pension Bureau that it will reduce the payment of pensions under the act of June 27, 1890, between $17 000,000 and $20 000 000. It involves the repeal of an order passed by Gen. Raum, and approved by Assistant Secretary Bussey, and a return to the language of the statutes requiring the disability, not of serving brigade, to be such as to prevent the applicant from earning a support by manual labor.

FOREIGN.

In consequence of the official admission that cholera exists at Hamburg, the Berlin police have resumed the use of disinfectants in every quarter of the city.

The Austro-Hungary military budget shows an increase of 10 005,000 francs. The government explains the increase as rendered necessary by the pace set by other powers in expenditures upon their armies. The credits in question will be spread, if need be, over several years.

The typhus fever epidemic is causing much alarm in Morelia, Mexico. In the city hospital there have been many deaths from the disease, eleven of the employees of the institution dying in one day. Recent experiments in the hospital here and in other cities of Mexico show that spirits of turpentine is a great preventive of the fever.

Emperor Francis Joseph gave an audience, on May 27, to the Hungarian and Austrian delegations. The emperor stated that while the friendliest relations existed unimpaired between the empire and all the other powers, still the government was no less bound to the interests of the defence of the empire to develop the military organization by a progressive and uniform process.

Camp Meetings.

The Orville-Whittington Camp Meeting will begin Friday night, Aug. 18, and continue to Aug. 27, embracing the third and fourth Sundays. The ground is in East Feliciana parish twelve miles southeast of Clinton, and four miles northwest of Grangeville. All preachers are cordially invited to attend, and will be cared for free of charge. There will be ample accommodation for all who wish to attend. There will be no gate fee.

The Scottsville Holiness Camp Meeting will begin on Tuesday night, Aug. 8, A. D. 1893, and run for ten days. Our faith looks forward to a glorious meeting. Let preachers and people come. We ask the prayers of the church and of every friend of holiness.

Lord Salisbury during his trip in Ireland received in Londonderry, on May 27, a number of deputations who expressed their appreciation of his lordship's services to the Unionists' cause. Lord Salisbury did not deliver any address in reply, but afterwards reviewed a procession of Orangemen.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

ON THE BEACH.

The twenty-second annual camp meeting will be opened Wednesday evening, July 12, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. & N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 5, and remain on the ground until the twenty-sixth. All trains stop at the grounds during the meeting. Holders of camp meeting railroad tickets desiring to attend the session of the Biblical Institute and Summer School of Christian Workers, can get their railroad tickets extended to August 31.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing Districts Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the ground unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade-trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the rush of the opening of the camp meeting should address communications to W. B. Thomson, chairman Tent and Cot Committee, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Cot Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution towards defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

East End, Meridian.

CHURCH DEDICATION, AND OTHER MATTERS.

Sunday, May 28, was an eventful day ... East End, Meridian, and not only ... East End, but to all Meridian and ... regions around. The District Conference had been held, and promi... ence given to religious exercises, as ... r Book of Discipline directs. Every ...rayer meeting had made manifest the ...resence of the Holy Spirit. The ...reaching by Peebles, Ellis, Breland, ...artridge (presiding elder of the Sea...hore district), Evans, Cammack ...missionary to the Choctaws), Brad...rd, Chambers, Ferguson and Hop...r, while varied and diverse as the ...en themselves, had been eminently ...ractical and honored of God. (But ...s secretary will give details of the ...District Conference.)

Sunday morning dawned bright and ...autiful. At 9:30 A. M. quite a con...regation had assembled, and at 9:45 ...e doors were closed and Rev. Jno. ... Chambers led us a very delightful ...ve-feast. At 10:30 the love-feast ...as closed, and the doors were thrown ...pen to the gathering of the people, ...ho soon filled the elegant house of ...orship, leaving no vacant seat.

Having been disappointed by Bishop ...aygood, and failing to secure Bishop ...ey, Galloway or Keeper, it fell to my ...t, as presiding elder of the Meridian ...istrict, to conduct the dedication ...rvices. Hymn 693 was read by Rev. ... F. Lewis and sung by the congrega...on. Bro. Lewis led us in prayer. ...cripture lessons—Genesis xxviii, 10-..., and Hebrews x, 19-25—were read ... Rev. F. B. Ormond, P. C., of the ...hy Not circuit, and Hymn 696 was ...ng. Then followed the sermon, ...ed on John xvi, 8, which possessed ...e merits of brevity and pointedness. ...wo stanzas of Hymn 697 were sung ...hile the officers of the church—J. B. ...hatfield, T. C. Harmon, W. M. Dixon, ... L. Langford, S. D. Dement, O. D. ...unn, R. L. Farmer, J. F. Mars, Dr. ... P. Partin and C. C. Broome—were ...proaching the chancel. Bro. J. B. ...hatfield, in behalf of himself and his ...other officers and the membership ... the church, presented the house, ...d the presiding elder, in the presence ... the standing congregation, pro...unced the sentence of dedication, ...d then led in the dedicatory prayer. ...his was followed by the sacrament ... the Lord's Supper, in the adminis...ation of which I was assisted by B. ... Lewis, J. W. Chambers, W. W. ...oore and L. P. Meador. The number ... communicants was large. Bro. ...wis then received three persons into ...e church; one on profession of faith, ...d two by certificate—one of them ...m the Baptist Church. At night ... T. Browning, a local preacher ...pplying the Lauderdale circuit, ...reached, and a number of penitents ...elt at the altar for prayer, and sev...al found peace with God through ...ith in Christ.

This beautiful little temple is built ...cording to Plan No. 112 of the Board ... Church Extension Plans. The audi...rium is 32x45 feet. The lecture-...om, 28x28; class-room, 12x16; tower, ...9, with spire 68 feet high. The bel...y is open. The walls are wainscoted ... and plastered with hard white fin..., while the ceiling is of long-leaf ...ne placed diagonally, finished in nat...al wood color, with hard oil finish, ...ile the mouldings, door and window ...mes are finished in walnut stain. The auditorium is seated with circular pews, curved backs and bottoms, made of cypress, pine and walnut in the best style that Enochs Bros. factory at Jackson, Miss., can turn out. The floor is covered with a beautiful carpet, the gift of the Ladies' Aid Society, unmarred by festival or patch-work quilt party. The windows are gothic, filled with stained cathedral glass.

At the Conference, held in Canton in December, 1890, the Rev. H. C. Brown was appointed by Bishop Galloway to East End, Meridian, and some said the appointment was premature and ill-advised, but Bro. Brown took hold with commendable zeal, and soon gathered a small congregation together in a vacant storehouse about 15x20 feet in size. Larger accommodations were soon needed for Sunday-school and congregation. The East End public school building was occupied for some months. A very desirable lot was purchased by the liberality of Bro. Jno. A. Lewis, L. P. Brown, J. B. Chatfield, W. G. Casteel, B. F. Ormond, and others. The first subscription was by Bro. Wyatt. Dr. C. G. Andrews encouraged the members of Central Church, living in East End, to transfer to the new congregation. The membership rapidly increased. Every suggestion looking to the erection of a "cheap" building was rejected. A plan was selected; work was begun. Bishop Galloway "came over to stay a day or two in Meridian," and preached a sermon in Central Church, concluding with a collection of more than a $1,000. This enabled the Building Committee and Mr. Roberts, the faithful master mechanic, to push the work until, in November, 1891, the shell was ready for occupancy. Bro. Brown was returned, but in January, 1892, his health failed, and he had to be relieved of the pastoral charge. Under Rev. N. M. Clark a number of members were added to the church, but nothing was done towards paying off a small debt due the Meridian Sash and Blind Company, or towards finishing the building. When Bro. Lewis came he took hold of affairs quickly, and never was preacher more loyally supported by official Boards, or by the entire membership of a church, than he has been. Never did a people more liberally and cheerfully contribute to build a house for the Lord than have the members of East End M. E. Church, South.

And this is not all that Bro. Lewis has led his people in doing. While so much was being done in East End, aided by John A. Lewis, W. H. McKee, T. C. Harmon, Floyd McKinley and W. B. Hawkins, he went forward, and, by the efficient labor and skill of A. J. Wimberley, had a neat building in South Side ready for the presiding elder to preach in Sunday afternoon, and for Bro. Chambers Sunday night. Four persons enrolled their names at South Side in the afternoon, and ten at night—two on profession of faith. It is expected that this building will be ready for dedication in the early Fall. It is built after Plan No. 19 A—modified in some respects. This gives us four houses of worship in Meridian, all placed in strategic and advantageous points. A fifth will soon be needed if we adhere to the doctrine and discipline of our church, nor undertake to compromise with the world, nor advance Christ's kingdom by strawberry festivals and oyster stews. "The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of hosts." (Haggai ii, 8.)

FROM THE WORK.

DELHI DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The twenty-seventh session of the Delhi District Conference convened at Monroe, Tuesday, May 23, at nine o'clock A. M.

Bishop C. B. Galloway was to have been with us at the opening, but was not able to reach here until the evening of the same day.

Our loved presiding elder opened the Conference with religious services, and in his remarks breathed forth a spirit of devout worship and intense love, and urged the brethren who might be called upon to preach, if they had brought any out and dried sermons with them, to burn them and go to God for a fresh inspiration of his Holy Spirit.

We had a fair attendance of delegates, considering the time of the year and the fact that this is an exceedingly busy time with the farmers, and also from the further fact that a good portion of our district is seriously threatened with overflow, which danger also prevented several of the preachers from being in attendance.

Our morning and evening sessions were fairly well attended by the people of Monroe, while West Monroe, Delhi and Calhoun furnished their quota.

It is needless to say we were glad to have the Bishop with us. He presided with wisdom and urbanity, talked freely and well, and was not averse to giving his views and opinions upon any subject when requested by the Conference. His preaching (for he preached three nights to packed and overflowing houses) was a revelation. Lovingly, wisely, intensely and with prophetic fire he opened the Scriptures to his hearers with such a refinement of clear-sighted vision as enchanted and, at the same time, instructed. I hope and pray that the precedent thus laid down may be followed up year by year, and that our District Conferences will have the advantage of the wise counsels and preaching strength of our superintendents.

Prominence was given to religious services; preaching twice a day, all of it being earnest, practical, and full of the Holy Spirit.

The following facts were revealed by the reports of the preachers: That the spiritual state of the church was far below what it should be; but there is a decided improvement perceptible; a general advancement in Christian life and practice. We have some good Sabbath-schools, but only about one-third as many as we ought to have. That this interest of the church is not developed as it should be; that parents do not use it as a means of grace and growth to themselves and their children, and are very derelict in this regard. That there is considerable repairing, and some building of churches and parsonages, and that most all of our houses of worship are in fair condition, with good titles. That Church Conferences are not held often, it being very difficult to get the people together for such purposes. That the educational spirit throughout the entire district is good; that parents are interested in educating their children, but that the majority of the teachers of the day-schools are not religious, and that but few of our children attend our church schools and colleges. That, as a rule, the disciplinary assessment plan is not followed; that finances are at a low ebb, only about one-fifth of the amounts assessed for the support of the preachers being paid to date. That the collections ordered by the Conference have not been taken, owing to the financial pressure and scarcity of money in the country. That there is a great deal of missionary territory within the bounds of the district which ought to be worked up and occupied. That but few NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATES are taken, and many of them never read. That there is but one Epworth League in the district, viz.: at Waterproof, which is doing great good. In this connection the following resolution will explain itself:

Resolved, That each preacher in the district be requested to make an effort to organize an Epworth League in his charge.

Rev. Frank Henry, a local preacher of the Downsville circuit, who was elected to deacon's orders at Lake Charles last December, came forward and was ordained by the Bishop.

The following brethren were elected as delegates to the Annual Conference, to convene in Homer, Dec. 14: Dr. A. S. Helmick, Milton Hammons, L. G. Johnston and R. E. Kiper. Alternates: Samuel Whited and John E. Morris.

Winnsboro was selected as the place for holding the next session of the District Conference.

After a rising vote of thanks for the hospitality extended by the people of Monroe, the Conference adjourned with the benediction by the Bishop.

WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Winona District Conference met in Winona, May 26, 1893, and was presided over by Rev. S. M. Thames, P. E. Bro. Thames' presidency was eminently satisfactory, being complimented on all sides. The attendance was good. All the preachers in charge were present, and twenty-nine laymen. The reports indicated a good degree of success in the work of the church. In most of the charges there have been conversions, and accessions to the church on profession of faith. This was a spiritual Conference, and the utmost harmony and brotherly love prevailed. The preaching every day, at 11 A. M. and 8.30 P. M., was strong and spiritual. The services on Sunday were times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The sermon at 11 A. M., by Rev. Thomas Cameron, was in demonstration of the Spirit and power. The love-feast at 4 P. M., conducted by Rev. Geo. H. Lipscomb, was, indeed, a feast of love, when "Heaven came down our souls to greet." Many were the testimonies of the triumphs of Divine grace given by the brethren and sisters. At the close of this service three persons presented themselves, asking the prayers of Christians. The eloquent, scholarly and deeply spiritual sermon by Rev. R. A. Meek, at night, will not soon be forgotten.

The visitors to the Conference were Revs. Jno. W. Chambers, T. J. Newell, J. M. Wyatt, G. W. Bachman, J. W. McLaurin, T. B. Malone, J. H. Rodgers.

Bro. Wyatt addressed the Conference in the interest of the Educational Loan Fund Association of the North Mississippi Conference. An auxiliary society for this district was organized with twenty-two members; Rev. S. M. Thames, president ex-officio. The Conference elected Rev. Jno. Ritchey, vice-president, and J. R. Bingham, secretary and treasurer.

The Conference adopted a ringing report on education. The report, after citing the facts showing a successful session of the Grenada Collegiate Institute and of Millsaps College, concludes as follows:

In view of the above encouraging facts, your committee offer the following resolutions:

Resolved, That, as a district, and as individuals, our thanks and congratulations are due and are hereby tendered to President Murrah and his faculty, and President Newell and his co-laborers, for their faithful and, under God, successful work in their respective institutions; and we again pledge to them our hearty co-operation and our prayers for the future.

Resolved, That the officers of the Winona District Auxiliary Society be urged to push the loan fund in every charge in our district, and that, as pastors and laymen, we pledge ourselves to do all in our power to assist them.

The report of the Committee on Religious Literature warmly commended the Nashville and the New Orleans Christian Advocates, and the great work being done by Bro. Bachman. The Conference adopted the following resolutions in connection with the report:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this District Conference that the Nashville Christian Advocate should be furnished to subscribers at one dollar per year when taken in connection with the organ of any Annual Conference; otherwise the subscription price to remain at two dollars, as at present.

Resolved, That Rev. Jno. Ritchey, Rev. R. A. Meek and Bro. J. B. Streater be and they are hereby appointed a committee to memorialize the General Conference in accordance with the foregoing resolution.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Conference that our church papers should be put upon a strictly cash basis; that instead of continuing to send them to subscribers after the expiration of their subscription, the managers should promptly discontinue them after having given a reasonable time for renewal.

The first of the above resolutions met with strong opposition; but, when the vote was taken, it was adopted by a large majority.

The report of the Committee on Temperance brought out the fact that there is only one county within the bounds of the district where the open saloon exists, all the other counties having voted them out.

Montgomery county leads the van of prohibition counties by local option. She held an election in 1884 by special act of the Legislature, and went dry. Twice since that time the whiskyites brought on an election, and twice did they go down in defeat.

J. R. Bingham, H. H. Estes, Rowan Thayer and J. B. Streater were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, with O. J. Moore and J. L. Haley alternates.

The next District Conference will be held at Indianola.

The hospitality of Winona was abundant.

THE CULPEPPER MEETING AT JACKSON, MISS.

The justly celebrated evangelist, Rev. J. B. Culpepper, of Macon, Ga., has commenced a union meeting at this place, which promises great success. He commenced here last Wednesday night at the Methodist Church; but it was soon found that the building was too small, consequently a large tent has been erected on the Capitol Building grounds. The Baptists, Presbyterians and Christians have united with us, and the work now goes "bravely on." Last night the evangelist preached a great sermon, his subjects being "profanity" and "whisky drinking and selling." The sermon was well received by all classes of people. He will deliver three sermons each day, and continue the work ten or more days. Our people are becoming aroused, and you may expect to hear good news from Jackson, Miss., for the next issue. Pray for us.

AITCH. AITCH. AITCH.

May 30, 1893.

Rev. A. D. Miller, Warren circuit, May 29: "We have held Children's Day service with two churches on the Warren circuit, Vicksburg district, Mississippi Conference. First at Wesley Chapel (Phœnix) the third Sunday in May, and we had a very nice time, indeed. Had a large congregation; program well prepared, and executed without a jar; collection, $8.50; and last, but not least, we had with us Rev. J. W. Chambers, agent of Millsaps College, who, by his presence, lecture and sermons, added greatly to the interest of the day. We will be glad to have him come to see us again. Our second service was with Oak Ridge Church, and was also a grand success. We had a large, attentive audience. Program well prepared, and carried out without a flaw; collection, $11.50, making $20 at the two churches, and we had more than the people could possibly eat at each place. The ladies of the Oak Ridge and Phœnix neighborhoods know just how to prepare a good dinner, and they certainly did it on the above days. We will have Children's Day at Bradley's Chapel the fourth Sunday in June, and expect a good time, and will add something more to the treasury. May God bless all the good people engaged in Sabbath-school work!"

Rev. G. R. Ellis: "Zion circuit, Seashore district, is composed of two churches, Zion and Orange Grove, and has been attached to the Amerious circuit since Conference. Our second Quarterly Conference was held on May 6 and 7 at Big Point; Rev. H. E. Partridge, P. E., in the chair. Bro. Partridge is a deeply spiritual man, and fills the chair with ease and dignity. We love him. There have been two parsonages built on this work since our last Annual Conference—one for my horse (Charlie), and one for the preacher and his family, worth about $450, and all paid for except about $14, which we have in good subscription. I wish through this medium to acknowledge the following receipts in response to the appeal which I sent out through the ADVOCATE for our parsonage, with a 'God bless you!' for each one: Magnolia Sunday-school, $2 50; Bay St. Louis Sunday-school, $3.50; Ocean Springs Sunday-school, $1.20; Eastabuchie Sunday-school, 80 cents; Sun Beam Sunday-school, $1; Covington Sunday-school, $1 50; Bennie Parker, Lumberton, Miss., 25 cents; Miss Mary Russell, Colorado, for eight nieces and nephews, 40 cents; Miss Tene Simmons, Magnolia, $1. The Lord is blessing us on Zion charge this year, whereof I am glad. On Saturday night before the third Sunday in this month (May) I began a series of meetings at Zion Church, assisted by Bro. D. C. Rawls. The meeting continued through two Sundays, Bro. Rawls doing the most of the preaching, who, by his childlike simplicity in presenting the truths of the gospel, immediately got the ear of the people, enabling him to accomplish a work for the Master which, I trust, will abide when seed-time and harvest shall be no more forever. It was with regret that we bade this man of God adieu on Thursday night of the meeting. At nearly every service the congregations were large and very attentive, the last night of the meeting (Sunday) being the largest of all, when it fell to this scribe's lot to preach to a packed house, after which there came forward and stood around the chancel railing nineteen souls, who had, from time to time during the meeting, presented themselves for membership, and were received into full connection. This was a scene, I imagine, that angels rejoice to look at. To God be all the glory! My work is moving along finely. I am serving as good and appreciative a people as can be found. I am well up with my general collections."

Rev. R. S. Isbell, Lake Providence La.: "Business is paralyzed, and distress is visible on every hand in our town and parish. Much has been said through the secular papers in regard to the condition of our people since the disastrous overflow from the Wyly crevasse; but possibly the half has not been told. None but those who have had the experience can realize what we are passing through at this time. Let me make a statement. The year opened very favorably, indeed, for our church here, and the temporal affairs of our people. Everybody contented, cheerful, and looking forward to a successful and prosperous year. Notwithstanding the stringency of the money market, owing to the short crop and low price of cotton last year, the planters obtained liberal advances and planted largely of cotton, corn, and other crops, and seemed determined to retrieve past disasters. Up to the Wyly crevasse I never saw a finer prospect for an abundant harvest. Zion also prospered, and the good Lord had blessed our labors here and on our lower appointment. Had received into the church and baptized several persons. Had just finished repainting our beautiful church, and were preparing to begin a series of meetings preparatory to a contemplated protracted meeting, when the news came that the levee had given way three miles below town, nearly opposite Judge Wyly's residence. Such was the fact, and the greatest consternation and excitement prevailed for a time. Being present at the crevasse an hour after it occurred, I witnessed the most affecting scenes. The opening widened every moment, and the water, with a fall of fourteen feet, rushed along with the noise of Niagara, carrying everything before it. As I stood there I saw house after house swept away; hogs, cows and poultry borne off upon the billows to a watery grave, and many colored persons floundering in the water; but, fortunately, no lives were lost. There is great fear that the fine residence of Judge Wyly will go as soon as the current strikes the building, which will soon happen. Lake Providence is now a small island; the Mississippi river piled up against our big levee on the east, our lake brimming full on the north, and the water from the Wyly crevasse on the south and west, reaching from the river to the lake. As I now sit at my desk I can see the water encroaching upon our town. The colored people have occupied every available house in Providence, besides camping here and there on the levee and knolls above water. Live stock of every description are herded wherever possible, and there is great need of food for man and beast. The destruction of crops in our parish is nearly entire, and the destitution among the colored population and some of the white is distressing. An appeal has been made to the authorities for help, and I trust this cry of distress will not be heard in vain. The end, possibly, is not yet. The Mississippi river is still rising, and the prospect is, it will continue to rise for some days. Every interest will suffer from this disaster. Our church interests in the entire Delhi district will suffer seriously, and none more than this charge. We ask the prayers of the church, that we may submissively bow to the will of God, and when the cloud is rifted, push on to greater conquests."

THE MINISTER'S SABBATH NIGHT

BY FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL.

Rest him, O Father! Thou didst send him forth
With great and gracious messages of love:
But thy embassador is weary now,
Worn with the weight of his high embassy.
Now care for him, as thou hast cared for us
In sending him, and cause him to lie down
In thy fresh pastures, by thy streams of peace.
Let thy left hand be now beneath his head,
And thine upholding right encircle him,
And underneath the everlasting arms
Be felt in full support. So let him rest,
Hushed like a little child, without one care:
And so give thy beloved sleep to-night.

Rest him, dear Master! He hath poured for us
The wine of joy, and we have been refreshed.
Now fill his chalice, give him sweet new draughts
Of life and love, with thine own hand, be thou
His ministrant to-night; draw very near
In all thy tenderness and all thy power.
O speak to him! Thou knowest how to speak
A word in season to thy weary ones,
And he is weary now. Thou lovest him—
Let thy disciple lean upon thy breast,
And, leaning, gain new strength to "rise and shine."

Rest him, O loving Spirit! Let thy calm
Fall on his soul to-night. O holy Dove,
Spread thy bright wing above him, let him rest
Beneath its shadow; let him know afresh
The infinite truth and might of thy dear name—
"Our Comforter!" As gentlest touch will stay
The strong vibrations of a jarring chord,
So lay thy hand upon his heart, and still
Each overstraining throb, each pulsing pain.
Then, in the stillness, breathe upon the strings,
And let thy holy music overflow
With soothing power his listening, resting soul.

Plus Capital, Minus Labor.

BY DR. J. W. HARMON.

Writers on the autonomy of social and political economy have wearied us with their lessons on labor and its relations to capital; on commerce and interstate laws; on tariff, with its high and low prices; on trade and speculations in futures. And while municipal, State and national governments are on a political strain over these political elements, these plethoric writers present us with their social nostrums and political panaceas to no available purpose.

Can it be possible that no bright days of rest will ever come to cheer and lighten the toilsome burdens of our work-day population? Is the ship of our toiling people to be all the while tossed on seas of political strife, and never cast anchor in some peaceful harbor and have a real jubilee of song and sweet repose? Will the causes of these disrupting elements, which are rolling in crested billows of fury over so many governments, never cease? Will no statesman arise and, with the voice of a master, quell these wild ravings of the discontented? Must this vexed question of labor and capital, this ever-recurring problem of the rich and poor, run its ploughshare through municipal, State and national affairs, turning up to the gaze the most noxious characters and disgusting episodes? If some man of commanding brain power does not soon come upon this troubled theatre of action as a deliverer, must this condition of unrest become chronic and take such a hold upon the body politic that it will never let go its deathly grip? Must the pound of flesh be cut out from the body of the struggling poor without any regard to the volume of blood that flows from the knife? Why should there be these everlasting antagonisms, these dislocations of manufacturing, financial and social interests that shock and unsettle so many public and private values?

If labor is the foundation and bedrock of all true wealth—the main source of moneyed accumulations, the head and front of the prosperity of the country in all departments—then why are not the brawny and the nimble hands, who create all this wealth and pile up millions for the few, receiving a legitimate and lucrative living portion? Upon what true political basis of economy is it, that the men who do not labor accumulate the wealth, while the real laborer, who creates the wealth, eks out a bare subsistence?

This is the problem, and when some large-hearted and brainy statesman can lift himself out of the selfish rut of politics and discover the happy solution, he will send out over the world the grandest and greatest peace maker ever introduced into politics, legislation or law.

A small minority of men now possess the wealth created by the labor of the many, and, to the shame of legislators, the whole trend of legislation is to increase the vast wealth of the few, as if legislation turned on golden hinges, smacking largely of criminality, while creating a terrible unrest among the masses. Thousands are groaning in mind and body, struggling with dire necessity for meat and bread, while the uplifted hands of the poor are crying out in piteous tones, "Is there no help for the widow's son?" And, heaven forefend them, the government with criminal indifference raises no helping hand while monopolists corner their meat and bread.

Another strange feature of the case and the cause of unrest: Does this wealth gravitate to the rich because of their magnetic worth, based on great virtues and generous natures? And does poverty become the heritage of the poor on account of their great ignorance, vice and general worthlessness? This does not account for the wide difference between the rich and the honest, toiling millions.

Pause in your judgment, for if labor is the great under-girder as well as the main pillar that upholds the whole system of wealth, if it is the ground-work of the government with its multiplied thousands of non-laborers, if the real toiler is the creative genius of all wealth, and these toilers are all the while struggling for a stinted subsistence, then the entire fabric of legislation carries within it an element of criminal injustice. There must be a terrible misadjustment somewhere in the legislation of the country, when the cry vexes the heavens, "The rich are getting richer, and the poor poorer."

Say what you will, and babble over your political economy, and sing praises to this administration or any other administration, the whole problem of all this wrong-doing in legislation and all this injustice grows out of the fact that our wise solons in legislation carry about with them a pocket edition of embossed selfishness and egotism, ignoring the infallible teachings of the divine Man-God who once dwelt among us. Were it not so, we would not have these statesmen forever hunting for the dead flies in their pot of political ointment, that now smells rank to heaven in every legislative hall in the country.

The day of adjustment must soon come, or else the day of retribution is hastening on apace. If God is the author of all pure and just laws, why do our wise legislators ignore his teachings and fall back upon their own egotism?

The Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

The annual meeting of the Central Committee was held April 27, 1893, in the office of the secretary at the residence of Mr. Geo. P. Kendrick. The following members were present: Mrs. Bishop Hargrove, Miss Belle Bennett, Mrs. J. A. Carter, Mrs. E. Burdette, Mrs. M. K. Carter, Mrs. Geo. P. Kendrick and Miss Helm.

Applications for aid to the amount of $5,350 in donations and $1,350 in loans were considered. Although every appropriation made at the annual meeting last year was paid in full before the close of the year, the committee decided not to appropriate this year so far ahead; but to make fewer appropriations at the annual meeting and others later when the first were paid off. Appropriations to the amount of $2,100 in donations and $850 in loans were made—such being made, as nearly as could be known, to the most pressing calls. The committee humbly prays for guidance in this matter, and they trust those whose applications have been deferred will be patient and will pray for the cause through which they hope for assistance. The grants made were reported to the Board of Church Extension, and were heartily endorsed. A report of the year's work was also made, and the committee felt grateful for the rising vote and the words of praise with which the Board expressed its appreciation of the work accomplished by the society.

The year's report showed 57 parsonages helped by the Central Committee and the Conference societies to the amount of $6,908.93 in donations and loans, and 93 local parsonages reported helped by auxiliaries, making in all 150 parsonages helped by the whole society. This is an increase of 15 over last year's report, and is an average of nearly three parsonages a week. A substantial increase of funds over last year was also shown. The increase in dues—the best evidence of progress—was $934.24. The increase in the whole amount for general work—that is, the funds remitted to Conference treasurers and the general treasurer—was $9,742.71. The increase in the whole amount raised by the society, including special donations for local work reported by the auxiliaries, was $14,273.28. God is certainly opening the way for greater usefulness before the society.

Mrs. Poynter, president of Kentucky Conference, reported good progress made in raising funds for the school in the mountains. The building of the house is soon to begin, and she hopes by next Fall the school may open.

Mrs. King, formerly of New Orleans, sent in her resignation, giving as her reason ill-health and change of residence, and urging that some one be put in her place who could represent the Southwest. This resignation was most regretfully accepted, for Mrs. King's helpful counsel and gentle manner had quite won the hearts of her co-laborers. Mrs. Bishop Key's name was promptly suggested by two or three of the members, and she was unanimously elected. Mrs. Key was in the city at the time, and she accepted the place, feeling it a call to work.

The whole meeting, of two days' duration, was very profitable, and would have been been altogether pleasing but for the fact that several of the members were kept away by ill-health. Among them being our beloved president, Mrs. Wiley, for whose recent sorrow the deepest sympathy was manifested, and appropriate resolutions expressive of that sympathy were passed.

The convention called by the Central Committee in the name of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society met in St. Louis, May 9, in St. John's Church at ten A. M. It lasted two days and nights, Bishop Hargrove presiding. The addresses and reports were interesting and encouraging. Several of the Conferences were well represented, and the ladies of St. Louis manifested the greatest interest in the proceedings, doing all that kind hearts and bountiful hospitality could do to render the occasion pleasant. Bishop Duncan made an address on Tuesday evening, showing the great benefits accruing to the church through having good parsonages. Bishop Fitzgerald also spoke on Tuesday evening, and awakened a lively interest in the mission at Key West.

Dr. Allen, of China, spoke on Tuesday afternoon. He said that the work done in this country for the salvation of souls encouraged missionaries in foreign lands. When they saw a lack of interest in the souls near by they could hardly hope to arouse any interest in souls afar off.

Dr. Lambuth, on Tuesday night, introduced the subject of City Evangelization, and on Wednesday he entered into detail of how and why this work should be done by the women of the church. Intense interest was awakened by the address of Dr. Lambuth, and practical ways and means were considered. Bishop Duncan, who was present during Wednesday morning, spoke enthusiastically of the work done by Hugh Price Hughes and others for the slums of great cities, and he urged the Methodist women to go at once to this work, and Dr. Lambuth called attention to the fact that our church was doing but little in this line, and encouraged the women as Methodists to unite their forces under the auspices of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society as the organization authorized by General Conference to do this work. With rising votes the women determined thus to unite all their societies for home work and make a force strong enough to plan largely for Christ in the cities within the bounds of the M. E. Church, South. The Spirit of God was present in great power, and the best results from the meeting are already seen.

We regret that we can not at this time give a fuller account of this first annual convention, for every detail of the meeting is full of interest. As directed by the convention an "extra" of Our Homes will soon be issued, giving the entire minutes of the proceedings. We will gladly send a copy of this "extra" to any who desire it.

This convention will mark an epoch in the history of the M. E. Church, South, and every woman in the church should be fully informed on the subject. Our Homes will, in August, become a monthly journal that will be, as it has been, devoted to the work our women are doing at home, in every part of the church and in every branch of their work. The price of this monthly will be only fifty cents a year, and women of the Methodist Church, South, can hardly afford to do without it.

We ask the prayers of all lovers of souls, that God will stir the hearts of our women more and more with an irresistible desire to seek and save the lost.

An Important Statement.

We deem it well to send out the following statement from the Mission Rooms: The situation in China, as regards the safety of lives and property of our missionaries, is not critical. While the subject is a grave one, and the attitude of this Christian nation is at once unbecoming and unjust, yet there is no ground for immediate apprehension.

The Geary exclusion act having been declared constitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States, there seemed nothing to prevent the immediate deportation, under the provisions of the bill, of all unregistered Chinese.

One hundred thousand of these unoffending people, many of whom were invited here by express treaty stipulation to build our transcontinental railroads, have been thrown into a condition of painful uncertainty, and even excitement. Vague rumors of immediate arrest, imprisonment, confiscation of property and possible personal violence, have been circulating among them. Rumors which upon reaching China, will, of necessity, become greatly exaggerated. The friends of our missionaries are apprehensive of retaliation. The Chinese would certainly be more than human if they did not ultimately adopt such a measure. Our chief executive officers will, in all probability, make representation at the Court of Pekin before heroic treatment is adopted, and reference involving delay of months; and since the exchequer is empty Congress may reassemble before the provisions of the law can be carried into execution. Being a piece of political demagogism, it is to be hoped by that time the sterling sense of justice so deeply imbedded in the American people will assert itself, and this heathenish law be repealed.

Deeming it prudent and wise to forestall possible contingencies, the following was sent by cable:

Nashville, Tenn., May 9, 1893.

Rev. Reid, Shanghai, China:

Take every precaution; in emergency, recall missionaries to Shanghai. LAMBUTH.

The following, which is characteristic of the courageous souls who represent us in distant lands, was received in reply:

Rev. Lambuth, Nashville:

"That Sabbath Resolution."

SOME "NON SEQUITURS."

To the reply of Bro. R. J. Jones, in the date of the twenty-fifth ultimo, to one of mine in the eleventh, I shall endeavor to be brief.

I will begin by noticing a startling statement made by him. He denies and says of his communication, in it: "There is not an expression or intimation of opinion as to whether or not a minority of a deliberative body is pledged to the acts of the majority."

We can not deny that the Mississippi Conference is a deliberate body. It passed a certain resolution as presented by its committee. He heads his communication with, "That Sabbath Resolution," the one referred to as the action of the Conference. Follows this heading with "Non Sequiturs." Divides the Conference into divisions—majority and minority—in the following "Non Sequitur" No. 2: "It does not follow, because the report of a committee is adopted without a dissenting voice, that every member of the Conference is pledged to this view of the subject." The whole matter taken together—the action of the Conference, that "Sabbath resolution," his using it as his heading, his "non sequiturs" following as a beginning—unquestionably contradicts his denial statement. I will add, furthermore, that the whole matter taken together fixes upon "Non Sequitur" No 2 none other than this—an attempt at a loophole for the non-observance of that resolution by those members of the Conference who did not vote for it, a plan of an escape of those whose views and feelings were not in accord with it. With his denial statement before me, I was not surprised to find the following as an excuse for his communication. He says: "It was simply a sort of logical effort to help a good brother, who seemed to have gotten into trouble by a sort of logical process."

He can not, however, make his escape under such an excuse with the facts before us. I shall notice, furthermore, another startling statement made by him. He denies again, and says of his communication, in it: "There is not an expression or intimation of admission that it is wrong to go to Conference on Sunday, or that it is not wrong to use the Sabbath trains to go anywhere else on Sunday."

The Conference passed the Sabbath resolution, the ostensible reason to remedy the evil of its members traveling on Sunday. He heads his communication with it, and says in "Non Sequitur" No. 4: "It does not follow, because it is wrong to go to Conference on Sunday, that it is wrong to go anywhere else on Sunday, if we use the Sabbath trains, though not in cases of necessity."

The facts again before us, the action of the Conference on going to Conference on Sunday, his use of that action, and "Non Sequitur" No. 4 in connection, refute again his denial statement upon this point. If he admits having little or no meaning, "a sort of logical effort," he can not say this of that Sabbath resolution. It is significant. The Conference meant to oppose a great growing evil of the age of traveling on Sunday, and begin the work among the ministry. If he is innocent of opposition, intentionally, of that resolution, it does seem strange to see a member of the Conference draw out a long list of positions, all in substance seemingly to defeat the action of the Conference, upon one of the most vital matters at this time connected with the church. How can he admit of his communication, that with a definite heading, having a definite meaning, that all it meant was to show "that certain (indefinite) things are not so because other (indefinite) things are so?" Did he write all this long list of non sequiturs simply that others might see how they would appear in print? No, no. There is not an intelligent reader of the ADVOCATE who knows all the facts but came to the conclusion, on reading of his communication, that the animus of the whole thing meant opposition to that Sabbath resolution. Every fact in connection with it sustains this conclusion. This again refutes another statement made by him. "There is not an expression or intimation of opposition to a resolution of Conference endeavoring to enforce a faithful observance of the Sabbath." I will go no further other than noted. He says: "We are always loaded. We go loaded for particular game, and we fire at the sound of the least rustling, whether there is any game or not." I shall not express my opinion of whom such language represents. I suppose his non sequiturs was the first load he fired. It is unfortunate for him, however, were the load to take effect. He reminds me of the man who set a gun for another, and thought he would try his arrangement, and shot himself.

The Gospel in Venezuela.

MR. EDITOR: It may be of interest to you and your readers to learn something of our recent travels and labors in South and Central America. You, doubtless, are aware that two years ago I left our mission work in Mexico to accept an appointment of the American Bible Society in Venezuela, South America, and that my appointment has been renewed from year to year by the Bishop presiding in the Central Mexican Mission Conference. Our work in Venezuela was remarkably successful until the revolution broke out and interrupted travel a little over a year ago. I succeeded in establishing a very flourishing and self-sustaining congregation in Caracas, the capital of Venezuela. I secured a large hall, seated it with nearly 300 neat, new chairs, pulpit, organ, and gas fixtures, and on the night of inauguration about three times as many persons came as could get in, and among them editors of the principal daily papers. Of course, these editors, in keeping with the well-known kindness of editors in general, gave us a big puff in their papers for some days afterwards. This gave our work an impetus hitherto unknown in Spanish-American countries, and from that time until I turned the congregation over to a pastor sent down from Mexico, I never knew what it was to see a vacant chair in the congregation at any of our Sunday services, and frequently the house was full even at our Wednesday evening lecture and prayer meetings. The citizens of the place, merchants, etc., both foreigners and natives, but principally the former, contributed largely to the expenses of the work. The Bible work in Venezuela was equally successful. At the beginning of the revolution I went to the West India Islands, and did a successful work canvassing and selling the Scriptures to the people; thence to Colombia the latter part of August, and in two months sold about 1,000 copies to the Colombians. Late in October the American Bible Society requested me to make a tour of a few months through Central America, which had never been visited by any representative of the Society, and it was a joyous trip to me, although encountering many hardships and occasional sickness from change of water, climate, diet, etc.

It has been very pleasant to me to learn, since I was called by the Society to New York, that our work in Central America has been far more successful than was hoped for by the most sanguine. It seems almost incredible that those countries, without the aid of any missionaries, should have so far ripened to receive the Word of light as to enable us to do what we did during so short a time. In five months and a few days Mr. Penzotti and I, with three colporters to aid us, sold over 10,000 copies of the Holy Scriptures, and donated only about 700 to the poor, sick in hospitals, and to soldiers. We also preached the first sermon in many places, and it was delightful to see how hungry the people were for the gospel of peace and life, for our congregations were always well attended.

When, oh, when will the church awake to a sense of its responsibility, and send the gospel of life to those hungry, starving souls? There are many places in Central America where the right sort of a man could establish a glorious work which would be almost self-sustaining from the beginning.

I have been informed by the Society that they propose to give me a rest, and if, while I am here, I can be of any service to any church or paper desiring more specific information as to the openings and prospects in South America, either with my pen or by public lectures, it would afford me great pleasure to render such service. My address for the next few weeks will be Bethel, Giles county, Tenn.

Yours very truly,

JOSEPH NORWOOD.

Human Nature.

When Adam had transgressed, and, covered with the frail fabric of decaying leaves, was summoned before God to receive his just sentence, he came with an excuse in which he attempted to blame God with his sin. Said he: "The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat." The implication is: "Your gift brought the temptation that caused my fall; hence yours is the blame." And how Adam-like are all his posterity! Down through the centuries stalks the same old spirit that seeks to excuse its own errors by implicating God.

The tippler, sipping his sparkling beverage, decapitates prohibitory arguments by his ready, "Why, sir, the grape is one of God's choicest gifts to his children, and Christ made wine for the marriage feast." The dainty maiden, weeping over the tragic scenes in her "dime novel," or flushed and trembling beneath the excitement of its bloody or indecent midnight recitals, is ready to hush the "silly" entreaties of her "old fogy" friend with, "The genius of such authors is God-given." And the theatre-going church member is eager to urge God's approval of the stage as attested by the "gift" of the dramatist. The Sabbath toilers and marketers excuse themselves because, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." The dispenser of intoxicants quotes, "Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and for thine often infirmities." And the minister who forgets his solemn obligations, and neglects the discipline which he has voluntarily assumed, overlooking the whip of cords and the driven-out exchangers, the trial and condemnation of Ananias and Sapphira, the plain directions by Christ and Paul for the enforcement of discipline, must excuse himself, because Christ did not expel Judas from the hand of disciples for an uncommitted act, and thus, after giving the law, "By their fruits ye shall know them," set an example of judging without the fruit as evidence, which example, if followed by man, would lead to the absurdity and iniquity of judging without any conceivable grounds as evidence. The principle underlying all the above is the same, and error and prejudice lie at the roots of all. Perhaps you may have heard of the carpenter who put green goggles on his horse to listen him on shavings. We must pull off our goggles before we can precisely discern nourishing food from the rubbish of the shop, or know truth from error.

H. M. ELLIS.

"Sextus" and the Mississippi Statute.

"Doctors differ," and so do some other people. On common law principles there seems to me not the slightest infringement of our Methodist rights in the provision of the Constitution quoted by "Sextus." There was careful discrimination of words in the act, as if for the protection of our church and the slaughter of Romanism.

In the application of civil statutes to ecclesiastical affairs, the principle, or rule, adopted by the courts, in the interpretation of acts—of any kind—is the law of the church.

It has been a rule of the Methodist Church to regard the church as a whole, but each separate organization in that church as a "society," having its own "local Board of Trustees" independent of all other Boards, and using the property exclusively for that "society."

If the act in question had used the word "church"—"must be an independent church"—it would have been fatal, as "Sextus" fears; but the use of the word "society" places a very different phase on the application of the law.

Justice Nelson pretty thoroughly traversed this question in the great hook concern decision. Each society in the church has powers and rights delegated to it by the General Conference constituting it "an independent society" to the extent of this delegated power, and as such, under the constitution and laws of the church of which it is a part, can acquire and hold property under a general or special act of incorporation.

As to the past, all contracts must be carried out under the law existing at the time they were made.

THREE FAITHS.—To do the most successful work in the world three faiths are needed—faith in God, faith in one's fellow-men, and faith in one's self. Whatever tends to diminish either of these, is an injury and a loss to a man. Whatever is likely to increase them, should be carefully cultivated. Faith in God gives peace and rest from worry. Faith in others gives hope and cheerful kindness. Faith in one's self gives confidence and courage. These are all essential qualities. Happy he who has them! Still happier he who has learned to guard them against abuse, and distinguish them from their counterfeits. Faith in self must not be allowed to pass into egotism, nor faith in others into fatuity, nor faith in God into presumption. To avoid the false and foolish in all these directions while holding firmly to that which is good, shows great wisdom and brings true prosperity.—Zion's Herald.

INTRODUCTORY.

If the author of the Book of Ecclesiastes had given to the world nothing of value except the important lessons of this chapter, he would still have made the religious world his debtor, would have merited a place in God's Book; if he had written nothing of beauty except these exquisitely beautiful verses, he would still have made the literary world his debtor, and have merited a place among the literary immortals. We know not which to admire more—the impressiveness of the lesson or the beauty of its expression. The lesson which should begin with the ninth verse of chapter eleven forms the conclusion of the long and sometimes sorrowful search for the greatest good, and though often led through devious paths and by steep and perilous ways, the reader is brought, at last, to the broad and open place in which all can may stand in blessed contentment, and where alone they are safe. Man's greatest good is found in God. "Fear God and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man."

EXPLANATORY.

I.—THE DUTY OF YOUTH.

Ver. 1. In this verse we have an exhortation and a reason. 'Remember"—be mindful of thy duty to—"thy Creator in the days of thy youth"—in the days when evil habits have not warped and blackened character, and when the heart is full of hope and energy, when what is done is done with vigor, and with strength unimpaired by sin. For the "evil days" will surely come, when life's pleasures have palled upon the taste, the elasticity and force of earlier years have gone, the spiritual strength has been sapped and the peevish discontent of an unhappy old age has come upon thee with its burdens.

Ver. 2. This verse begins a description, which continues to the second clause of verse 5, of an Oriental village as the daylight fades, and the darkness of night comes on. The sun, the twilight, the moon, the stars have become darkened, the shower has passed away, but the clouds have come back again. The coming night is made darker by the clouds.

II.—THE TRIALS OF OLD AGE.

Ver. 3. The "keepers of the house," who while the daylight lasted were unconcerned, are troubled as the darkness of the night and of the storm comes upon them; strong men crouch with apprehension; the grinding women have, one by one, ceased from their labors until the sound of the grinding is hushed, and those who a little while ago were seen peering through the latticed windows are lost to view.

Ver. 4. The outer doors are closed against prowling robbers; indistinctly is heard the grinding of the few women who continue at their work; the twitter of the bird, disturbed upon its perch, causes men to start up as if in alarm at the approach of danger, and the cheerful sound of music is hushed in the deepening gloom and fear.

Ver. 5. The watchers upon their elevated posts are afraid, and dangers seem to threaten them in the way. (In this interpretation I have followed Dr. W. J. Beecher, in the Sunday-School Times.)

In this description we have the picture of helpless old age, against which evil time the young are exhorted to guard by remembering the Creator. The interpretation which finds the different senses and faculties in the description of the village is in a large measure consistent with the above. The keepers are the arms; the strong men, the legs; the grinders, the teeth; the windows, the eyes; the daughters of music, the failing hearing. At this point the picture changes in character, though the real subject is the same.

A gray-haired old man is seen, to whom the least weight is burdensome on account of waning strength, his appetite can not be excited to action, his desires have failed and he totters beneath his increasing burden toward his eternal home. The picture gives a helpless, hopeless sensibility from which the young are saved by the consecration of the life to God.

Ver. 6. Here we have the third picture. The time will come when the silver cord shall be loosed and the golden lamp suspended by it shall be broken. The pitcher at the foundation shall be shattered, and broken the wheel by which the life-sustaining waters are drawn from the cistern.

Ver. 7. The shroud, the coffin and the urn complete the earthly life, and the invisible spirit, untouched by the ruin, which overthrows the crumbling body, takes its flight to the God who gave it being.

III.—THE JUDGMENT.

Ver. 13. The lesson closes as it began, with an exhortation and a reason. "The conclusion of the whole matter" has been reached. Fear—reverently, filially—fear God and keep his commandments. All other duties arrange themselves under this, the supreme duty of man.

Ver. 14. The open work and the secret thought are known to God, and for all these things he will bring thee into judgment, whether of commendation for the good or condemnation for the evil.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

1. If our joys are earthly and temporal in character, what shall we do when we depart from this earth? Unhappy indeed is the man who says of earthly joys, "I have no pleasure in them," and yet to him there are no heavenly joys!

2. The sum of human duty is found in the fear of the Lord and in obedience to his commandments.

Proportionate and Worshipful Giving.

The Christian Steward furnishes the following excellent explanation of the best giving:

There may be system, without proportion, in your gifts. You might give a cent a week, or a cent a month, to the Lord's work, and give it regularly—that would be systematic, but it would probably fall far short of what you ought to give. Proportionate giving means giving in proportion to our income. A wage-earner who receives a dollar or two dollars a day ought not to give as much as the man who has a yearly income of one thousand dollars. And the latter can not be expected to give as much as the man with an income of ten thousand dollars a year.

I know a church member who years ago, when he was comparatively poor, was in the habit of giving five dollars annually to foreign missions, and five more to home missions. He prospered in business and became rich, but he never increased the above sums. Had he been a proportionate giver, he would have increased these subscriptions to keep pace with the increase of his wealth. This is what he ought to have done. Of him to whom much is given much is required.

This is what is meant by proportionate giving. To make it still plainer, suppose you have an income of five hundred dollars a year. A certain proportion, or percentage, of this amount (say ten per cent.—that was the Old Testament rule, and a Christian can hardly do less than the ancient Jew) you put aside for church and benevolent work. Then your proportion would be fifty dollars, which amount you would give away during the year to such objects as your conscience would approve. Or, if your pay comes by the day, or at the end of the week, or monthly, take one-tenth of it or the proportion fixed upon, and lay it aside in some safe place, to be used for the Lord's work.

Then you always have a benevolent fund on hand, from which you can draw, as occasion requires, or conscience and love prompt. Giving becomes thus a sacred pleasure instead of a disagreeable duty. Of course, if you keep a set of account books, the same end will be secured by crediting "benevolent fund" with the different amounts from time to time, and charging it with whatever you give away for benevolent objects.

Those who have never tried this plan have no idea what a delight and blessing it proves to be. This is the testimony of hundreds of proportionate givers.

But more and better than this, it is scriptural! "Let everyone of you lay by him in store AS God hath prospered him."

By worshipful giving we mean a giving in the which God is worshiped. We should make our offering on the Lord's day in the same spirit with which we praise him in song, or bow before him in prayer. The angel said to Cornelius: "Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God." Not the prayers alone, but his prayers and his alms, or gifts. The two acts of worship went together. The trouble with many professing Christians of to-day is that, although they can pray devoutly enough, they seem to think that worship has taken a recess when the time for the collection comes.

Very few regard the offering, as equally with prayer or praise, an act of worship. Yet such it is. It is so represented throughout Scripture. The high priest offered gifts as well as sacrifices to the Lord. A part of the worship ordained of God for the people was that "they shall not appear before the Lord empty: every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord thy God." Similar to this is the New Testament injunction: "Upon the first day of the week let everyone of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him."

Each passage teaches proportionate giving—that is, giving in accordance with one's ability, as God hath prospered him. They teach with equal clearness worshipful giving—giving as a part of the worship of God: "Appearing before the Lord"—that is, for the worship—"upon the first day of the week"—that is, upon the Lord's day, the day especially set apart for his worship.

The collection, or, as it may better be called, the offering, is as much a part of the worship of the Lord in the service of his day and house as the reading of the Scriptures or the singing of hymns. "Honoring the Lord with our substance and with the first fruits of all our increase" is of as much importance as honoring him with our words, and often a much surer test of our sincerity.

The Psalmist says: "Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name." This we do in our ascriptions of praise through song and prayer. But the Psalmist does not stop there. "Bring an offering," he adds, "and come into his courts." (Psalm xcvi, 8.) Thousands of our churches and tens of thousands of our members leave "the offering" out. Only their prayers come up for a memorial before God. Seriously, do you think Cornelius' prayers would have reached up to heaven had they not been accompanied by his alms?

The devout Jew offered acceptable worship by the bringing of his gifts to the altar of God, and if the proper and honorable maintenance of the priesthood and the ordinance of tabernacle and temple worship had need of those offerings, how almost infinitely more does the world-wide work, laid upon the church of Christ, have need of devoted, generous gifts from Christian worshipers. Surely we have here the mind of Christ.

Come, brethren, let us go to church determined to omit no part of the service; let us sing and pray with the spirit and with the understanding; let us also bring an offering, each one "as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord our God." That is worshipful giving.

POINTS FOR PREACHERS.

LUTHER'S STANDARD.—Many are the qualifications of the ministry, and it must be said to the shame of some, that they make no effort to attain what would give them, in a measure, at least, the success they should have. It is said that Luther proposed ten qualifications for the ministry, which it would be well for them to ponder. They are:

1. He should be able to teach plainly, and in order. 2. He should have a good head. 3. Good power of language. 4. A good voice. 5. A good memory. 6. He should know when to stop. 7. He should be sure of what he means to say. 8. And be ready to stake body and soul, goods and reputation, on its truth. 9. He should study diligently. 10. And suffer himself to be vexed and criticised by everyone.

MORE CALEBS.—We certainly need more Calebs. Caleb was a man who "followed the Lord fully." He was thorough-going, whole-hearted, out-and-out in his piety. He could be absolutely depended on in time of need. He was faithful, stanch, steadfast; a man who would not compromise with evil, or make conditions in his service of God. He never halted or faltered in his allegiance. Just this sort of man is in great demand now and always. We want him in the church, we want him in the Sunday-school, we want him in the family. In fact, he is as good as gold everywhere. He is not dependent on revival seasons. His first wish is to please God, and he gives him the benefit of every doubt. He is always found in the forefront of duty. Such a man is a power. How many good enterprises fall for lack of him. Oh, for more Calebs!—Zion's Herald.

A SUCCESSFUL PREACHER.—The preachers gather in solemn session, fifty strong. One of the ablest reads a long essay on "Why We Do Not Succeed." He sets forth in logical order the "difficulties." He says, "If so and so were done," and "if our people would do so so," and "if," and "if," and "if." The other forty-nine preachers supplement the able paper with remarks that enlarge the list of "difficulties" and "ifs." They all go home knowing what ought to be, and feeling sad because it is not. Here is one of the preachers who couldn't write a paper on the above subject if he should try, and he wouldn't try if he could write it. But he succeeds in every charge he is stationed in. There may be difficulties in the way, but he invariably succeeds. The church may not be above censure, but he succeeds. The church may be weak, poor and burdened, but he succeeds. He may have no fixed methods and manners, but he succeeds in the most diverse kinds of work.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

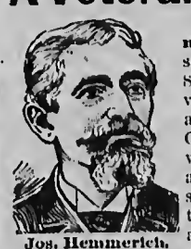
A Veteran's Story



Jos. Hemmerich.

Mr. Joseph Hemmerich, an old soldier, 529 E. 146th St., N. Y. City, writes voluntarily. In 1852, at the battle of Fair Oaks, he was stricken with typhoid fever, and after a struggle of several years in hospitals, was discharged as incurable with Consumption. Doctors said both lungs were affected and he could not live long, but a comrade urged him to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before he had finished one bottle his cough began to get loose, the choking sensation left, and night sweats grew less and less. He is now in good health and cordially recommends

THE WORLD'S FAIR
And American Railways.

THE QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE, widely known as the road running the "Finest Trains in the South," is in the field to carry everybody from the South to the World's Fair at Chicago. No part of the Southern country is left uncared for by this great railway and its connections. The Through Car System is an admirable exposition of the wonderful capabilities of American railroading. From New Orleans Through Sleeping Cars run daily, morning and evening, carrying its passengers via Cincinnati or Louisville, as they may select.

From Shreveport, Vicksburg and Jackson another Through Sleeping Car Line comes to join and become a part of the magnificent Vestibuled Through Trains, which passing through Birmingham and the famous Wills Valley of Alabama, is joined at Chattanooga by the train from Jacksonville, Fla., Brunswick, and Atlanta, Ga., over the E. T. V. & Ga. Ry., and proceeds north over the beautiful Cincinnati Southern, through the grandest natural scenery and most attractive historical country in the world, to Oakdale, where another magnificent Pullman car is received, coming from the Richmond & Danville System from Charleston, S. C., through Columbia, S. C., the beautiful French Broad country, and Asheville, N. C., and Knoxville, Tenn.

The time to Chicago is made so as to afford the most convenient hours for departures from the principal cities, and arrivals in Chicago.

Passengers can purchase tickets good over one line north of the River, and returning via another if they desire a variable route without extra charge. Or they can go via Cincinnati, returning via Louisville, or vice versa.

And afternoon, and night; forenoon, and—what!

Yes, that is life. Make this forenoon sublime,
This afternoon a psalm, this night a prayer,
And time is conquered, and thy crown is won.

With this number the present editor completes his seventh year in the editorial chair. By the ancients seven was considered the number of perfection or completion. If that is true, then the circle is complete; we have come round again where we started.

With the July number the name of the Missionary Reporter will be changed to The Methodist Review of Missions. It will be enlarged from 32 to 64 pages, and the price will be one dollar per annum. Now, let every reader of this paper send on his dollar and begin a new life with our new Review of Missions. It will do you good, such as you will scarcely get elsewhere.

The obligations of Christian people run out in many different directions. In regard to civil and political matters, these obligations are actually increasing in number. Civil and political affairs are coming more and more into the domain of morals, and thus are laying a heavier weight upon the Christian conscience. There are questions today coming directly under the purview of morals which a generation ago were considered entirely on the outside. As the scientists say, they have "emerged" upon the moral plane and demand the attention of the Christian citizen. These questions can not be ignored by the Christians of to day nor relegated again to the domain of politics. They must be settled by Christian citizens.

Two Women for China.

Two single women are needed as teachers in the Anglo-Chinese College, Shanghai, China. Dr. Y. J. Allen urges prompt application, as he purposes reaching Shanghai as early in the Autumn as possible. In addition to the usual English branches, it is desired that one teacher should have knowledge of music sufficient to accompany hymns upon the organ, and the other ability to teach elementary mathematics.

As the support of these two women is to be met by specials, Bishop Key will be glad to correspond with individuals, Epworth Leagues, or churches, willing to assume the same.

A Severe Arraignment.

The report of the Grand Jury, of this city, for the past three months is the most terrible arraignment of public officials it has ever fallen to our lot to see. When we remember that this jury has been three months investigating public affairs, and has pursued its investigations with painstaking zeal, and that this is its final report, that makes the report the more remarkable. In all the report there is not a good word for any city official. Indeed, if ever a set of officials have been "raked and scraped and skinned," and then pilloried to the scorn of decent citizens, it is our Mayor and Police Board and Chief of Police. If half what the Grand Jury says about these officials is true, then if they have a spark of manhood left, they will resign at once. After such a report, read in the court and published to the world, nothing will satisfy outraged justice and make amends to violated public decency and meet the wishes of the better part of the community but their instant outgoing. Here is a part of the report:

The result of our investigations has clearly proven to our minds that while the judges of the Criminal Courts are willing, ready and anxious to have the laws executed, as shown by their very able charges, nevertheless, they are in a great measure powerless without the aid of the city government, which aid it was proven in our special report they have not had, and we do not see any prospect of their having it in the immediate future, without some very radical changes in the actions of some of our city officials, or of having their places filled by some one else. We refer specially to the Mayor, the City Attorney and the Police Board, and their very unworthy Chief of Police. For their delinquencies in the discharge of their duties, each and every one of them presented an excuse for their want of action; the last of which being made by the City Attorney defending his advice to the Mayor on which the latter's extraordinary order, shielding the violators of the law, is based, it being on the weak points of the criminal laws of the State.

We think if these same officers would use half the effort in carrying out the laws and enforcing them, the result would be very different. But as long as there is a controversy unsettled between the Mayor and the Police Board as to who is in authority over the force, and as long as there is no congeality nor harmony or combined effort of the Criminal Courts and the city government, they can not be expected to suppress crime in our midst; nor even then, with the present Chief of Police in charge of the force, no good results need be expected.

It is a matter of fact that instead of assisting this jury, as he would reasonably be expected to do, his so-called assistance has been a farce, and a decided detriment to their efforts in getting information. We do not consider that he is incompetent intellectually, but wilfully. From experience with trials before the Police Board we deemed it useless to refer cases to them for trial. We consider it a detriment to the course of justice in the Criminal Court to have any lawyer practicing in said court who is a member of the Police Board or in any manner in authority over the police force. We regret that so much of our time should have been confined to so small a portion of your charge; preventing our investigating other subjects referred to in said charge.

Such is the attitude which the Grand Jury finds our city officials occupying in regard to the enforcement of the criminal law. The jury was so impressed with the utter inability of the Criminal Courts to dispense justice in the present state of affairs and under the present city government that it makes this extraordinary recommendation:

As individuals, we realize that the citizens of the city are more or less inert and spasmodic in their actions on public questions, but, either by their right of franchise or by some other reason, not easy to determine, we have at present a city government which, by its actions, has jeopardized and continues to jeopardize the interests of taxpayers, and that of future generations; and for the best interests of the public we would recommend that the Legislature revoke the charter of the city and provide for trustees or a taxing district.

When sensible men, after three months' investigation in public affairs, come to such a conclusion and deliberately publish it to the world, the case must be bad indeed. What emphasizes the deplorableness of the situation is the fact that a large part of the community and all our great daily newspapers agree that the Grand Jury has simply uncovered the real facts to the public.

The CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE has time and again spoken out plainly about these iniquitous matters. We believe that these things can be corrected without resorting to the extreme measure recommended by the Grand Jury. The better class of citizens, who want good city government, and our great dailies can right up things if they desire to do so and will work together to that end. A few public meetings and an occasional editorial only make these offending city officials laugh in their sleeves. There must be concerted action on the part of all, and less talk. What is the use to babble over these things for two and a half years more? A determined people can have just what they want in matters of this kind.

Doctrinal Preaching in Revivals.

The opening of Summer is generally the beginning of the revival season in the country charges. From now on until the Fall protracted and camp meetings will be in full blast. The opportunities for declaring the Word of the Lord will be many and propitious. It is well for the men of God to meditate on those themes which shall be the subject-matter of their messages from God to the people. These are the times when the fundamental doctrines of the gospel need to be enforced with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. A great deal of revival preaching is scattering, calculated to stir the emotional or sensational element in men. Frequently this is intentional, the idea being to get up a movement at any cost; the cost is superficiality. The so-called revival which does not originate in the illumination of sound doctrinal preaching will be superficial, positively injurious. In all deep and widespread revivals we observe the prominence of the fundamentals, such as repentance, justification, regeneration and the sanctification of believers; and the revival will be powerful for good in proportion to the verification of these truths in the experiences of men.

Each doctrine stands for a conscious experience; hence, to secure the experience, the doctrine must be preached fully, clearly, explicitly, and with all the emphasis which the Word of God gives to it.

The preacher who aims to be useful in revival work must be surcharged with these great doctrines, his heart and brain must be saturated with them; they must be in him with all the fullness of the profoundest conviction, and in the freshness of the truth that never grows old. They should be there, all clamoring for the supremacy, only yielding, on occasion, to the leading of the Holy Spirit as to which shall flow from the preacher's mouth to the people. Sometimes repentance will be dominant, again it will be the need of regeneration, or it may be the groaning of the preacher's heart for the perfection of believers. These are the themes which the Holy Spirit uses in the work of revival, these are the truths used by holy men of old when convictions were profound, conversions clear and sanctifications glorious. In the handling of these truths our predecessors were mighty through God, and in them we may be strong to build up the kingdom of God.

The power of doctrinal preaching is in the fact that it emphasizes the personal relation of God to men. Repentance is "toward God," and "faith is on the Lord Jesus Christ," regeneration is by the word of his power, and retribution is from God. It is, therefore, personal preaching. It brings out the nature of the law and the principles of redemption; hence it is enlightening preaching. Through it alone the sinner gets a true view of himself and his lost estate. It is the only basis of sound religious experience. It strengthens the moral tone of the believer and keeps the preacher's orthodoxy fresh and glowing.

If we read correctly the signs of the times, there is need of much strong doctrinal preaching now. Superficial views of foundation truths abound; in not a few instances flimsy substitutes have been adopted. Singularly enough, there appears in connection with this state of emasculated theology a peculiar avidity for the outward manifestations of revival power, and not for the great facts of which these manifestations are the result. The lust is for sensation and excitement, and the pursuit of this has caused the great doctrines to fall from their place of prominence in our intellectual and heart-life.

Repentance is looked upon as a principle of humanitarian reform which barely recognizes the claims of an offended God. Regeneration as the act of a new creation is not recognized in the full import of its relation to salvation. How lightly do we seem to believe the doctrine of future retribution! The cause of it all is the remoteness of God in modern theology: humanitarianism has taken the place of God in theology—this has emasculated the substance and enfeebled the convicting power of our divine doctrines. These doctrines must be revoiced and energized by fresh personal contact with God. When they are, they become the heart and soul of a man's preaching. It is in this revoicing of dogma in the heart of the church that great revivals are born. It was so with Luther, it was so with Wesley, and will be so until the end.

But in some way doctrinal preaching has become the synonym for dry and ineffectual preaching. Why is this? One reason is, that doctrine is preached as a theological conviction apart from the vital heart-interest of the preacher. It is more of an essay than a message from God to the people—a dissertation, and not a burning proclamation. Such preaching will cause a congregation to suffer, to disperse, worn out with your orthodoxy. Our conception of doctrine must be more than a theological belief; it must be a truth burning in the heart. All of our theology needs to be brought to the throne of grace and vitalized by a breath from God. It needs to sink into the region of the heart-life and have the dust brushed off, to be baptized with love and fired with sympathy for men. A man is to be pitied when his heart-life and theology have been divorced. The preacher must feel that these great doctrines are truths given to him from God to declare to the people.

The very familiarity of these truths to the preacher may be a source of weakness in their proclamation. How familiar we all are with repentance, justification, the witness of the Spirit and eternal retribution, and yet how loosely they seem to enter into the life of conviction. If these old truths fired us with the zeal of new and fresh convictions, how we would preach! There is only one way by which to vitalize these truths, old and trite, in your experience—that is, to take them to the throne of grace and stay there until God gives you a new view of them. If you will take these old fundamental doctrines there, in the solitude of a personal interview with God, and deep meditation upon eternal things, and wait until God speaks them again to your soul, you will find them to be his thunderbolts for rending the stony heart and subduing the rebellious spirit of the carnal mind. Let us see them in their divineness, in the amplitude of their application to the men and the times in which we live, then will we preach them with the power of the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. P.

First and Second Class.

In one of our exchanges we find this little story: "I have lately heard of a man who took passage in a stage coach. There were first, second and third-class passengers. When he looked into the coach he saw all the passengers sitting together without distinction. He could not understand it until they came to a hill and the coach stopped, and the driver sang out: 'First-class passengers, keep their seats; second-class passengers, get out and walk; third-class passengers, get out and push.'" That's a pretty good description of the church coach. There are many first-class passengers, who keep their seats all the way "while climbing up Zion's hill." And there are any number of second-class passengers who, when difficulties are reached, are willing to get themselves over the difficulties, but will rarely help others over. To say that these two classes compose the majority of the church is to say what every pastor knows to be true. The helpers are in the minority in every church. Upon them comes the burden. If the work is done, they must do it. It comes pretty hard upon them, and sometimes they are tempted to murmur, but they remember that there is "great recompense of reward," and that their "labor is not in vain in the Lord," and they toil on, expecting to receive a crown of righteousness when the righteous Judge shall come. Their earnest labors ought to shame others into following their example, but it seldom does.

Provoking.

The apostle has this exhortation: "And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works." A concrete example as an illustration may show the meaning of this exhortation quicker and better than a column of platitudinous generalities. A writer in one of our exchanges gives this: "Two negroes were loading a cart. One of them seemed indolent and disposed to shirk. The other one stopped, and, looking sharply at his lazy fellow-worker, said: 'Sam, do you expect to go to heaven when you die?' 'Of course, I does,' said Sam. 'Then take hold and help load this cart,' said the other one." That was "provoking" Sam in a scriptural way, which materially increased his chances of having his final expectations realized. How many "Sams" there are in the church nobody has any idea of except the preacher and the stewards. These "Sams" will stand by with their hands in their pockets and look on with lazy pleasure while the few earnest and loyal souls try to do the work that is to be done. If they are asked if they expect finally to make the port of peace in safety, they invariably reply in the affirmative. As long as they occupy such an attitude, their chances of final salvation are exceedingly slim. Like Sam, if they would take hold and help bear the burdens others are carrying, their chances of heaven would be greatly increased.

NOTES.

By all means use sometimes to be alone,
Salute thyself, see what thy soul doth wear,
Dare to look in thy chest—for 'tis thine own—
And tumble up and down what thou findest there.
—George Herbert.

Dr. Charles H. Shepard, writing in the Journal of Hygiene, says: "When the physician ceases to prescribe alcohol as a medicine, the drink problem will have reached the final stage of its solution."

We may reprove sin in a sinful way. We may commit more sin in reproving sin than those commit whom we reprove. An impatient, bad-tempered reproof may be worse than the act which occasions our bad temper.

The measure of power is the measure of responsibility. What we can do is what we ought to do. Only let us not underrate our power. "Ye are the light of the world." Light shines and fills all the space it can, but it fills that certainly.

Mr. Charles Dudley Warner has restated a fact, the truth of which no editor will have the hardihood to deny. He traveled all over the country, he said, and "found many men who were not able to subscribe for a paper, but he had not yet found a man who was not able to edit one."—Methodist Recorder.

"He spoke of lilies, vines and corn,
The sparrow, and the raven;
And words so natural, yet so wise,
Were on man's heart engraven;
And yeast, and bread, and flax, and cloth,
And eggs, and fish, and candles;
See, how the whole familiar world
He most divinely handles."

A lady in Memphis sent the Nashville Advocate $200 for subscribers. That shows what can be done in the matter of securing subscribers for a religious paper. Earnest and loving persistence will generally accomplish the end aimed at. We wish that good woman could exercise that influence all over the church on the same line of work.

Gov. Foster had a conference at Vicksburg, last week, with representatives from East Carroll and Madison parishes in regard to the necessities of the overflowed people. It was said that at least 5,000 persons in the first and 3,000 in the latter parish need immediate relief. While the State can do nothing in the matter, the Governor assured the representatives that he would endeavor to put on foot some plan of relief by which the pressing necessities may be met.

One of our papers tells the story of a preacher who preached so excellently well that a good brother said "he must have been converted over." The fact in the case was the preacher had been on the verge of starvation, and somebody, inspired by the Lord, had sent him a quarter of beef on Saturday. The moral of this is: Sometimes poor preaching is the result of poor feeding. The exhortation is: If you want your preacher to feed you well, you must feed him well.

The late Dr. Donald Fraser, of London, well known as an effective platform speaker, attributed much of his success to his method of preparation, which might well be adopted by many less famous. He described it as follows: "My custom has been to speak to the subject in hand, avoiding all pompous parade of words, to prepare the substance of my speech in writing, but not to adhere very closely to the written words in speaking, and to confine myself to fifteen or twenty minutes. I consider it an ugly piece of selfishness in a public speaker to occupy so much time as to put all who follow to a disadvantage."—Independent.

Rev. Dr. Daniel Steele uttered some ringing words in a recent address: "I wish I had the power to reach every Methodist on the round earth. I would say, Cease living on the heroism of your fathers, quit glorying in numbers, sacrificing to statistics and burning incense of the General Minutes; down upon your knees and seek and find for yourselves the secret of the power of the fathers, a clean heart and the endowment of power from on high; then arise and unfurl the banner of salvation free and full, and a common sense theology, the beauty of which Joseph Cook says 'is that it can be preached.' Then in double-quick time charge upon the hosts of sins and conquer the world for Christ."—Christian Standard.

That a preacher knows well the meaning of the words he uses in preaching is aptly illustrated by the following, taken from an English exchange:

Talking about optimism and pessimism reminds me of a little incident that occurred some years ago before these words became current-coin in our pulpits. A minister whom I knew had used the terms in his sermon on the Sunday morning, and was afterwards questioned by a Lancashire operative as to their meaning. After some hesitation the minister said: "Well, my friend, optimism is taken from optics—that is, the eye; thus an optimist is one who sees. And pessimism is taken from pester, which means to bother; thus a pessimist is always quarrelling with everybody and everything." The above is a fact, as all my anecdotes in these letters are. I could give, if I thought fit, time, place, and name.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

'Tis not ours to murmur, "No."

Chooses, too, the battlefield,

It is said that Acadia parish raised last year one-third of the rice crop of Louisiana.

One of our exchanges says that Mer Rouge, La., has a handsome new Methodist Church.

Eight women were graduated last week from the Training-school for Nurses, of this city.

Prof. W. S. Burke has leased the Acadia College, in Crowley, La., for a term of five years.

Dr. Charles A. Briggs has been suspended from the ministry by the Presbyterian General Assembly.

Prof. Magruder, of Baton Rouge, called on us last week. He never looked better since we have known him.

Great actions make the places where they are performed famous. Two instances come to mind: Waterloo, Calvary.

A destructive hail storm occurred at Gibsland, La., last week. Very much damage was done to fruits and growing crops.

Bishop Galloway made a stirring address on Education before our State Normal College at Natchitoches, La., last week!

Rev. N. B. Harmon, of Bay St. Louis, gave us an appreciated call last week. He represents his work on the coast as progressing.

The Southern Presbyterian General Assembly elected a layman Moderator. That is the first instance of the kind, and a good move.

A cyclone passed over Rosedale, Miss., recently, demolishing many houses, killing several persons and wounding many more.

The House of Commons, last week, refused to adjourn to attend the Derby races. Surely the world moves, and that in a good direction.

There has been quite a change in the treatment of heretics. They are no longer roasted in fire. They are roasted in the church courts.

Rev. Ira B. Robertson, of South Vicksburg, and Rev. J. W. Chambers, agent for Millsaps College, gave us appreciated visits last week.

We have received the first number of The Southern Methodist, published in Atlanta, Ga., and edited by Rev. Sam Small. It is a sploy specimen.

A masonic celebration will be held at Trenton, Smith county, on June 24. Rev. C. McDonald has been invited to deliver an address, and has accepted.—Scott County Register.

It is going the rounds of the press that Bishop Haygood has two hooks in preparation. One as good as the "Man of Galilee" would be sufficient at this time.

Thirty armed men out a levee in Morehouse parish last week, and thereby flooded a fine section of the parish and destroyed some beautiful growing crops.

The Board of Church Extension has donated $750 towards a church in Biloxi, and the Parsonage Society $150 to improve the parsonage at Bay St. Louis.

The United Brethren—a branch of Methodism—through their recent General Conference have done away with the pastoral time limit.. Methodism improves.

The New York Central has now a train from New York to Chicago in twenty hours. To make the trip on time fifty-one miles an hour must be maintained.

Charles Dudley Warner tersely says that the difference between "faith cure" and "mind cure" is that the mind cure doesn't require any faith, and the faith cure doesn't require any mind.—Zion's Herald.

The Holston Methodist has changed hands. Richardson and Paulett are succeeded by O. W. Patton, who has bought the paper. Dr. R. N. Price is still editor. We wish the new management great success.

"An old proverb says: 'The heart and the tongue are only a span apart.' If a man's heart is touched by the fire of God, his lips will speak over words of beauty, truth, and gentle love on whatever theme he may speak."

We are obliged to Dr. Murrah for an invitation to be present at the commencement exercises of Millsaps College, beginning June 11. Drs. Steel and Cameron do the preaching, and Bishop Galloway and Dr. Hoss make the addresses, and Dr. W. R. Sims will read a dedicatory poem.

Dr. James Strong, who has filled the chair of exegetical theology in Drew Seminary for twenty-five years, has retired "full of years, works and honors." Prof. R. W. Rogers, of Dickinson College, was elected to fill his place.

In the celebrated Briggs case, before the Presbyterian Assembly in Washington, D. C., the appeal from the New York Presbytery was sustained by a vote of 383 to 116. Thus the famous Doctor has been condemned by the highest court.

Harry W. Rickey, a B. S. graduate of Tulane University, was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of Louisiana Avenue Church last week. New Orleans Methodism does not make a great deal of fuss, but she is continually sending forth preachers of the gospel of her Lord.

Dr. Sullivan desires us to correct a mistake of "Glideroy's" about the District Conference at Eupora. Here is what the Doctor says:

He includes myself among those who preached on that occasion and left himself out. I did not preach at all during the Conference. "Glideroy" preached a good sermon at eleven o'clock, Sunday morning, and talked well to the children at three P. M., besides adding interest to the business of the Conference by the part he took in the discussions of questions. Will you kindly make an editorial statement that will present these facts, and oblige?

Edwards station, J. P. Drake, P. C.....$5 55

The cheerful notes accompanying remittances from Bro. Linfield are an inspiration. His circuit will soon pay up their part of the debt. God bless him and every other contributor!

Edwards station was first in the Jackson district to observe a week of prayer and self-denial, and is the first in that district to make a remittance since March 31. Those clever people have not responded according to the measure of their ability, but they will make another and larger contribution very some. Their faithful pastor is always ready to obey the orders or resolutions of his Conference. He is an obedient son in the gospel, loyal to his church and faithful to his vows. God bless him!

MR. EDITOR: Allow me to thank Rev. S. M. Thames, P. E., of the Winona district, and the brethren of North Mississippi Conference for their kind remembrance in the way of a check on the bank for thirty-seven dollars. May God bless them temporally and spiritually!

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

HOME CIRCLE.

SORROW BUILDS.

BY JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

Tis sorrow builds the shining ladder up,
Whose golden rounds are our calamities,
Whereon our firm feet planting, nearer God
The spirit climbs and hath its eyes unsealed.
True is it that Death's face seems stern and cold
When he is sent to summon those we love:
But all God's angels come to us disguised;
Sorrow and sickness, poverty and death,
One after other lift their frowning masks,
And we behold the seraph's face beneath,
All radiant with the glory and the calm
Of having looked upon the front of God.

Some Girls.

BY MARY LOUISE PALMER.

Some girls are rapidly becoming veritable scolds I have a young friend, near neighbor, that I seldom visit without being reminded of Shakespeare's play.

My dear girls, I do not think it necessary or desirable to become a scold or shrew or impress one's friends as such, do you?

The young friend referred to is twenty-one years of age.

The habit of fault-finding, nagging, and general bickering is growing so fixed I fear it will cling.

She is energetic and bright, tidy in dress, attractive in appearance—alas, that she is what she is!

I have been present when she would say: "Father, wipe your feet on that mat before you step an inch into the sitting-room. Three times to-day have I swept sand from the carpet, all because you were too lazy to wipe your feet. Hear what I say, don't you?"

And I have seen the patient father sigh and cast reproving glances at his eldest daughter.

I supposed he disliked to rebuke her in the presence of company, but to my mind she richly deserved it.

When the mother has advised in matters where experience brings wisdom, I have heard the daughter reply with a frown between her eyes and toss of the head, "I shall do as I please, and you will find it out, too," in harsh, emphatic tones.

The younger brothers and sisters feel the untoward home influence and express themselves accordingly.

Their childish criticisms are tempered with charity as is often childish wont. They say: "O, sister's cross. She's always cross, but she mends our clothes nice. Mama says we mustn't mind. Sister's good."

Father and mother are mortified, chagrined, heart-hurt many times.

Do not draw from the description that she is wholly vain and giddy. Such is not the case.

O that she would struggle more valiantly with her besetment, if such it be, until she conquers.

Vigilance, unceasing watchfulness, and prayer will wrestle mightily with besetting sins.

O that such as I have described would put on their beautiful garments! what an overturn in many homes there would be.

And it is the little foxes, little sins that need most careful watching. A tretful word so easily slips from the tongue. Repeated again, it becomes second nature. Fault-findings increase, naggings become fixed habits, and oh, my girls, you are doomed—scolds, shrews! Avoid, turn away, overcome!—Christian at Work.

The Personal Work.

In every congregation there are souls who have been tarrying at the threshold for a long time. They are moral, thoughtful and earnest, but not religious. They have not hitherto been moved to consecrate themselves to Christ by the public services of the church, either ordinary or extraordinary. What remains to be done for them yet? We have an answer in three words: Try personal work. Go to them after diligent effort to put yourself in working mood, and after assuring yourself that you are in touch with him who alone can "give the increase." Seek a fitting season, and tenderly, prayerfully, anxiously, lay before them your sense of their duty and their danger. Seek to get the approval of their judgment, and to ally yourself with their conscience. With tact, with delicate consideration, in the spirit of Christ, in earnestness of soul, deal with them as you would want some courageous and faithful man or woman to deal with you in similar straits.—Bible Reader.

Living for Christ.

What was the charm of life to Paul? I will tell you. No; I'll let him tell you: "For me to live is Christ." "I live. No; not I—Christ liveth in me. I rejoice in tribulations." Nothing like weariness there. No grumbling; no forlorn sighing for an easier lot; no unmanly whimper. No; nothing but the serene joy of a warrior, every inch of whose armor is marked by the weapons of an obdurate foe; whose harness is soiled with the dust-stains of a hundred battlefields, and whose form flashed in the forefront of a hundred magnificent victories. Paul weary of living? Paul a failure? Paul ever wretched? Why, I'd just as soon think of a lark wailing a funeral dirge at the gates of heaven. Paul did not live in externals, as I am afraid too many of us do. He lived in internals, and he counted it a joy when he was perfectly exhausted. He never grew weary of living. "For me to live is Christ."—Dr. Cuyler.

What Has Become of the Old Lady?

A picturesque and venerable figure is missing from society. We find her in books, in galleries of family portraits, and in the loving memories of the middle-aged, but she herself has disappeared from our homes, and we seldom encounter her in the houses of our friends or on the street, thronged as it is with crowds of various types.

The old lady whom we used to know was not ashamed of her age. She resorted to no shallow artifices to conceal the fact that she was on the westering slope of life. Her dignified character forbade her desiring to make an impression of juvenility, and she was, therefore, frankly and unreservedly an elderly person.

This fact distracted nothing from her importance. Old though she was, she was often a notable housekeeper, active and energetic, a keen woman of business, a successful cultivator of plants in house and garden, an excellent nurse, a great reader, and an authority on all domestic matters. Her Bible was never far from her hand. She read it often and reverently, and there was about her an atmosphere of sincere and unaffected piety, which pervaded her home like a perfume.

As for her dress, do I not see her now, with the gown of sustere black or quiet gray, simply made, hanging in modest folds, relieved by white at the neck and wrists, a little shawl crossed over her shoulders, a beautiful cap covering her smooth hair, and finishing her attire as if it were a crown.

The dear old gentle woman loved elegance in her quaintly fashioned costume. She preferred fine and good things to cheap imitations, and she did not vary her styles with every caprice of the hour.

Busy as a bee, she never fussed. Her memory for her friends and their interests was acute, and she cared much for her children's friends and for the church and its ministers. But with trivial gossip she did not concern herself.

Who that remembers in her own family such a dear old lady does not love to think of her? And is it wise or well that she should be eliminated from our social ranks?—Aunt Marjorie, in the Christian Intelligencer.

Silent Husbands.

Wives often regret that their husbands do not talk to them. This is not the place to discuss the shortcomings of a man, but sometimes when we have listened to the fault-findings, the garrulous repetitions, frivolous details, the childish exactions of sympathy and attention with which some women bore their husbands when they are over-burdened and anxious with care and work, we have not wondered that some men grow taciturn in their homes. But it is a great loss if a man is silent among his wife and children. The husband and wife live so much of the time in a different world that a free intercourse can be a great help and pleasure to each of them. You will not be likely to make a man talk by telling him that he ought to talk, or scolding him because he does not do so. Make it a pleasure for him to talk with you. Exercise good sense, good temper and tact in drawing him out on topics of interest to himself. Be patient under his moods of silence. Be deserving the companionship of a sensible man. Avoid talking of persons, or insignificant details concerning yourself or your work. Have something interesting or valuable to say. The story of your child's prattle may be full of interest. The number of pies you have made, or the rooms you have swept, may not be worth repeating. Cultivate the graces of character, speech and tones of voice, and you may find that the man who was glad to escape from the loquacious, complaining, exacting woman, goes reluctantly from her who knows when to talk and when to be silent, "who openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in whose tongue is the law of kindness."—Christian at Work.

Blessing through Trial.

Fretting is like a tearing saw, cutting the heart. Paul speaks of "dying, and behold we live," full of sorrows, and very poor, yet making others rich. When cast down, we have a chance to learn that we are made of different stuff than to be hung or drowned under the suicide of depression; by enduring trial we find that every trouble is a new power at work to develop in us a giant manhood; the weak hands and the weak knees are converted into strength, and the weak heart learns courage. Whatever comes, faith should never fail; a bill may be presented when we have no money with which to pay, but there should never come a trial that shall find us without faith.

It is a great blessing to be hopeful. A physician prescribes medicine, but the patient shakes his head, refuses to take it, and by the absence of faith and hope seals his death. So our heavenly Physician wishes to bless through some trial; we refuse, and by unbelief thrust aside the means of blessing. In a fishing hamlet on the coast of Wales there dwelt a poor woman whose husband was lost on the dangerous rocks. Upon the spot where he was lost she piled up stones, and built a beacon to warn the sailors. The widow's beacon was the first light-house on the Welsh coast. Behind that rock she had buried her husband, but she roused from her despair to save others. Each of us should try to uplift the weak hands and heart of another, saying, "Be strong;" in so doing God will come and save us, and those we try to save.—Dr. Armitage.

It is the bright day that brings forth the adder. Think of God when the tempter says, "All this will I give thee." Trust not the insolvent world; it has cheated every creditor that ever trusted it; and it will cheat you.—Hannah More.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

A LOST CHILD.

BY ANNA F. DUNHAM.

"I'm losted! Could you find me, please?"
Poor little frightened baby!
The wind had tossed her golden fleece,
The stones had scratched her dimpled knees,
I stooped and lifted her with ease,
And softly whispered, "Maybe."

"Tell me your name, my little maid;
I can't find you without it."
"My name is Shiny-eyes," she said.
"Yes; but your last name?" She shook her head.
"Up to my house they never said
A single word about it."

"But, dear," I said, "what is your name?"
"Why, didn't you hear me told you?
Dust Shiny-eyes." A bright thought came,
"Yes; when you're good. But when they blame
You, little one—is it just the same
When mamma has to scold you?"

"My mamma never scolds," she moans,
A little blush ensuing,
"'Cept when I've been a-frowing stones;
And then she says (the culprit owns)—
'Mehitabel Sapphira Jones,
What has you been a-doing?'"

In Japan.

WALKING TO A CASTLE.

Rev. M. B. Hill, of China, whose wife died last Christmas Eve, is spending a few days in Japan, and now is in Matsuyama, much to our delight. You may take a walk with us. We go a half block and turn to the right; then two blocks and turn to the left. We are upon O Kai Do, the principal thoroughfare of the city. Curiosities here are too numerous for us to stop with any. The sight of the women causes the visitor from China to remark the difference between the positions of Chinese and Japanese women. The latter are better off, in that they are granted the right to do something; but the former are superior in modesty and virtue. Passing the theater, a place very noisy many hours of most days and nights, the street begins to turn around the base of Shiro yama. Shiro means castle; yama, mountain. The soldier, who has been sent as our guide, after a little takes the steep way that leads up the mountain. The city hospital and a shinto shrine are left below. We go up and up, thinking of the knight who, thirty years ago, went the same way, always with his two great swords, and sometimes with his heavy armor on. The castle was the headquarters of 40,000 of them. They were for war, and in the long days of peace they practiced the arts of war, farmers bringing to them a yearly tribute of rice, and merchants doing obeisance when they passed through the streets. The mountain is well wooded, but an occasional glimpse of the city below may be caught as we proceed. We reach the great outer stone wall, impossible to be broken down, because, though high, and not to be scaled from without, the wall is only a support for the great terraced ground which forms the first castle yard. Going through one massive gate, and then another, by which we pass, the second wall, and rise upon the second terraced yard, we may observe several buildings, used for storing weapons, and as the home of servitors. The present keeper was one of these servitors. Though now very decrepit, he has already appeared with keys, to conduct us further. He draws you some water from the very large and deep well, which he explains was never dug, but formed as the earth was filled into the valley between the two breaks. You can see that the one mountain originally had two peaks. We walk over this terrace, whose best service at present is to supply the ground for the keeper's little farm. There is a corner building where were kept the paraphernalia of worship. Two more gates and the innermost yard appears, surrounded by the central building, or castle proper. The principal hall upon the ground floor is where the lords were to go and kill themselves in case of defeat, coming down by means of a rude elevator from the halls above. You may ascend to those halls by a stairway in another part of the structure, and from the height reached you may look at the surrounding city, the sea, islands, fields, distant villages and mountains. There is the road to the sea, with occasional abrupt turns made in it, so that the number of the enemy coming could very well be judged from the way they filled these parts of the road. (Kato Yashiaki founded the castle about 300 years ago. It was rebuilt forty-nine years ago, and of the original only the first great gateway remains.) There is nothing fine in the structure, but, considering the amount of granite used, the cost must have been a million dollars. It is not used at all at present. Though a regiment of soldiers located here now have modernized barracks at the mountain base, the deserted condition of this castle, and the sight of piles of sharp swords and spears begging for purchasers as one passes in front of the numerous second-hand shops, shows that the world is going on towards the fulfillment of Isaiah's words: "And they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." HENRY G. HAWKINS.

Matsuyama, Japan, March 8, 1893.

Funny Definitions.

According to the Schoolmaster, "stability" was recently defined as being "the cleaning up of a stable;" and an answer to some question about insurance had this passage: "The money is provided by the company to defray the expenses by the birth of members in pecuniary distress." In summer, it seems, "the day is longer owing to expansion by the heat;" and that season itself is thus explained; "Once a year we have the whole bright side of the sun turned towards us. Then it is summer. The sun is in the solstice and stands still."

"What comes next to man in the scale of being?" inquired an examiner. "His shirt," was the reply. Asked to give the distinction, if any, between a fort and a fortress, a boy nicely defined them: "A fort is a place to put men in, and a fortress is a place to put women in." On being asked what the chief end of man was, another boy, without any hesitation, said, "The end what's got his head on."

A teacher asked a very juvenile class which of them had ever seen a magnet. A sharp urchin at once said he had seen lots of them. "Where?" inquired the teacher, surprised at his proficiency. "In the cheese."

Being asked what conscience was, a boy replied, "An inward monitor." Asked what a monitor meant, the ready answer was, "An iron-clad vessel."

Another lad was asked what he understood by "celerity," and "perhaps from experience," says the contemporary account, he described it as "something to put hot plates down with."

Ragged Tom.

One Sabbath afternoon a big boy stood at the door of Sabbath-school. He was so bad that he had been turned out of school the Sabbath before. His father and mother had brought him, and begged that he might be received again. The superintendent said: "We should be glad to do him good, but we are afraid he will ruin all the other children. It is very bad for a school when a big boy sets a wicked example."

"We know he is a bad boy at school, sir," said the parents, "but he is ten times worse at home. He will be ruined if you do not take him back."

"We could take him back, if we could secure his good behavior. I will see," replied the superintendent.

So he stepped back into the school, and rang his bell for silence. All listened while he said: "That boy wants to come into the school again, but we can not take him back without making sure of his good behavior. Will anyone be surety for him?"

A pause followed. The elder boys shook their heads. They said they knew him too well. The others did not care for him. But one little boy pitied the big bad boy, and was very sorry that no one would be surety. The little boy went by the name of "Ragged Tom." It was not his fault that he was ragged, for his mother was very poor. The superintendent soon heard his little voice, saying, "If you please, sir, I will, sir."

"You, Tom—a little boy like you! Do you know what it means to be surety, Tom?"

"Yes, sir, if you please; it means that when he is a bad boy again, I'm to be punished for it."

"And are you willing to be punished for that big boy?"

"Yes, sir, if he's bad again."

"Then come in," said the superintendent, looking to the door; and the big boy, with a downcast face, walked across the floor. He was thinking as he walked: "I know I am a bad boy, but I'm not so bad as that! I'll never let that little fellow be punished for me—never!" And true to his word, he became one of the best boys in the school.

My dear young friends, Jesus really did what Tom promised to do. He stood surety for sinners, whom he loved before the foundation of the world. May you be led to realize that, without this surety, you must forever be shut out from the bliss of heaven!

But remember, dear young reader, who may be sighing over your sins, and longing for pardon, that God's Word has graciously said, "Whosoever cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out."—Selected.

Some Clever Catches.

A young lady was once talking with a very young and very smart man, who was inclined to air his knowledge of the language a little beyond what she felt that modesty required. She therefore said to him, with an air of deference to his superior attainments:

"You are a Latin scholar. I wish you would tell me how to pronounce the word 'so-met-imes.'"

The youth, with an air of kindly patronage, replied, "I have not met the word in my Latin reading; but I should have no hesitation in saying that it should be pronounced 'so-met-imes'" (giving it in four syllables, the accent on the second).

"Thank you for telling me," replied the girl, demurely. "I have always heard it pronounced 'sometimes'; but, if you say the other way, that must be right."

This is similar to the perhaps familiar catch of the pronunciation of "bac kache," which will often surprise the uninitiated by proving to be only "backache." It also reminds one of a question printed some years since as to the way of spelling "need"—to need bread. The average person will reply, "K-n-e-a-d," of course. But the answer will be, "That is the way to spell 'knead' dough, but not to 'need bread.'"—Harper's Young People.

Wattie, the Collie Dog.

When "Wattie" came to the farm he was about three months old. It happened that a litter of kittens arrived about the same time. Wattie observed the old cat now and then carrying her kittens from place to place, and he took it into his head to help her, but singularly enough, never offered to carry any but one, a little black fellow. The cat carried her kittens as cats do, only with some definite purpose to hide them, but Wattie seemed to have no such purpose with the black kitten he appropriated, and seemingly did so only for mischief, for he kept at it even after the black kitten had got to be a sedate, full-grown puss. She never resented it, and seemed to have as much satisfaction in being carried around as Wattie had in carrying her. We got him so trained, that if we ordered him to "Bring the black cat," even if a hundred yards away, he bounded towards her and, taking her tenderly by the back of the neck, brought her all curled up to our feet. It was a curious feature, for the collie is not usually a carrying dog.

Three Classes.

Charles Kingsley, writing to some young friends who were addicted to gambling, says:

My dear boys, the human race may, for all practical purposes, be divided into three parts:

1. Honest men, who intend to do right, and do it. 2. Knaves, who mean to do wrong, and do it. 3. Fools, who aim to do whichever is the pleasanter.

This latter class may be subdivided thus: Black fools, who would rather do wrong, but dare not unless with the crowd. White fools, who would rather do right, but lack courage unless it is the fashion.

A little Boston girl only three years old, who had no experience in the matter of broken limbs beyond that afforded by the casualties in her family of dolls, had the misfortune to fall and break her arm, and as soon as she discovered what had happened to her she cried out: "Oh, mamma, will it drop off?" "No, darling," the mother answered; "I will hold it so that it will not hurt you till the doctor comes, and he will fix it all right." "Well, mamma," the little one said, pressing her lips together and trying to be brave, "do hold on tight so that the sawdust won't run out!"—Youth's Companion.

If industry is no more than habit, 'tis at least an excellent one. If you ask me which is the real hereditary sin of human nature, do you imagine I shall answer pride, or luxury, or ambition, or egotism? No—I shall answer indolence. What conquers indolence will conquer all the rest. Indeed, all good principles must stagnate without mental activity.—Zimmerman.

We may stand and knock at men's hearts till our own ache, but no opening till Christ come. He can fit a key to all the cross wards of the will, and with sweet efficacy open it, and that without any force or violence to it.—Flavel.

Dr. King's Royal Germetuer

Is a unique, peerless preparation, which embodies the best and latest fruits of medical research, and differs radically from ordinary medicines in a number of particulars. Here are three of them:

1. It is as pleasant to take as lemonade.
2. It is harmless always—may be safely given to a babe one day old.
3. IT CURES WHEN ALL ELSE FAILS.

REV. SAM P. JONES SAYS:

"My wife, who was an invalid from nervous sick headache, has been entirely cured by three weeks' use of Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. Her health is perfect. In three weeks two of my children were cured completely of nasal catarrh. IT IS TRULY A GREAT REMEDY."

GENERAL LONGSTREET SAYS:

"I have suffered for months past from insomnia and indigestion, and failing of relief, was induced by a friend to try Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. I am now relieved, and I hope permanently so."

TESTED AND PROVED FOR YEARS.

TERRY, Miss., April 21, 1893.

We have been using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer for several years in our family, and have recommended it to many others. It has always done what is claimed for it, as far as tried, and I regard it as the best medicine we have ever had in our family.

Mrs. J. J. HALSELL.

This great remedy presents an array of testimonials absolutely without a parallel in the history of medicines either as to character or number. These statements show that it cures Nervous Disorder, Stomach Troubles, Bowel Derangement in old or young, whether recent or chronic, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Debility.

Give it a fair trial, and you will be convinced. $1 per bottle, 6 for $5.

BUDER.—BESSIE CURTISS BUDER was born Oct. 29, 1864, and died in the town of Columbus, Miss., Jan. 26, 1893. Her life was beautiful and lovely, and adorned by many native virtues, and by the refining, elevating influence of the Christian religion. Her death was peaceful. She was the daughter, by a former marriage, of our beloved brother, Rev. J. B. Stone, of the North Mississippi Conference. On the death of her mother she was taken, when only nine days old, to the heart and home of Mrs. Mary Thompson, a mother in Israel, affectionately known as "Aunt Curtiss," specially by many of the former pupils of old Centenary Institute, at Summerfield, Ala. Amid the kindly influence of this delightful Christian home, beloved by Sister Thompson, her foster mother, as fondly as any daughter is loved by her own mother, Bessie passed the happy years of child-life, and grew up into lovely young womanhood. Naturally of sweet and amiable disposition, she carried about her the charm of loveliness, and wherever she went shed the beautiful and attractive light of her own sunny spirit.

She was married, Jan. 29, 1884, to Mr. E. E. Buder, of Columbus, Miss. To her husband she gave the wealth of her loving womanly affection. On her deathbed she said to him that the nine years of her married life were the happiest she had ever known. And of him she writes: "I never knew a more devoted husband. His every thought centered in Bessie." Stricken and desolate, he laments, as one broken-hearted, the loss of the cherished wife and companion of his youth.

Two children were left motherless by the death of Sister Buder, one a bright little boy of a few years and a baby only seven days old, the infant Bessie, which has been taken to the same warm, generous heart that cared tenderly for its mother under like circumstances, now more than twenty-eight years ago.

I am not informed as to the time when Sister Buder made public profession of religion. Brought up under such favorable social and religious surroundings, it is probable that it was quite early in life when she accepted Christ as a personal Savior and became a member of the Methodist Church. She took an active part in the work of the church, always ready for whatever her willing hands could do. She seemed to have a premonition of her death, as in a kind of vision. But to her the grave had no terrors. Its gloom was dispelled by the radiant hopes of the gospel. She retained to the last her consciousness and the use of her mental faculties. Calling the members of the family about her bed, she conversed with them in beautiful and touching language, and then bade them good-by. Loving messages were sent to her absent father and to each of his family. To Rev. R. M. Standefer, her pastor, on his asking if there was aught in which he could minister to her comfort, she replied, "No, Bro. Standefer, I know that my Redeemer, God, has saved me, and it will be but a few minutes longer and I shall be with him." Then she said, "What will my dear father say in the morning when he receives a telegram that his oldest daughter is dead?" She requested her friends to sing the beautiful words, "God be with you till we meet again."

A death so peaceful, so radiant with the hopes of a blissful immortality, is but as the transplanting of a beautiful flower from earth to the paradise of God. T. C. WIKA.

BAYLIES.—In Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 1, 1893, Mrs. HARRIET HELEN BAYLIES, wife of Judge Nicholas Baylies. She was born in Lyndon, Vt., Nov. 8, 1822; was the daughter of Gen. Wm. Calhoun, an influential citizen, having been lieutenant-governor of the State, and at the time of his death a representative in Congress for his district. In 1842 she was married to Nicholson Baylies, formerly of Montpelier, Vt., but at that time a resident of Greensburg, La. Her husband was a lawyer, and practiced in the courts in St. Helena and the adjoining parishes. The first ten years of their wedded life were spent in the South, but as the family increased it was thought best to return to the North. She was the mother of eight children; six sons and one daughter survive her, and all of whom assisted in the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of their parents' marriage the fifth of last September.

For fifty-five years she was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and walked with God in all the journey of her life. Her sufferings were severe for three months before she was released. In her sacred room she became a preacher of righteousness. While the weary days and nights rolled by she became more and more the center of Christian influence, and with her name remains a sweet fragrance of a beautiful life. She was a devout Methodist, but never failed to recognize her Savior under whatever covering he came. Purely unselfish and Christ-like, she strove to further his cause. Her letters to this writer, for over thirty years, so full of faith and trust in God, has been an inspiration encouraging us on our way, and "urging us to seek holiness of heart and practice it in life." "The hoary head is a crown of glory if it be found in the way of righteousness. "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor more than choice gold."

MRS. M. L. J. HOOVER.

THOMPSON—LUCY MABEL THOMPSON, daughter of James and Lunia Richardson, was born in Yazoo county, Miss., March 4, 1869, and departed this life April 28, 1893. Luny joined the Methodist Church at Trauquil, Miss., in 1889, and ever after lived a true Christian life. Although she was an invalid for several years, she was dangerously ill but a few days. She had a severe chill on Saturday evening, which was the beginning of an attack of pneumonia, and Friday morning, at seven o'clock, the golden chain of life was broken and her pure spirit winged its way to "that beautiful city of light," where loved ones meet to part no more. She leaves a devoted husband, a dear little babe, a mother and two sisters, besides many friends, to mourn her loss. To these I would say, Let us try to live so as to meet our dear Lucy at the golden gates of heaven, where we know she is waiting and watching to welcome us home.

JESSIE.

WILLKINGS.—JAMES A. WILLKINGS was born in Wilmington, N. C., July 27, 1811. He came to Grenada, Miss., in 1837, where he resided until the date of his death, March 2, 1893.

His was a quiet life, spent latterly within sacred precincts of his own pleasant home. Nothing wonderful, nothing strange, perhaps, ever marked his life. So noiseless, so uniform, that no irregularity called attention to its great value. In early manhood he joined the Methodist Church, in which he held almost uninterruptedly official position to the time of his death. For many years he was the faithful superintendent of the Sunday-school, from which place he retired ten years since and became the happy teacher of a class of small boys, who soon became much devoted to him. It was beautiful to see the elderly man become more and more child-like without becoming childish. His last illness was quite protracted. He suffered much, and spoke often of his sickness as the "husking time," when God was fitting him for the home above. His ripening was quiet perceptible, and when at last he saw the time of his departure was at hand, he called his family about him, and said words of comfort and cheer to each one, and took his last farewell. The end was peace. As a child falleth asleep, so the "child-like" man passed to his reward, and the mortal remains of the oldest man in Grenada was laid to rest by a sorrowing people who had known the good man from their childhood. We shall see him no more in this life. THOS. J. NEWELL.

SANDERS.—Sister ELIZA SANDERS, daughter of Amanda and Robert Sanders, both of whom preceded her to the land of the blessed. Sister Sanders joined the M. E. Church, South, early in life, and lived a consistent member of the same to the day of her death. Sister Liza Sanders was never married. Her life was spent in the service of God and her fellow-men.

She was born in Claiborne county, Miss., Aug. 17, 1820, and has lived in this county and near the same neighborhood in which she was born seventy-one years and seven months, and during all this time she has been well thought of and honored by all that knew her.

She fell asleep the last of March, 1893. She died of cancer of the stomach; was sick seven weeks. In the beginning of her illness she dreamt, or saw in a vision, a beautiful white dove coming in unto her, and lighting on her shoulder, and thence down on the bosom, which, no doubt, was a messenger sent to comfort her in her last hours. She expressed herself to the writer as being ready and willing at the Lord's command to go. Before this time she has met mother and father at the beautiful gate, where they have been waiting for her

D. F. GUICK, P. C.

BOREN.—Sister SARAH A. BOREN was born in Claiborne county, Miss., Sept. 6, 1825. She was married to Richard B. Boren, July 20, 1844. They spent forty-seven years and some months together in life's path. To them were born seven children, four of whom remain to mourn the loss of mother and father. Bro. Boren preceded his beloved wife to the land of the blessed two years and six months; one child at three years of age, and one at eighteen, one at twenty-six. What a meeting there has been at the beautiful gate, for, no doubt, they were all waiting there for mother!

Sister Boren joined the M. E. Church, South, early in life, and remained a member of the same until transferred by the Father to the church triumphant. She was not alarmed at the approach of death. She had made preparation for this early in life, and was only waiting the Master's call to bid her come up higher, and on Jan. 20, 1893, the summons came, and the spirit so long encumbered by the flesh was released, and soared away to the God who gave it. May the hand that led father and mother ever lead the children till there will be an unbroken family around the throne in the world beyond!

D. F. GUICK, P. C.

HOWARD.—Bro. J. P. HOWARD was born in Union district, South Carolina, Aug. 6, 1812, and died at the residence of his son, O. P. Howard, April 25, 1893, aged eighty years eight months and nineteen days.

He moved to Mississippi among the early of the State, and settled in Panola county before the red men left the State. He moved from Panola county to Copiah county, Miss., and lived here for a number of years. He moved from Copiah county with his son, O. P. Howard, to Claiborne county, Miss., in 1835, where he remained to the day of his death.

He was married to Miss M. K. Pollard in 1842. She fell on sleep in 1858; preceded him to the home beyond thirty-eight years. He had three children—two sons and one daughter—two of whom remain to mourn his loss. He joined the Baptist Church under the ministry of Rev. Ingrum Perser, and remained a member of the same to the day of his death. He was interred in the Scott Cemetery, April 27, with masonic honors, after religious service conducted by the writer, D. F. GUICK.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO THOSE SENDING MONEY.—Remittances should be made only by money orders, express company orders, registered letters, drafts or checks on New Orleans banks or merchants. Drafts on country banks occasion a loss of from 15 to 25 cents per check. Drafts on country merchants we have no facility for collecting. Checks and drafts, also money orders, should be made payable to D. L. Mitchel, Publisher.

I, A. C. Hafflefinger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

NINETEEN VOLUMES OF SERMONS

PREACHED BY

CHARLES HADDON SPURGEON

(THE GREAT LONDON PREACHER)

FROM 1858 TO 1889.

By special arrangements made with the Funk & Wagnalls Company, publishers, we are enabled to offer our readers complete sets of nineteen volumes, each, substantially bound in good cloth, and printed in large, clear type, on good paper, at $12.00. The regular price, per volume, for these is $1.00; total, $19.00 a set, so that by taking advantage of the opportunity we now offer, purchasers will save $7.00 on each set. The binding, paper, etc., of these volumes, are exactly the same as of those selling for $19.00 the set, or $1.00 per volume.

The size of each of the volumes is 12mo., 7¼ x 5¼. About eight thousand pages are contained in the series (19 volumes), and copious indices to texts, titles, and topics, are found in the books.

Spurgeon's sermons are of great value to all denominations. They are read wherever the English language is spoken. They have been translated into many languages and are popular throughout the world. In this country alone, we are told by Mr. Spurgeon, in the preface to one of his volumes of sermons, in 1859, over thirty years ago, more than one hundred and fifty thousand volumes of his sermons had been sold. It has been well written: "It is hardly an exaggeration to say that Spurgeon's parish has been the whole English-speaking world. Besides the myriads who have heard him in his own great Tabernacle in London, and the millions in many lands who have read his sermons, his name almost from the very beginning of his ministry has been a household word everywhere familiar and everywhere standing for one who gloried in this, that it was given him to proclaim the good news of the salvation through Christ. Kingdoms might wax and wane, revolutions might come and go, speculative theories might succeed each other in brilliant succession, yet the constant factors—human nature and the redeeming grace through Jesus Christ—remained the same."

No family library, no church worker, or Christian layman should be without a set of these remarkable and invaluable sermons.

James McCosh, D.D., ex-President of Princeton College, says: "Sound in faith and at the same time eminently practical and searching . . . clear and picturesque . . . full of lively illustrations, and faithful throughout."

J. W. Bashford, D.D., President of the Ohio Wesleyan University: "The great preacher of the common people among English-speaking nations."

Golden Rule, Boston: "Above our praise and beyond even our criticism."

Church Advocate, Harrisburg, Pa.: "A mighty spiritual power."

The Standard, Chicago: "As sermons they stand alone, unequaled by any other published sermons, by men now in the pulpit or by those of other generations."

The Congregationalist: "Full of the true spirit of Christ. No man since Paul could say with more emphasis than could Mr. Spurgeon, 'I believed, therefore did I speak.'"

President Andrews, of Brown University: "No preacher since the Apostle John has maintained himself in genuine pulpit power so long."

New York Observer: "Out of the fulness of the heart, his mouth poured forth treasures of wisdom, even the wisdom of God."

The Religious Telescope, Dayton, Ohio: "A wonderful spiritual insight of the truth of God's word and its special adaptation to the needs of the race."

The Christian Advocate (Meth. Epis.), New York: "He spoke as one having authority, not original, but derived from God. Every tone implied a consciousness that he was an apostle of Jesus Christ, placed there by Him, and speaking in His name."

The Churchman (Prot. Epis.), New York: "This century has not heard a voice raised for Christ with so complete a mastery of Scripture, thought, and language as was exhibited by Spurgeon."

The Christian Intelligencer, New York: "The Gospel preached by Mr. Spurgeon was the power of God unto salvation."

Wayland Hoyt, D.D., Baptist: "What loyalty to Christ; what exquisite analyses of the Scripture; what vision into the spiritual life; what subtle and searching application; what grip on truth; what luminous English!"

Rev. John N. Freeman (Presbyterian), Denver, Colorado: "No sermon or commentaries have more greatly stimulated and nourished my mind and heart."

The Watchman, Boston: "Charles H. Spurgeon has left no successor: his place no living man can fill."

Church Review, Harrisburg, Pa.: "It is this deep-toned spirituality running through Mr. Spurgeon's sermons and writings which gives their remarkable power with the people."

Geo. A. Gordon, D.D., Boston: "No mind can measure the good that these sermons have done to humble souls the world over."

M. Valentine, D.D., Lutheran Seminary, Gettysburg: "An unsurpassed illustration of the power of the pulpit."

The Interior, Chicago: "His wealth of illustration made the thought drive home like an arrow. His intimacy with Scripture couched every sermon, while his personal conviction of the horrors of evil and belief in the verities of life now and hereafter gave his speech an overwhelming impetus that brought hearts and minds into obedience with the truth."

Sympathy for the Distressed.

Our lives are all music if we but touch the chords rightly, so says one of our poets, and we all know there is a golden thread entering into the warp and woof of every day life that is touched by sympathy for the distressed and suffering. At such a time what a boon to have on hand Dicks' Mul-en-ol to offer as a relief for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains and colic. It is soothing and cooling. Large bottles 50 cents.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

About 6 000 miners are out on a strike in Kansas.

A cyclone swept through Rosedale, Miss., on June 1. The losses entailed amount to $40,000.

The remains of Jefferson Davis were interred at Hollywood, Richmond, Va., on May 31. The remains of his two sons and grandson were buried in the same section on June 2.

The Home Brewery and the Hope Rice Mill were burned in this city on June 1. The total loss on the brewery is estimated at about $100 000. The building, machinery and stock of the rice mill were destroyed, causing a loss of $30,000.

The ordnance department of the army is making preparations to begin the manufacture of the new army rifle at the Springfield armory immediately after the beginning of the new fiscal year. The rifle is of very small caliber, intended to use smokeless powder, and is a magazine arm.

A wreck, in which eleven persons were injured, occurred on the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad, near Newson's station, Tenn., on June 2. The rear coach of a passenger train jumped the track and rolled down an embankment between thirty and forty feet high.

At a mass meeting of citizens held in Hope, Ark., on June 1, reports were received showing that thousands of acres of corn and cotton are literally swept away. Fences are gone, and wrecked trees cover the fields, giving no chance to replant. Relief committees were appointed to do all possible to alleviate suffering.

Reports from upper Red river, on June 3, indicate that one of the greatest apprehensions of Louisiana levee men is in progress of fulfillment. Floods of rain were reported from Shreveport, and this, with the low barometer now moving eastward between the head waters of the Arkansas, will, it is feared, produce a disastrous inundation.

The little town of Eudora, Ark., about 30 miles southwest from Greenville, was destroyed by a cyclone on June 1. The leading merchant of the village was killed outright, his store having been blown down on him. About twenty dwellings were destroyed, one negro child being killed and several negroes were injured. Nothing was left standing in the track of the cyclone.

Governor Foster has visited in person the districts which have suffered from the overflow, has talked with all the prominent men in each section, has done all in his power to relieve actual want wherever he has found it, and has, where it was possible, calculated the amount of money necessary to repair in part, at least, damages to which the people have been subjected. There is no reserve fund in the State treasury upon which he can draw in such emergencies as this. It is not considered good policy to call upon outside communities for aid as long as it can be procured in Louisiana. It will take between $40,000 and $50,000 to afford the necessary relief. The Governor has determined to borrow this money, distribute it through the proper channels when it will do the most good, and ask the coming Legislature to make an appropriation reimbursing the amount expended.

FOREIGN.

A fire occurred in the Fuente Coal Mine, Mexico, on June 3, in which twenty-six lives were lost.

The seventy-fourth birthday of Queen Victoria, although the anniversary occurred on May 24, was, by formal order, officially celebrated on June 3.

The Columbian immigration commissioner proposes to send representatives to New York for the purpose of inducing immigrants who land there to come to that country.

Special arrangements are making in Austria for the reception of Emperor William and the King of Saxony when they shall be entertained by Emperor Franz Joseph at the September maneuvers.

Baron Von Saurma Jeltsch, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary for Prussia at the court of Stuttgart, Wurtemberg, has been appointed German embassador to Washington.

Excavators at Delphi, Greece, have unearthed a colossal marble statute of Apollo. The statue, which is of the best antique school, is in excellent condition, except that the nose is broken.

The Why and Wherefore.

There is nothing marvelous in the fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla should cure so many diseases. When you remember that a majority of the disorders "flesh is heir to" are due to impure or poisonous condition of the blood, and that Hood's Sarsaparilla is an effective and radical blood purifier, the whole thing is explained.

Besides its blood-purifying qualities, Hood's Sarsaparilla also contains the best known vegetable stomach tonics, diuretics, kidney remedies and liver invigorants, and is thus an excellent specific for all disorders of these organs, as well as for low condition of the system, or That Tired Feeling.

A Russian ukase has been issued licensing an agricultural association, the object of which is to export agrarian products from Russia. The ukase provides that no Hebrew or foreigner shall be allowed to subscribe to or own shares in the capital stock of the association.

The sugar making season being over, reliable estimates can now be made as to the amount of sugar made in Cuba in 1893, and the most correct authority places the grand total at about 750,000 tons, one-quarter less than the estimated crop at the beginning of the year.

Darkest Russia, a monthly publication, announces that Russian persecution of the Jews is extending to Poland. It says that 480 families have been expelled from the Ronda Gonzowski district alone. All the heads of families thus expelled were engaged in trade and possessed more or less real estate, which they were forced to abandon.

Camp Meetings.

The Topisaw Camp Meeting will begin Friday, Aug. 11, 1893, and run for eight days. The camp ground is ten miles east of Summit. Anyone coming by rail will find a hack line running from camp ground to railroad twice daily. The invitation is unlimited. Come, brethren, praying for the power of God unto the salvation of souls. Then we will see the perfection of our hearts' desire.

J. S. FELDER, Sec.

By T. A. LUSTER, P. C.

In the House of Commons the discussion of the Home Rule bill continues. On June 17 Mr. Gladstone accepted the proposed amendment that the right to interfere in hostilities between foreign countries be excepted from the powers of the Irish Legislature. Somewhat later Mr. Morley accepted for the government an amendment excepting from the control of the Irish government forts, magazines, arsenals, naval dock yards and other similar means of defense of the realm.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

ON THE BEACH.

The twenty-second annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 12, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 5, and remain on the ground until the twenty sixth. Holders of camp meeting railroad tickets desiring to attend the session of the Biblical Institute and Summer School for Christian Workers, which opens its first annual session on July 26, can get their railroad tickets extended until August 31. All trains stop at the grounds during the meeting. Express trains Nos. 5 and 6 will stop on signal from June 1 to Oct. 1.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing Districts Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade-trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the rush at the opening of the camp meeting should address communications to W. B. Thomson, chairman Tent and Cot Committee, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Cot Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution towards defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Caseyville, Miss., June 2: "Sunday-schools doing well. Church work moving on rather slow. We are trying to live in peace with all mankind in spite of the devil. Crops looking well. Plenty of rain and grass. Not crop being harvested. We have a parsonage cow, and now, with the blessing of God upon our hearts, home and doors, we ought to be happy, and so we are. God bless the good, and pity the bad."

Rev. Jno. B. Kent, Cameron, La., June 3: "Our second quarterly meeting was held at Grand Chenière, May 24-28. Bro. Miller was with us and did much good preaching. We have received six into the church and baptized two infants to date. Finances are a little low owing to the exceeding hard times, yet the presiding elder has no claims against us, and the preacher in charge and his assistant are not suffering."

Rev. C. T. Mnnholland, Athens, La., May 31: "Our country, on last evening, was visited by a most terrific hail storm, destroying corn, cotton, oats, gardens and orchards. Our people, already sorely pressed, barely able to get the absolute necessaries of life, are now left in almost destitute circumstances. Many will be unable to get seed to plant over. If you can, by any means, raise some help to be given these people, it will be appreciated. I can't see what they are going to do, or can do. Credit gone; but little to commence with."

Rev. Jas. Porter, Charleston circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "We think the church here is in better condition than it has ever been. We held a meeting here last Summer. Rev. J. Honnoll and Rev. Thos. Cameron did the preaching, the results of which may be seen yet; Sunday-school good, prayer meeting well attended. Last Sunday, June 4, Dr. J. W. Boswell, of Memphis, Tenn., came and dedicated the church for us. We had a good time. The sermon was good and appropriate, and pleased all the people. We rejoice on account of the Lord's goodness to us. The recent rains have done great damage to the crops; the rivers and creeks are overflowing the bottom lands and farm work much interrupted."

Rev. B. W. Lewis, Caseyville, Miss., June 16: "Lebanon work is moving on smoothly. The outlook is brightening as we progress. We only have two Sunday-schools in successful operation. We have had Children's Day at both schools. They were well attended. I suppose they were five hundred people. I never saw a people more anxious to hear what was going on than they seem to manifest at Lebanon. The children did extra well. They were not so many people at Mizpah; but all were there enjoyed themselves. The children there did extraordinary well. The Sunday-school at Lebanon have collected enough to buy them a good library. They have selected Library No. 3 (a $20 one). We hope that other Sunday-schools where they have no library will follow our example."

Rev. T. B. White, Arcadia, La., June 7: "We had a most disastrous hail storm the evening of May 30, devastating crops and spreading ruin. The most remarkable display of thunder and lightning and surging, boiling clouds. Hail stones as large as lemons and small oranges. Many farmers ruined. Crops reported worthless. Some hail stones passing through the house-roof, etc. What are our poor debt-ridden people to do? Our Conference collections must be short for this reason. My circuit is badly damaged, God is calling. 'Stormy wind fulfilling his word;' 'hail stones and coals of fire' once fell upon his enemies. We rest under his protection, under the shadow of his wings. The church-house here nicely painted and repaired. Come to our District Conference, June 28."

Rev. W. A. Bowlin, P. C., Water Valley circuit, Grenada district, North Mississippi Conference, June 1: "We have eight appointments. Our congregations have grown rapidly, and are more than double what they were at first. Where we had only one Sunday-school, we now have six interesting and growing schools. Our beloved presiding elder, Rev. R. A. Burroughs, was with us a few days since, and held our second Quarterly Conference to the satisfaction of all present, and preached us two most excellent sermons. We have a nice lot and nearly enough lumber—all paid for—to build a parsonage, and hope to hear the hammer ringing soon. Am glad to report several ADVOCATES on the work, and hope to add more in the future. We can't be full-fledged Methodists without the ADVOCATE. Praise God!"

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, Hattiesburg, Miss., May 30: "I left Conway, Ark., last Thursday to come to this place. Our church at Conway was in the midst of a very gracious revival of religion. The whole town and country round, including Hendrix College (located there), was under its influence. On every corner one could hear the people say there had never been such a deep work of grace there. Many were converted, and a large number added to the church. We are now in a fine meeting at this place. Bro. Howell is hopeful of a good ingathering, and is already happy because of the splendid revival influence in his church here. We are expecting the Lord to bless us with good results. Rev. C. W. Perkins and Rev. Angus Buck, of the North Mississippi Conference, are here with us rendering good service. Bro. Howell is much beloved among his people, and is doing a fine work every way. May the Lord give us victory!"

Rev. N. J. Roberts, St. Helena circuit, Mississippi Conference, June 8: "Our second quarterly meeting met at Pipkin Chapel, May 13 and 14. Bro. Johnston, our proficient presiding elder, was on hand, and was delighted, and he also delighted the people. We had a good attendance on Saturday of the officials, and they showed a considerable improvement in the finances of the charge over the previous quarter. We can say that we are doing well. We had a revival in Quarterly Conference. We closed a meeting of twelve days, of great power, with the church at Greensburg, May 26. Nine accessions, some bright conversions, and the membership greatly revived. We were assisted by Revs. G. D. Anders, J. J. Smylie, Paul Brown, J. A. B. Jones. We have in cash and good subscription every dollar of our Conference assessments, with the thirty-one dollars extra missionary debt added. These people pay as well as pray."

Rev. W. A. Sibley, supply to East Baton Rouge circuit, Mississippi Conference, June 3: "I want to say something about our Children's Day at Meador's Chapel, Ascension parish. Fourth Sunday was our Children's Day, and we had a grand time. Large attendance, with the best behavior. Some splendid speeches by the children. A short address to the children by the Rev. John Lee. Contributions were small. Dinner was served on the grounds. We had some splendid singing by Bro. Alf. Carpenter's class (visiting superintendent of Magnolia Sunday-school). I can say truly that I have as good people to serve as there is in the world. I am happy to say that my people are taking a deeper interest in the things that pertain to eternal life than heretofore. I am laboring and praying for a revival of pure religion in the hearts of my people."

Mrs. M. M. Day, Rose Hill, Miss.: "May 21 Dr. T. S. West, of Jackson, Miss., preached at Pleasant Grove Church the memorial sermon of Rev. T. Y. Armstrong, of Rose Hill, Jasper county, Miss., to a large and attentive congregation, from the text, 'If a man die, shall he live again?' The Doctor having known 'Uncle Tommie' for years, preached with perfect freedom, portraying beautifully his noble Christian character. The discourse was truly edifying, logical and lucid, appealing to nature, that formidable opponent, whose arguments vanished before the convincing truths of inspiration, proclaiming the immortality of the soul, its eternal happiness or unchangeable misery. The occasion was one of enjoyment. The 'Masonic fraternity' cast their tribute of love and respect to his memory, who was a bright and shining link in their mystic order. The old soldiers of the cross were encouraged to wait and suffer longer, waiting for the joyful message, 'It is enough; come up higher.'"

Rev. B. P. Jaco, Panola circuit, May 30: "The work is moving up well this year, with promises to surpass the two just past. Finances not specially encouraging, but advancing; spirituality manifestly increasing. Our Sunday-schools, all save one, worked well all through the Winter, and come forth now stronger in numbers, with more zeal, and more able to do more efficient work. Epworth League developing grandly. It celebrated its first anniversary in a missionary concert that was delightful, instructive, and prolific of great benefit to all. I will second Bro. Lewis' suggestion, made to 'Glideroy,' concerning the League. Every pastor who has no League is a great loser. The Building Committee have let the job of building our church at Mt. Olivet; house to be completed in August. Improvements on remaining church-buildings is being urged and arranged for, which, when affected, will put us in splendid houses on this work. We are working and praying for great revivals and the salvation of many souls."

J. W. Sharbrough, Sunflower charge, Vicksburg district, June 5: "Our second Quarterly Conference was held at Sharbrough's Chapel, May 27 and 28. Bro. Little was on hand, and preached an excellent sermon each day, with the usual attending spiritual power. On Sunday our Sunday-school observed Children's Day. The sermon, Sunday, was an occasional one, and was not 'small shot,' though fired principally at small, or young, people; but many of the older ones were struck. Six dollars and fifteen cents were collected on the occasion. Bro. Abney, our pastor, is doing a good work here. This appointment has paid about forty-five per cent. of the assessments for the current year. We have been almost overflowed here this Spring, and just below here many have suffered from back water. We are looking forward with hope of a revival this Summer. I must not close without making mention of the two magnificent dinners served at church on Saturday and Sunday. Sumptuous dinners seem to be the weakness of the ladies of this community."

Rev. T. S. West, Jackson, Miss., June 1: "I have been a few days in Meridian district. They like their presiding elder much better than they did at first. Bro. Mellen has done a fine work there. I am opposed to continuing a presiding elder in office longer than four consecutive years; but I think, after a little rest, he ought to be put in the field again. I saw Bro. Nicholson (J. T.). He is in better bodily health than usual, and seems all right in heart and head. I think there is hope for much good work in him yet. A rest of six weeks on the seashore, or amid the mountains, at the right time, last year, might have saved him much trouble. The Culpepper meeting here is in full blast, the big tent is crowded, the preaching is earnest and forceful. I think much good is being accomplished. In loving, unmerciful gentleness the lash is laid on the dancers, card players and whisky drinkers. And the preachers from a distance on the stage cry out hearty 'Amens.' Bro. Watkins is working for the good of his people with a consuming zeal."

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, P. C., Clarksburg circuit, Mississippi Conference, May 25: "Last Sunday was Children's Day at New Providence Sunday-school. Preparations for this event had been going on for several weeks. The exercises were witnessed by the largest crowd ever assembled at New Providence Church—estimated at about four hundred. The day was well spent. Much honor is due to Sister Lucy Mitcham for the untiring zeal with which she labored to make the occasion a successful one. I want to say, Mr. Editor, that we are pressing onward and upward. We have now five Sunday-schools and two weekly prayer meetings—all in very successful operation. We have not held any protracted meetings yet, but revival fires have already kindled, and are burning brightly in some portions of the work. We have had fifteen additions to the church up to date, and our faith looks forward to great things from the Lord during the Summer. My people are still thoughtful and appreciative. The wants of the preacher and family are well provided for. We take advantage of every opportunity to say a word for the dear ADVOCATE, and hope before the year is out to send in a large list of subscribers."

Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rosedale, Miss., June 3: "A terrible cyclone, on May 31, swept over Rosedale, causing death and destruction. Two lives were lost, and eight or ten persons injured, some seriously, though not fatally. The physicians think they will all recover. The destruction of property was great, estimated at $30,000, though probably it is not so much. It lasted but a few minutes, and was not more than three hundred yards wide. Little, however, was left standing in its path. Not many houses in the town were left uninjured. Our beautiful new church, the best in this district, was torn down, and almost wholly destroyed. We had not yet finished paying for it. We are now almost at our row's end. The members and friends of our church lost much by the storm, and they say that now they do not see the way for rebuilding soon. However, we will do the best we can. The debris is being removed, and all that can be made serviceable will be saved. I hope we may have a new one by Conference. Until then we will preach in the court-house. The river is very high, and more water is coming down on us, though the engineers say the levee is in good condition. Up to date no break has occurred on the east side of the river. With favorable weather we will be safe in two weeks."

Rev. R. B. Downer, P. C., Pearlington circuit, June 1: "Seashore District Conference convened here May 16 to 22. A most delightful occasion. Protracted services began Monday night, May 22, led by Rev. Nolan B. Harmon. The morning services were devoted to developing the Christian graces, and some most precious meetings were held. Bunyan's 'Mr. Fearing' has a large posterity in these parts. Earnest efforts were made to get the saints to cross to Canaan's side of Jordan, but the fear of future difficulties caused procrastination. Night services were devoted to the calling and helping of the impenitent. Friday Bro. Harmon was compelled to leave. Rev. Frank M. Keen being here on a visit, he cheerfully aided in song and sermons. Seven were added to the church on profession and one by certificate. On Sunday, May 21, ex-Pastors Dominick and Adams were called upon to baptize several infants. One, a child of C. Dudley Orr and wife, is now with the angels. Saturday, May 27, I organized a Woman's Missionary Society of thirteen members. Bro. Partridge's Sunday sermon and appeal called forth this movement. While we do not realize the radical change for good I so much desired, I yet thank God for our late privileges. The stimulating influence of so many good men leaves an abiding impress. Children's Day was duly observed at Pearlington, and $8.10 was the result of the offerings."

Rev. Thomas B. Clifford, P. C., Cleveland and Shelby, Greenville district, North Mississippi Conference, June 1: "Our first and second Quarterly Conferences have been held, and already the third is announced. Surely 'tempus fugit,' and we realize how much there is to do. Children's Day was observed with appropriate services as per programs sent out by Publishing House. At Cleveland the large, handsomely decorated church was filled to overflowing, the address was delivered by Hon. J. S. Hicks, of Jefferson county, and a good collection was taken. At Shelby the same efforts had been put forth to make the occasion both interesting and instructive, and the address by Bro. J. S. Zimmerman, a graduate of Randolph-Macon College, and son of Rev. G. H. Zimmerman, of the Baltimore Conference, was very impressive, being full of rich words of counsel and advice. Congregations at the preaching services are large, and attendance upon the weekly prayer meeting is above the average. We have organized during the year three societies among the ladies, and these, together with the ones already at work, are doing well. We have erected this year a nice, neat church three miles northwest of Cleveland, on Jones Bayou, and named for a former pastor—'Shipman's Chapel.' On Easter Sunday we organized with fifteen members, and we have also a Sunday-school in connection which meets regularly. We are delightfully situated, the Lord has been good to us, and we hope to show forth his praise not only with our lips, but in our lives. Let the class of '91 continue to pray for each other."

Rev. B. T. Crews, Red River circuit, Louisiana Conference, June 3: "I am a stranger to you and to the preachers of this Conference. I am becoming acquainted with your paper, and through its columns keeping up with the movements of the brethren. I am a recent transfer from Arkansas, where I had traveled for many years in the Arkansas Conference. I came in March, long after the session of each of these Conferences. I took what seemed to be left, after all the brethren were supplied with, I suppose, good charges. So it is plain to be seen that I have no connection with High Church Steeple. My work is good enough for me. I am glad that there is and has always been a place for me. This is a peculiar work: Two churches with twenty-three members. Am glad to say that every member attends church, and the largest per cent. of the whole people for miles up and down the river attend preaching than of any people I have ever served. I am well pleased with the work and delighted with the people. They are hospitable and cultivated, and appreciative of the ministry and the church. We have made no effort yet at a protracted meeting at either church, but expect to do so soon. I am watching the signs, and think that the time is just at hand when we shall have a successful meeting at each of these churches. I have been working and praying to that end. I have been quite busy visiting in the homes of the people. As the result of this pastoral visiting, some have already attended church that were never in either of these churches before. I praise God for a Christian experience that makes me to rejoice in the homes of the poor and lowly, as well as in the homes of the rich and cultivated."

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, Hattiesburg, Miss., June 6: "In my last note to the ADVOCATE I promised to write more of the work here later on, and, as I will probably leave here to-morrow, I think it proper to say some things now. I reached Hattiesburg ten days ago, in company with Bro. C. W. Perkins, of the North Mississippi Conference. Bro. Angus Buck, of that Conference, also came down and spent a few days with us. We found Bro. H. D. Howell (our pastor here) already in a good meeting. The Lord was with us from the beginning. The interest spread and deepened until the whole community has been brought under the influence of the work. Quite a large number have been converted, and some valuable material has been added to our church; but the best of all is, the membership of the church itself has been wonderfully quickened. The people who have lived here longest say there has never been a deeper work of grace in this community. Praise the Lord for his goodness! Bro. Howell is much loved by his own people, and highly respected by all classes here. He is a strong preacher, and a very genial gentleman besides, and hence well deserves the high praise given him by his people. The people here are very kind and hospitable, and know exactly how to make a stranger feel at home among them. I have never spent time more pleasantly anywhere than the time spent here with Bro. Howell and his people. Several other ministers have been present during the week. Among them I recall the names of Bros. Forsyth, Burt, Keen, Harris, and last, but not least, Bro. Partridge (the stirring presiding elder of this district). Well, we have had a good time of it, indeed. I feel that I will always be a better man for having been thus associated with these men of God. I will return to Memphis from here, and then go to Thayer, Mo., to engage in a meeting with Bro. Holton. Will be back in this district in July to assist my good brother, Rev. W. G. Forsyth, in a meeting at Heidelberg. Pray for us."

REVIVAL NOTES FROM THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Lauderdale circuit, W. T. Browning, L. P., supply, assisted by R. A. Breland and W. J. Ferguson at Lauderdale: A number of conversions and reclamations, and one accession on profession of faith.

Shubuta, D. P. Bradford, P. C., assisted by I. L. Peebles: Eleven accessions on profession of faith and four by certificate; a deep and abiding work in the hearts of the membership.

Outlook all over the district very encouraging. More church-buildings going up and more new ones being planned than ever before, in one year, in the history of the district. If I had $1,000, I could guarantee, at least, twelve new churches by Conference. The four tornadoes and a hurricane have been great blessings to our people. Collections will all be in advance of last year.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The twenty-seventh session of the Shreveport District Conference was held in the Methodist Church at Mansfield, La., May 26 and 27, 1893. The presiding elder, Rev. R. J. Harp, was on hand and presided for the first day in the affable, pleasant style for which he is noted. Most of the preachers, but very few indeed of the lay members, were present. At this season of the year it is almost impossible to secure anything like a full lay representation in the country districts. Farmers are too much occupied with their crops, having to wage a severe battle with their persistent enemy, the grass, which is sure to follow, and needs careful and earnest attention, especially after the heavy rains which have continued to fall up to a few weeks ago.

Committees were appointed, and the business gotten fairly under way, when at the suggestion of our worthy president the Conference resolved itself into an experience meeting and feast of love, in which all freely participated and richly enjoyed.

On the morning of the second day Bishop Chas. B. Galloway arrived and presided to the delight and edification of all present. The weight of his influence will be felt by the people of that town and the district for years to come.

The reports from the various charges were to the effect that a revival was greatly needed, which was being sought for and confidently expected; hence you can look for something on that line from the Shreveport district very shortly. It was necessary to hold a night session in order to finish the business, as most of them seemed anxious to get home; some of the preachers leaving before the close, others not coming at all, as they had "appointments" for Sunday. Would it not be better to dispense with the District Conference altogether in order that the preachers may not be called away from their "appointments;" or else let the sessions be held between Sabbaths, that the "appointments" of the presiding elder may not conflict with those of the pastors?

Sunday was a day of feasting on the good things of God. Sunday-school in the morning, addressed by several of the preachers; preaching by the Bishop at 11 A. M.; love-feast at 4 P. M.; and preaching again by the Bishop at night. Soul-inspiring were the subjects; handled in a masterly way by this man of God: "Service," "Partaking of the Divine Nature." One brother said: "Poor as I am, I wouldn't take a thousand dollars for that sermon. I'm a better man than when I came." After all, is not this the true idea of preaching—"a better man"?

S. B. McCutchen, A. F. Jackson, B. C. Lee and Rev. W. W. Brown were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. W. G. Wadley and J. J. McKinney, alternates. The next session of the Conference will meet at Sodus, La.

The following resolution was passed:

Whereas, The calling of the roll impresses the fact of the sickness of our Bro. T. K. Faunt LeRoy upon our minds and move our hearts; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of this District Conference, do deeply sympathize with him and his dear family in this affliction, and that they have our prayers and our earnest desire for his speedy restoration to health.

LIKE A CRADLE.

BY SAXE HOLM.

Like a cradle rocking, rocking,
Silent, peaceful, to and fro—
Like a mother's sweet looks dropping,
On the little face below—
Hangs the green earth, swinging, turning,
Jarless, noiseless, safe and slow;
Falls the light of God's face bending
Down and watching us below.

And, as feeble babes that suffer,
Toss and cry, and will not rest,
Are the ones the tender mother
Holds the closest, loves the best,
So when we are weak and wretched,
By our sins weighed down, distressed,
Then it is that God's great patience
Holds us closest, loves us best.

Oh, great heart of God! whose loving
Can not hindered be, nor crossed;
Will not weary, will not even
In our death itself be lost.
Love divine! of such great loving,
Only mothers know the cost,
Cost of love, which all love passing,
Gave a Son to save the lost.

The District Conference and Home Missions.

With the exception of the matter of electing lay delegates to the Annual Conference, the District Conference has not one executive function. It is charged with the duty of inquiring into "the condition of the several charges," but its work all ends with the inquiry. It hears speeches and passes resolutions, but the speeches and resolutions are forgotten as soon as the meeting adjourns. To be sure, there is some gain in a spiritual and social way. Such a number of people from a large area of country could hardly come together imbued with religious sentiment without spiritual profit. And the effect is to unify and harmonize the working forces of the district. But do these ends alone justify the existence of the District Conference? The intelligent and thoughtful mind always asks, "What is to be done?" and it prefers not to be on the scene where there is "much ado about nothing."

The District Conference is a body of large possibilities, and ought to be given a chance. The coming together once a year of the pastors and their chief lieutenants of from a dozen to fifteen charges, and representing a constituency of several thousand souls, is an event of no small significance. The line of work proposed in the Discipline can not be objected to. It is that work which most vitally concerns them. They are asked to inquire into their spiritual state, missions within the district, Sunday-schools, finances, etc. The program is a good one. But the trouble is that it is only a program to be gotten through with. It is just a routine. There is nothing to do. When we have gotten through, that is the end of it. We never look for any results.

I think that the possibilities of the District Conference lie principally in one item of its program—that with reference to "missions within the district." The church is missionary or it is nothing. The avowed mission of the Methodist Church is to spread "scriptural holiness over the land." This spirit must be in all our preaching and worship and plans of work. The watchword in all our meetings should be, "Let us go forward!" To sit down and talk for two or three days about ourselves, gauging our spirituality, taking the percentage of praying families, of prayer meeting and church attendance, estimating the strength of the anti-saloon sentiment and Sabbath sentiment—all this is very well when we need statistics as a guide and stimulus to work, but very unprofitable as an end in itself. The energies of the District Conference should not be spent in merely overhauling the machinery, but rather in projecting and planning new enterprises.

In every district there is much undeveloped territory. It is a shame, not that we are trying to do so much for foreign missions, but so little at home. How can we justify ourselves in this? What sort of a missionary conscience is that that neglects the heathen at our doors? Would there not come to the District Conference the sense of a new mission and a divine anointing of power if it could once be made to realize the destitution and the possibilities of development within its own bounds? And what other body can so well look after this interest? The presiding elder is the head of the spiritual forces within this territory. He should plan the campaigns and lead on to the conquests. Let him point out in an address to the Conference the needs and requirements of the work. Let him rally the forces at these annual sessions. The practical channels open to them through which to work are several. They can memorialize the Annual Conference and the Bishop on the subject. They can appeal through the paper for special contributions to carry on the work. They can put a missionary of their own in the field and pay his expenses. We will find the way when we have the will.

There is a crying need now for an aggressive movement in home mission work. The land in places is full of ignorance, crime and disorder because it has not had an uplift of gospel civilization. We need to make the base of supplies at home stronger that we may be able better to furnish the foreign field. And that church will eventually occupy and have the honor of building up these waste places which is first to enter and most faithful to labor. J. W. MEDLOCK.

Authority of the Annual Conference.

Some of the brethren are in doubt about the authority of the majority; and especially do they question the action of the majority of our last Conference in making the observance of the "week of prayer" binding on all our preachers. One brother even calls this action a "lawless procedure;" and then asks, "Are we expected to regard these resolutions or not?"

Now, let us see whence comes the authority of the Annual Conference on the questions at issue.

1. The authority of the Parent Board of Missions. "The Board shall have authority to regulate its own proceedings." (See Discipline, paragraph 328, Art. 3.) Also "to estimate the amount that may be necessary for the support of the missions under its charge, and to divide the same among the several Annual Conferences." (Paragraph 329, Art. 4.) By this authority the Parent Board assessed upon the several Conferences the amount of the missionary debt, and appointed the "week of prayer" as the time to raise it.

2. The authority of the Conference Board of Missions. "The apportionment to a Conference for the general work shall be divided by the Conference Board among the districts, and the preachers in charge shall take up collections in every congregation to meet the same." (Paragraph 339, Art. 14.)

3. Regarding the duties of the preachers in charge, the Discipline directs, "To promote all the interests of the Missionary Boards of our church, in such way as the Discipline directs, or the Annual Conference may designate." (Paragraph 131.)

So it is clear that the Annual Conference and its Board of Missions have some considerable authority over preachers, and can command them to obey its directions.

Again, when we were received into "full connection" in the Conference, we solemnly obligated ourselves to "act in all things not according to" our "own will," "but as a son in the gospel." "Above all," "it is needful you should do that part of the work which we advise, at those times and places which we judge most for his glory." "The Conference by a vote of the majority may admit him into full connection." (See paragraph 143, pages 91 and 92.)

Again, in regard to the official administration of preachers. "And if a majority of the Conference refuse to pass his character, because he is not blameless in official administration, the Conference shall grant him an honorable location." (See paragraph 57, Ans. 5.) So any preacher in charge who disregards the august authority of the majority of an Annual Conference does violence to his sacred vows, and lays himself liable to an "honorable" (?) location.

Brethren, whither are we drifting in our lawless disregard of constituted authority? Much has been lately written on the administration of discipline as a means of purifying the church. Would not the presiding elders do well to begin the good work by enforcing the laws of our wise little book on the preachers? Surely "the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God." (I. Pet. iv, 17.)

The Story of the Cross.

Century after century has passed away since the advent of the Savior of the world, and yet the story of his life, death and resurrection is as charming and dear to us as if recently heralded from the rugged brow of Calvary. Other themes have lost their charms by age and repetition, but the preaching of Jesus Christ and him crucified will never wane in interest while time shall last. Kingdoms have been set up and overthrown, the brightest names in profane history have had their fleeting eulogies, but Christ's kingdom and ministry have stood the test of time and skepticism, and are to-day on the steady march toward the zenith of their glory. The declaration, "I am the resurrection and the life," sends a thrill through the soul, bearing witness to the divinity of its author. The name of Jesus has lost none of its primitive sweetness, and the hosts of earth who are marching heavenward under his banner are growing mightier in zeal and numbers as the years roll on. The cross of Christ will ever stand as the guide-post to the Christian traveler to inspire his heart to keep this sacred object ever in view. Then, to Christ's ministers let me say: Never fear that you will too often repeat this blessed story, that will ever charm the soul when it is dead to the appeals of other themes. D K HUNT.

THE PROPOSED NEW METHODIST CHURCH.

The above cut is the proposed new Methodist Church at Hazlehurst, Miss., and when finished will reach an approximate cost of $4,000. The old structure has been torn down, and while it has many hallowed associations connected with it, yet it must give place to a new one. Rev. Dr. Cooper, the pastor, has been and is giving his entire time to the building of this new house of worship, assisted by the Building Committee, and it will be completed in about four months and dedicated the third Sunday in October by Bishop C. B. Galloway. It is in erection where the old edifice stood, and when finished will add another ornament to the city as well as to credit to the energetic and aggressive Methodists of the community. The building will measure 54x57 feet in dimensions, with a tower 9x9 by 75 feet high. The ceiling will be 26½ feet high in the middle with rafters exposed and dressed. The auditorium floor is inclined toward the pulpit, with a seating capacity of 300. The Sunday-school room will be 16x28 feet, and will hold about ninety chairs. The auditorium and lecture-room will be divided by partitions that raise up. The workmen are being pushed forward, and the idea is to welcome the next Annual Conference, which meets at Hazlehurst, into a new church—the most beautiful frame structure in the State. Long live Methodism there, and may the Shekinah overshadow church and people! J. D. E.

To the Pastors of the M. E. Church, South.

DEAR BRETHREN: The Board of Missions, at its late annual meeting in Kansas City, carefully reviewed the work of the year, and found cause for profound gratitude. The Lord has been with the missionaries at home and abroad. Our people have responded nobly, and given an earnest of what they can do when once informed and aroused.

The treasurer's report contained the following suggestive figures: "During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1893, the collections under the regular assessment were $264,351.20; specials, $74,620.74; total collections from all sources, $338,971.94."

The Estimate Committee, in its report, called attention to two facts deduced from these figures.

First, "that in the face of widespread financial depression and a strenuous effort to relieve the Board of debt, the regular collections have not fallen short, but have even exceeded those of the previous year by $904.09."

Second, "that we have been able to pay interest amounting to $11,241.50, and reduce the amount of indebtedness for borrowed money by the sum of $61,049.82." In other words, the liabilities of the Board for borrowed money had been reduced by March 31 to $67,954.06, and, furthermore, upon that date the Board did not owe the banks one dollar. (Bills payable being to individuals only, and much of it at a lower rate of interest.) These are inspiring facts and figures, and should spring the church to larger things for the year to come.

The Board sustained the Committee on Estimates in its recommendation, and considered it wise to hold steadily to the by-law which limits the absolute appropriations "to a sum within the amount of the regular collections of the preceding year." In pursuance of this policy the appropriations for the ensuing year were necessarily limited to a sum within the $264,351.20.

The Board determined, moreover, to move quietly, but steadily, to the collection of the unpaid balance of subscriptions and amounts assessed on the debt, looking to this source for its complete extinguishment in another year. It further determined to urge the church to come up with the entire amount of the $350,000 assessment, believing stress laid upon the regular collections to be the true basis of successful financiering at home and aggressive movement abroad.

We are confident this policy will have the hearty endorsement of every pastor when it is known that the Missionary Secretaries, while not abandoning special appeals to individuals and churches, have determined not to take collections upon the floor of the Annual Conferences as heretofore, but to discuss principles and set forth facts, in order to inform the people, awaken the conscience, and quicken the missionary pulse of the church.

Now, let the Conference solicitors complete their work on the debt so well begun, and let the pastors press the regular collections as never before.

To give emphasis to these statements we would call attention to the following resolution presented at Kansas City, and adopted by the Board:

Whereas, We gratefully acknowledge and appreciate the loyalty and generosity with which the church has rallied to the aid of the Board in providing for the extinguishment of the debt, without any reduction in the regular collections;

Resolved, That relying with confidence upon the pledges of individuals, churches and Conferences which have already been made for the extinguishment of the debt, and insisting upon the full payment of the same, we earnestly urge that our people do now bend every effort during the year to come to bring the regular collections up to the full amount of the assessment—$350,000.

Signed, CHAS. B. GALLOWAY,
E. R. HENDRIX.

The work we have enterprised for the year 1893-4 is a great one. Let us prepare for a full discussion of missions, and of each collection upon its merits. Organize every Sunday-school into a missionary society auxiliary to the General Board, and with the enlargement of the Reporter into the Methodist Review of Missions, bring our forces to the front and put them under marching orders.

A Perplexed Preacher.

We have received a letter from an esteemed friend in the ministry, who seems to be a little perplexed over a matter which has often perplexed us. He has confidence enough in our integrity to unbosom himself, and sets a high value on our judgment when he asks us to help him out of his trouble. We appreciate fully the compliment he pays us, and, as we have often had the same trouble, we can and do most heartily sympathize with him. As to our helping him out, we must confess that we have some hesitancy in believing that we can do that to his satisfaction. As in "a multitude of counselors there is safety," and as a publication of extracts from his letter will be no violation of the privacies of personal friendship, we give his perplexity to our readers in the hope that some one of the hundreds of preachers who read our paper will be wise enough and loving enough to come to the rescue of the brother and of the editor.

The brother says:

As you know, and as is well known in this Conference, my preaching is not of the evangelistic kind, and I do not know why it is not. I strive to stick closely to the Word of God, to expound the Scriptures, to preach Christ fully, freely and simply, and I exhort with all my might, and I seek earnestly for the presence and power of the Holy Ghost, but somehow men are not moved to seek religion under my preaching. The church is edified, souls are comforted, men and women grow wiser and stronger, sinners attend and listen and they are impressed, but they do not move, do not act promptly. Why is this? Is edification, instruction, information and comfort my mission? my gift? my calling? Can you explain this to me? to others of my brethren who are troubled over it as I am? As you know, I have a wonderful fund of anecdotes on hand always ready for use, but somehow or other I have never gotten into a way of using them in preaching. This is not according to my idea of preaching. In speaking to the children anecdotes, stories, scenes and incidents, amusing and pathetic; wit, humor, conundrums; old saws, wise and otherwise; plays on words, and the like of that come in troops and stir the young to laughter and to tears and put them completely under my power for the time. Am I wrong in thinking that these things, these tricks of a trade, things done for stage effect, are out of place in the pulpit? and in so high and holy a work as preaching? I ask for information. I am in earnest about this matter. I want to know. Such is the order of my mind, and such my manner of expressing myself—or something else of which I am wholly unconscious—that, now and then, while preaching, the congregations are moved to tears, sometimes to laughter, and when to laughter, I am pained by it. My voice is not pathetic, is not tremulous, does not quaver. I can not speak like I were crying, when I am not. I suppose I am wanting in personal magnetism—whatever that is—a thing I am sure that is just as powerful for evil as for good. It is spirit, but not the Spirit, though it may be spiritualized by the Spirit. If I say anything in public, I must say something, must have a text, a subject and order, system and plan about it. I can not stand before an audience and rave, rant, froth, foam and fume when I know, as it seems to me the people must know, there is nothing but wind and gas in it. Some of my brethren, who have wonderful success in winning souls, or what is called winning souls, violate the plain words of Scripture, make the Word of God mean what ten-year old boys and girls know it does not mean, get out of God's Word things that were not put into it, use texts as mere pretexts, expound nothing, explain nothing, have no order, no plan, no system, wrangle from the first word to the last, tell anecdotes of all kinds, the body of their discourses is scenes and incidents, stories and tales, and yet the masses are moved, and, apparently, their sermons are owned of the Spirit and seem to be attended by the power of God. This thing puzzles me and befuddles me until I am completely bewildered and hardly know what to say or how to think. It looks like "the foolishness of preaching" really meant foolish preaching. Can you help me?

We confess to the same bewilderment in regard to the preaching of some men as the brother has, and, therefore, do not feel competent to afford him any aid. We can not lead him out of his difficulty; but this does not mean that we think nobody else can. We think it is quite probable that some one who reads this can lead the brother, and all who are like him, out of this maze. We wait to hear.

"Unload the Preachers."

The change needed to "unload the preachers" is not a change of legislation, but one of administration. We have a good law, but it is not administered. We administer a bad custom instead of a good law. The law is, that the subjects of missions and church extension shall be brought prominently before the Quarterly Conference, and that the presiding elder shall see to it that efficient plans are laid for the raising of these two collections. The custom is, that just as soon as these matters are named, some brother moves "to leave these collections in the hands of our pastor," and that is an end of it, so far as the law is concerned. The Quarterly Conference shirks the responsibility put upon it by the law of the church. Each Annual Conference has the right to say how the Bishops' fund shall be raised. The North Mississippi Conference says the presiding elders shall raise it. The presiding elders generally leave this in the hands of the pastor. The pastor is made a pack-horse for other people—not by the law, but in the administration. The Church Conference has the reserved right of devising the method of collecting the moneys each society is expected to pay. So, by the law of the church, the right and power of devising plans and methods of raising the collections is lodged with the Annual, Quarterly, and Church Conferences, and the two last named, generally, unload on the preachers. The preachers are required, by the law of the church, to take up collections in every congregation for missions and the support of the worn-out preachers and the widows and children of preachers who have died in the regular work, and this is an end of it. This is law. All the rest is an imposition. If an Annual Conference were to order the preachers to take up all the collections, still the Church Conference has the reserved right to take the whole matter out of the preacher's hands and devise its own plans for raising these sums. (See Discipline, page 188, paragraph 324.) GILDEROY.

Dr. Culpepper, the Georgia Evangelist, at Jackson, Miss.

The Culpepper meetings have been going on all the week, each successive one being better than the last. Dr. Culpepper has preached with ability and great earnestness and worked with intense zeal and determination to win souls to the Master. He has not failed to do his whole duty and to denounce sin the same in high places as anywhere else. Sins—little, big and all sorts, specific, particular and general—he has not failed to pay his respects to in a manner not to be forgotten and that will be felt in Jackson long after he is gone.

On Saturday afternoon he held services for the negroes, assisted in song and prayer by two of our colored resident pastors, Rev. J. C. Hibbler, of the M. E. Church, and Rev. Adam Johnson, of the A. M. Church. These services will have a good effect, as will the services of Sunday afternoon to "men only," which were really the best had. Every young man and old one, too, in the land ought to have heard this soul-stirring lecture of the evangelist.

Last night his sermon excelled all the former ones, and, notwithstanding the weather was inclement, the streets muddy, an immense audience listened for one hour and a half with unflagging interest to his earnest appeal, at the close of which scores flocked to the "mourner's bench," and not until eleven o'clock did the meeting break up. Up to date forty-eight have joined the different churches, many backsliders have been reclaimed and the churches greatly "warmed up."

The rain to-day has almost been incessant, and I am afraid will greatly interfere with the progress of the meeting. The evangelist is assisted principally in singing and occasional "talks" and prayers by Dr. Blosser, of Dalton, Ga., and Frank Kilgore, of Macon, Ga. Both are good men and good workers and our resident pastor of the different churches. The meeting is expected to close Wednesday night, but should continue, at least two weeks longer. Dr. Culpepper is a very able preacher, but his great service "comes in" in his earnestness which can not be excelled.

June 5.

Save the Sabbath.

Every lover of the Lord's day should be pleased to hear of the activity and widely extended influence of organizations that propose to rescue the Sabbath from the perils that threaten it. The day has come when every State and Territory of the Union should adopt measures to educate public sentiment in order that the American Sabbath may not be swept away by adverse currents. There is not one moment to lose. A few more years of indifference on the part of the friends of the Lord's day, and the chief citadel of American life may disappear, never again to be restored.

That the Sabbath is seriously threatened, all well-informed persons must admit. Multitudes coming to our shores from the Old World have no just appreciation of this national characteristic which has contributed so much to make our people prosperous and happy. A vast majority of this number, because of their foreign education and habits, prefer the Continental Sunday to the American Sabbath. Prejudice, strengthened by the baser elements of society, has made it quite impossible for most foreigners to study the Sabbath question in the light of American history to their profit. They can not be relied upon to strengthen Sunday legislation. The whole influence, quietly yet powerfully, tends to corrupt American sentiment in regard to the Lord's day.

Unhappily, much of American life, especially in the great cities, offers congenial atmosphere in which the spirit thrives. The saloon, above all other evil agencies, is responsible for the growth of antagonism to the Sabbath. Vice in all its hideous forms carries upon every banner the signs of hostility. Many are the forces insidiously operating against the sacred day which, unless speedily checked, threatens its annihilation at no distant period.

The Sabbath question will never find its proper place in the nation until its discussion is brought more fully within the realm of conscience. An awakened moral conviction throughout the land must precede civil Sunday statutes, otherwise such legislation will be loose and below the divine standard. This moral awakening will transpire just as soon as Christian example is in accordance with the Fourth Commandment, when our schools will give more truth a full chance to assert itself, and when the home life will more generally guard the Lord's day against harmful perversions.

When the Christian Church will consent to magnify the divine command, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," not seeking worldly pleasure or gain on that sacred day, not secularising holy hours by admitting Sunday newspapers into the home—then will a new era break upon the nation. The spiritual significance of the Sabbath, as the holy sign between God and man of all good, will then become widely apparent. The Holy Spirit will then give to moral and Christian reforms of every kind a new impulse. In a word, the responsibility of right Sabbath observance, with all its attendant blessings, rests upon the church of Jesus Christ.

If all this be true, it is manifest our duty to seek release, so far as possible, from worldly engagements on the holy Sabbath. The day is given, among other things, for hearing God's Word in the congregation of worshipers, in uniting in his praise and supplications in his temple. It is possible to so transfer the cares of the week to this day as to wholly unfit the soul for these sacred duties. And not only so, the reading, the social visiting and the unnecessary work of the Sabbath may be of such a kind as will necessarily arrest spiritual thought and render religious exercises useless, even injurious.

Just here is the baleful influence of the Sunday secular newspaper. It would be quite impossible for Satan to invent a more destructive method of undermining public ministrations in the sanctuary than this. The secular is made to supersede the spiritual; the currents of business carry the soul far out into tumultuous seas, away from God's sheltered harbor of needed rest. The whole scheme is fraught with peril to souls.

Said a professed Christian in our hearing recently: "I became so absorbed in my daily paper this morning that I failed to observe when the hour for public service came." The response of a friend at his side was a terrible rebuke: "You missed an excellent sermon and a rich blessing in the sanctuary."

But let us not take too dark a view of this subject. Notwithstanding the numerous attractions of our time, so unfriendly to sanctuary service, what multitudes of hungry hearts are being satisfied with the "fatness of His house!" Never, we are confident, has the privilege of sitting where "strength and beauty are in His sanctuary" been more widely appreciated than at the present. Never have greater numbers in the aggregate sought His courts, or have exclaimed with joyful hearts: "A day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." Unnumbered souls in Christian and heathen lands not only find delight in God's earthly temple; they anticipate with rapture the speedy entrance upon the heavenly. In the marvelous description given by the revelator of that abode, the temple vanishes away and God becomes evermore all in all: "I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it."—New York Advocate.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON.—June 18, 1893.

The Messiah's Kingdom.

(Mal. iii, 1-12.)

"Behold, I send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me" (v. 1). He does not need messengers, but we do. The Lord could make his own preparations, or could execute his will without any preparatory work; but he chooses to have the preparations made, and to employ men to make them. It is a great privilege to be a messenger of God; yet it is a privilege which God gives to every child of his. It is a great privilege to have a message from God inviting to a preparation in the line of his plans and purposes; and this also is the privilege of us each and all.

"The Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come." Our seeking has, in one sense, no power with reference to the Lord's coming; in another sense, it has all power. The Lord will come to those who do not seek him just as surely as he will come to those who do; but to those who seek him he will come as their Lord—watched for, and now rejoiced in; but to those who do not seek him he will come as a terror—from whom they shrink back appalled. This it is which can be our stimulus and our cheer, as we seek after and watch for the Lord expectantly.

"Who shall stand when he appeareth?" (v. 2.) Of one thing we may be sure—those who have watched for the Lord's coming with love and longing will have no fear as to their welcome from him when finally he is there. Their confidence in their relation to him is not based on what they are, but on what he is. They have known him while he was yet away from them; and, knowing him, they have loved him. When they see him face to face, they will not love him any the less, and their love will cast out fear. "Who shall stand when he appeareth?"—every trusting servant of his who has stood in loving expectancy, watching for his coming, and faithful in service, during his absence.

"Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord, as in the days of old" (v. 4). There are those who think that the former days were better than these, and that all good is really in the past. They are mistaken to the main point, although they commonly have some exceptional items of the world's experience on which to pivot a conviction. Of one thing the child of God may be sure; the best things in God's plans for him are still in the future, and if there was any good in the days of old which is now lacking to him, that also shall be restored, or shall be bettered, to him.

"I, the Lord, change not" (v. 6). There is hardly an assurance in the Bible which has more of comfort in it than declaration of God's unchangeableness. Sometimes it seems as if everybody changed, as if no one were true. Those on whom we leaned, or to whom we looked up, or about whom we could not have a doubt, fail us by their changing—so contrary to our hopes and our beliefs. Is there nothing certain? Is there none to be depended on? Then it is that the answer comes assuringly, "I, the Lord, change not." Whoever else fails us, Jesus Christ—who is himself the Truth—is "the same yesterday and to-day, yea and forever." His friendship—like himself—standeth sure.

> "It fortifies my soul to know
> That, though I perish, Truth is so;
> That, howsoe'er I stray and range,
> Whate'er I do, thou dost not change.
> I steadier step when I recall
> That, if I slip, thou dost not fall."

"From the days of your fathers ye have turned aside from mine ordinances .... Return unto me, and I will return unto you" (v. 7). Although God does not change, man does. And when man changes his attitude toward God, it makes it seem as though God had changed his attitude toward man. If man looks toward God, he sees the loving face of God: but if man turns his back on God, he misses that loving face, and then he is inclined to think that God has become his enemy. There is only one cure for such a trouble as this; and that is for the changeful man to turn back again to the unchanging God. It is a blessed thing that God does not change when man changes. When man chooses evil instead of good, and goes in the wrong direction instead of the right, God keeps right on, favoring the good and opposing evil. What a terrible thing it would be if God were to change! If man and God seem to be in opposition, the fault is wholly man's. Man has turned away from God, and brought about this seeming opposition between the two. If a man will simply turn back again, the old loving relations will be re-established. There is no other way out of the difficulty.

"Will a man rob God?" (v. 8). Sure enough, will he? Does anything belong to God? Has God any right to his own? If a man takes for his own use what God has entrusted to him for use in God's service, doesn't the man rob God to that amount? There can't be much doubt on that point. If God has reserved for his own use one-seventh of the time, and one-tenth of the income, of all his children, it is robbing God to make use of the time or the money with which a man is entrusted of God. Who is guiltless in this line? A preacher was roughing it among Western miners, for his health's sake. He had the only good wheelbarrow in the party, and it was much in demand by his fellow-workers. They worked Sunday, while he rested. When he had an opportunity to make an address to them, he used the wheelbarrow as an illustration of the fairness of resting on Sundays. "Fellows," he said, "there's that wheelbarrow of mine. I let you have the use of it a fair share of the time. But suppose I say to you there is one day of the week when I want that wheelbarrow for myself. Wouldn't you think it a little mean of a fellow, who shares the use of it the other six days, to creep into my tent and steal it for his own use, on the only day in the week when I asked it for myself?" They all agreed that he would be a mean fellow who should do that. "Well, now," he said, "that's the way a man treats God, when he insists on using for himself the one day in the week which God wants the use of." "Will a man rob God!" Will he, though?—Sunday-School Times.

Destroyed by Fire and Again at Work.

The Price Baking Powder Company of Chicago, which is known throughout the country for the superior excellence of its Baking Powder, met with a serious loss on the morning of May 18, in the nearly total destruction by fire of its factory and offices. No sooner had the flames been subdued than the work of restoration commenced, and the Company by prudent foresight, having had stored in outside warehouses duplicate machinery, labels and supplies of raw materials in preparation for any emergency, was enabled by energetic management to resume manufacturing within a very few days after the fire, thereby causing its customers but a trifling delay in the filling of their orders. Had the Company not been so prepared the delay would have been very serious, since it would have required months of time to get new machinery.

It is now forty years since the goods manufactured by this company were first placed on the market, to Dr. Price being due the distinction of having prepared the first can of Cream of Tartar Baking Powder ever manufactured in any country. It was a great discovery, superseding as it did the old method of using cream of tartar and soda separately, to say nothing of saleratus, with which the biscuit of early days was embittered.

The Price Company has no connection whatever with any other baking powder company or manufacturer, notwithstanding representations to the contrary made by other manufacturers whose soul aim is to deceive the public and borrow the good name and fame acquired by the Price Cream Baking Powder, which is known all over the world as the purest and "most perfect made."

The Problem of the Cities.

In 1800 we had only six cities of more than 8,000 inhabitants; in 1880 there were 286, and in 1890, 437. In 1800 one twenty-fifth of the population lived in cities of over 8,000 inhabitants; in 1880, twenty-two and one-half per cent.; in 1890, over twenty-five per cent. From 1880 to 1890 the country population of the United States increased eight per cent., while the city population increased fifty-seven per cent., or over seven times faster than the rural populations. At such a difference in the rates of increase it is easy to demonstrate that within twenty or thirty years the city population will be in the majority.

There is, however, a graver danger than this rapid numerical increase. It is found in the character of the population which is gathering in the cities. The great cities have ceased to be American. In 1880 the U. S. census showed that eighty per cent. of the population of New York is foreign, while in Chicago, the second city of the nation, it reaches ninety-one per cent. Only one man in ten in the City of the Lakes is American by birth and parentage! That explains the determined effort of Chicago to insult the religious sense of the nation by flinging the American Sabbath to the winds and supplanting it by a Continental Sunday during the Exposition.

Other great cities make nearly the same showing. Cleveland has eighty-three per cent. of foreigners; Cincinnati, sixty-two; Boston, sixty-five per cent. These facts show that the great cities are really foreign colonies in our republic. It has been long noted by the historians that the centers where a mixed population gathers from the ends of the earth are all centers of wickedness. The worst characteristics of a foreign country are imported, while the virtues are mostly left at the old homes. To adopt the figure which Cicero applied to the Rome of his day, a city with a great and motley foreign population becomes a common sewer into which the moral filth of the world flows.

This is easily seen by noting the prevalence of certain iniquities. Cleveland, with eighty-three per cent. of foreigners, has a saloon for every 192 persons, male and female, babies and men, of her population. Chicago, with ninety-one per cent., in spite of the Illinois high license law, has one to every 179; New York has one to every 171, while Cincinnati breaks the record and has one to 124. If we assign five persons to a family in Cleveland, every thirty-eight families support a saloon; in Chicago, thirty-six families; in New York, thirty-four families, and in Cincinnati, twenty-five.

These cities are full of dangerous elements. Here is where anarchists, socialists, and wild dreamers of every type, concentrate. Here is where Catholicism has her greatest power. Here is where Satan has his seat, where the saloon does its demoralizing work, and where vice, poverty and wretchedness makes men desperate. In 1890 Chicago had only one Protestant Church to every 3,601 of her population; Brooklyn, one to 2,997; New York, one to 3,644. There are wards in all these cities where there is not a Protestant Church to 10,000 population.

These facts faintly portray the real condition of the great centers of population. There is only one force that can save the cities from the fate of Sodom, and prevent them from dragging the country to ruin. That force is the gospel of Christ. The churches should move upon them like a conquering army. Patriotism, as well as the love of Christ, calls upon the churches to arouse themselves, and to seriously undertake the evangelization of the cities. We have fifteen million foreigners upon American soil, among us, influencing our country's morals and destiny. Shall we send our missionaries across the seas, thousands of miles away, to convert foreigners, and at the same time neglect those who are within our gates?—Christian Evangelist.

A Great Nerve Tonic,

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. I. HARRIS HALL, State Lunatic Asylum, Milledgeville, Ga., says: "I have used it in cases of nervous prostration after acute mania. I also found it gave great relief in cases where there seemed to be a want of proper assimilation of food accompanying chronic insanity. It is undoubtedly a great nerve tonic."

Religion for the Times.

A good deal has been written about the church for the times, the ministry for the times, and the preaching for the times. But probably more important than any of these is the type of religious character necessary for the times, because this touches a wider range of agencies.

Christians should be liberal and tolerant. In these times of independent research and inquiry it will not do to stigmatize every new idea; neither should living questions be settled by the authority of the great names of the past. There should be large liberty of thought in things non-essential. Many of the theological questions which divided Christians into hostile camps in past years are now dead issues that have no living interest. Christians who differ on theological points may unite in works of faith and labors of love. In saying this we are not depreciating the importance of zeal for sound doctrine, nor the right of anyone to oppose and reject what he believes to be false and dangerous. There never was a time when a firm and intelligent faith in the foundation truths of revealed religion was more necessary than now. Loyalty to Christian truth is not inconsistent with liberality.

The church and the world of to-day need a practical religion—that is, an application of the fruitful principles of Christianity to all the varied interests of life. Orthodox beliefs can not be safely substituted for brotherly sympathy, integrity, benevolent work and charity towards all men. Right action is mightier than creeds or professions. The great outlying masses, that are alienated from the church, can only be won by just dealing and practical sympathy. The religion for to-day is the old religion—"to do justly, to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God."

The essential elements of true religion are the same in all ages. It is a personal experience of justifying and sanctifying grace, giving peace with God and power over sin. This is the inner spring, from which flow the outward deeds that constitute a godly life. There is great danger in these times that knowledge, religious education, or some form of church activity, which may exist without this inner spiritual experience, may be substituted for it. As wherever there is failure at the heart, it soon reaches the whole body, so when any outward thing is put in the place of the experience of personal salvation, weakness and failure inevitably follow. Many need to pray the Psalmist's prayer, "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and uphold me by thy free spirit; then will I teach transgressors thy ways, and sinners shall be converted unto thee."—Christian Guardian.

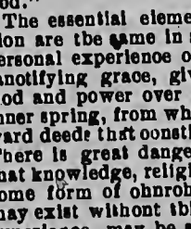
That Tired Feeling

The great benefit which people overcome by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well known merchant of Auburn, Me., says: "About 5 years ago I began to suffer with very severe pain in my Stomach, gradually growing worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am very much better and feel more like working.



Mr. J. B. Emerton.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

always gives relief and great comfort. It is a God-send to any one suffering as I did."

THE WORLD'S FAIR
And American Railways.

THE QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE, widely known as the road running the "Finest Trains in the South," is in the field to carry everybody from the South to the World's Fair at Chicago. No part of the Southern country is left uncared for by this great railway and its connections. The Through Car System is an admirable exposition of the wonderful capabilities of American railroading. From New Orleans Through Sleeping Cars run daily, morning and evening, carrying its passengers via Cincinnati or Louisville, as they may select.

From Shreveport, Vicksburg and Jackson another Through Sleeping Car Line comes to join and become a part of the magnificent Vestibuled Through Trains, which passing through Birmingham and the famous Wills Valley of Alabama, is joined at Chattanooga by the train from Jacksonville, Fla., Brunswick, and Atlanta, Ga., over the E. T. V. & Ga. Ry., and proceeds north over the beautiful Cincinnati Southern, through the grandest natural scenery and most attractive historical country in the world, to Oakdale, where another magnificent Pullman car is received, coming from the Richmond & Danville System from Charleston, S. C., through Columbia, S. C., the beautiful French Broad country, and Asheville, N. C., and Knoxville, Tenn.

The time to Chicago is made so as to afford the most convenient hours for departures from the principal cities, and arrivals in Chicago.

Passengers can purchase tickets good over one line north of the River, and returning via another if they desire a variable route without extra charge. Or they can go via Cincinnati, returning via Louisville, or vice versa.

Round-trip tickets on sale at reduced rates. Agents of the Chicago line will on request assist in looking up rooms or accommodation for visitors to the Fair.

BRIEFS.

One of the improvements we noticed recently at Centenary College is a large and well-equipped gymnasium. That is a good thing. The development of the physical is too important a matter to be neglected. The mental and moral require a good, sound physical basis to reach the highest attainment, and a well-equipped and properly managed gymnasium supplies that basis. The old Romans were not wrong when they insisted that a sound mind should have a sound body in which to do its work. Mens sana in corpore sano is one of the finest attainments.

The official figures show that during May, 1,050,037 people paid to see the Fair, of which number 22,825 were children, and 346,391 persons entered on passes. This represents $519,-312.15. The total number of tickets sold during the month was 1,321,460, 23,328 of which were children's tickets, enriching the Exposition to the sum of $654,498. There are now outstanding 281,423 tickets bought during May. This makes an average daily attendance during the first month of the Exposition of a little over 37,500.

Somebody is always bringing out some unpleasant facts of history. Just as the Briggs case is settled, the Christian Union brings to light a bit of history, which shows that history does not always repeat itself. In the Princeton Review, for January, 1861, of which Prof. Charles Hodge, of Princeton, was editor, Rev. Dr. Moffat, of the Presbyterian Church, published an article in which he took much the same ground in regard to Genesis that Dr. Briggs holds. Among other things the writer asserts that "to the value of Scripture it no way imports who the original author was . . . It is not the human authorship which confers the authority of inspiration; but, on the contrary, it is inspiration which gives his weight to any of the prophets, no matter what his name." Furthermore, the Book of Genesis "is anonymons," . . . "it could not have been written by Moses." Again, the supernatural events in Genesis were not supernaturally revealed to Moses. "In the first place, the book of Genesis presents none of the features of a vision. . . . Neither is it according to the analogy of Scriptnre to assume a retrospective revelation of human events. . . . Nowhere else in Scripture do we find a gratuitous interposition of revelation. . . . And finally, the assumption that Genesis is a retrospective revelation is entirely gratuitons. It is without the slightest foundation in any recorded fact. Scripture nowhere asserts, or implies, or gives the least countenance to it." How then are we to aeconnt for the book? "It appears and professes to be a series of histories. . . . It is not a single composition, bnt a collection of smaller books, as the whole Bible itself is."

Dr. Moffat was made professor in Princeton; Dr Briggs was suspended from the ministry!

Commencement at Centenary College.

The annual commencement exercises of this venerable institution began Sunday, June 4, with a masterly sermon preached in the college chapel by Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan, D. D., of the North Mississippi Conference. The Doctor took as his text: "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ," and for one hour he discoursed of Christ to the edification and comfort of a large audience. All he said was good, but often he rose to very great heights in his delineation of the character and work of the Lord Jesus. It was a fine example of effective preaching. In the evening the writer had the privilege and pleasure to preach to the Young Men's Christian Association in the Methodist Church. The house was full, and the services, we trust, were profitable to many.

Monday evening was devoted to the exhibition of the preparatory department. The speeches and declamation of the young gentlemen were of a high grade of excellence, and reflected great credit, not only upon the participants, but upon Profs. Miller and Scales, under whose care this department has so well done its work during the past session.

Tuesday was Alumni Day. That association was well represented by Hon. I. D. Wall, of Clinton, La., who read an excellent poem, and by Rev. T. W. Brown, of the Mississippi Conference, who read an able paper on "The Moral and Spiritual Elevation of Man the Purpose of God; the Bible, the Means." Tuesday evening there was the annual contest for the medal for oratory, six young gentlemen contesting. It was conceded by competent judges that this contest was the best of its kind that has occurred at Centenary. The committee awarded the medal to A. H. Dumas, of New Orleans.

Wednesday was Graduating Day. Six young men were graduated, two receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts, viz.: S. M. Collins and N. E. Joiner, and four receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science, viz.: S. C. Schwing, J. M. Carter, A. H. Gay, Jr., and A. Batson. These young men acquitted themselves well, and go out to mingle in the battle of life with the best wishes of their friends. Wednesday evening was devoted to the senior debate on the question of co-education at Centenary, but as we left at Wednesday noon we can not report it.

The Board of Trustees held several important sessions, and did some very important things. Vacancies in the Board were filled with the following: Two vacancies from Mississippi were filled by Rev. C. F. Evans, of Meridian, and Dr. W. D. Wall, of Jackson, La. Three vacancies from Louisiana were filled by Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, of Mansfield; M. C. Aldrich, of Baton Rouge, and T. P. Fullilove, of Shreveport. By an almost unanimous vote the Board abolished the tuition fees, and hereafter only a small admission fee will be charged. This fee will be $30, and the same for both preparatory and collegiate departments. This will reduce expenses so low that almost anybody can avail themselves of it. Young ministers and ministers' sons are excepted from paying this fee. It is expected, however, that arrangements may be made by which even they may come under the rule. The endowment has grown somewhat during the last year. It now reaches the sum of about $93,000. Of this amount $83,768.33 are in six per cent. endowment notes, and the balance invested in good securities at seven and eight per cent.

The Board and faculty conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws on Gov. M. J. Foster, and the degree of Doctor of Divinity on Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, of the Mississippi Conference.

The following report was ordered published:

REPORT ON THE STATE OF THE COLLEGE.

The Committee on the State of the College beg leave to report that we find the buildings in as good order as could be expected, considering there have been no repairs on buildings during the last year. The grounds are in good condition.

In view of the action taken by the Board in abolishing tuition, in order to increase the number of students we recommend that each trustee and each member of the faculty make it his special business to use all proper influences to secure that end. From the report of the president, hitherto made to yon, we are glad to find that the deportment of the students has been unusually good, and that they have been very studious.

J. N. PHARR,
C. G. ANDREWS.

Repentance.

No doctrine of practical theology should hold a more commanding position than that of repentance towards God. We find it emphasized in the preaching of John the Baptist, of Christ and the first preachers of the gospel. We find its specific proclamation vitally connected with the ushering in of the new dispensation—"Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Not that the doctrine was a new one, for it was the theme of prophets long before the time of the Advent, but because the coming of Christ had thrown the doctrine into new relations to human responsibility, so much so that repentance without reference to the Lord Jesus Christ is an impossibility. So said Paul upon Mars Hill. Men were commanded to repent, "because he had appointed a day in the which he would judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained."

All great revivals have been characterized by profound repentance; in proportion to the depth of this experience has the work been effective. In Acts we read: "Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, so that times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord." The times of refreshing follow the repentance, for this is the breaking up of the fallow ground which is followed up by the rain of righteousness.

Not only do we notice the relation of repentance to the work of general revival, but also in regard to individual experience. It stands at the threshold of religious experience. The character of a man's repentance is traceable in his entire subsequent experience; the brightness of his conversion, the clearness of his views of truth and the stability of his faith all bear the impress of this early experience. A man who has known repentance in the full meaning of that word can never forget it. Its revelations and heart-throes will impart to his experience a sense of God and divine things which tends to perpetuate the reality of the invisible. And this is the great need of the religious life, this perception of the realities of God and his law, and of man and his responsibility.

We do not propose to discuss repentance in its theological relations, bnt to call attention to those featnres of the experience, which are of commanding importance. As with all the doctrines of Christianity, some of the phenomena connected with it are identified with the fact of repentance. This has caused much confnsion in onr views of what may be called experiential theology, the theology which enters into the realm of conscions experience. We wish to avoid all this, thinking only of the great principles which are the life and soul of doctrine.

St. Paul expresses the central idea of repentance in the phrase, "Repentance toward God." It is an attitude of the soul which has God as its object. It is a movement of soul toward God, which originates in the sinner's perception of his true relation to God as Creator and Judge. This is the very heart of it; without it there can be no genuine repentance. This is to be distinguished from that repentance, which originates in prudential motives, such as that "sorrow-of-the-world" repentance, which is humanitarian, prudential or purely sentimental, saturated with self and the sense of personal or family loss, but destitute of the sense of an offended God. There is much of this superficial repentance in the latter-day revival meeting. We have repentance toward self, toward the community, the family, the loss of fortune and health, but little of that repentance which recognizes the offended majesty and love of God. Repentance is deep and effective in proportion to the sense of God which pervades it. It is a divine thing, for in it we see the two-fold operations of the Holy Spirit and the soul of man.

Repentance is sorrow on account of sin. In it the soul contemplates sin with profound sorrow. It is soul grief—a deeper grief can not be felt. And this is not a sorrow for the loss that sin entails. This is only remorse. It is a sorrow for what sin is in itself. Judas and Saul knew remorse. They felt what they had lost, but Peter wept bitterly over the heinousness of his denial of Christ. This is the difference. The one working death, the other life.

Repentance is more than a sense of God and of sin as related to God. It is soul movement. The soul is never more active than in repentance. In it all the powers of the entire man are alive. It is the assertion of a man's moral integrity. It involves the change of the whole man in his mental and moral attitude toward God. It is the revolution which ends in the government of the King of Peace. Confession, restitution and determined turning from sin occupy every thought and every power until God himself speaks peace to the soul. But in it all there is the overwhelming thought of God. With the Psalmist the soul cries out, "Against thee have I sinned and done this evil in thy sight." The repentance is toward him from whom forgiveness is desired; against him the sin has been committed, his law has been dishonored, his Son has been rejected, his Spirit grieved. To produce this movement of the heart we should preach repentance; but nnless we magnify God in his relation to repentance, it will be of no avail. If we resort to human influences and sentiments, to prudential motives and principles of social reform, men will not be led to repent of sin as sin, nor turn to God for justification. It takes divine power to preach repentance, and it takes divine power to repent. Right here let us be thorough, searching, rigid. Let us go to the throne of grace, sink beneath the weight of Godhead and view human nature as it is, and sin in its enormity; introdnce the law into the heart and blow up the sophistries of sin. To-day there is universal need of repentance in the church, as well as in the world, on account of worldliness and formality. Could we move the people to repent throughout the length and breadth of the church, it would be followed by such visitations of divine power as were seen by them of old time. Many have been praying for a revival, but it has not come and will not come nntil the people repent. "Behold the Lord's hand is not shortened that it can not save; neither his ear heavy, that he can not hear: but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear." Therefore, "wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doing from before mine eyes." In deep, wide and universal repentance we may draw nigh to God, and receive such a blessing as there shall not be room to contain it. P.

"Unload the Preachers."

ONCE MORE.

"Gilderoy" is right. The law of the church, so far as it goes, places no burden of collections on the preacher other than those for missions, and for the superannuates and the widows and children of preachers who have died in the regular work. But the views of Bishops and presiding elders concerning pastoral responsibility in the matter carries with it all the force of law, and the Quarterly and Church Conferences are aware of this. Practically it is the same as though the Discipline declared in plain terms that the preacher in charge shall raise all the collections assessed by the Annual Conference. If collections are not taken, or if they fall short of amounts assessed, the preacher in charge is held responsible, not the Conferences.

We contend for the complete liberation of the preachers from this bondage of custom and of opinion in this matter. Let the whole matter of raising money for all purposes be placed, by General Conference action, in the hands of the Board of Stewards. Let the preachers be required to preach the gospel of giving; let them be required to urge upon the people their Christian obligation touching all these claims; but let the stewards take all the collections and report the same to the Annual Conference.

Under the present plan not only does the preacher come to regard himself as largely a "server of tables," but the people are beginning also so to regard him. His Conference character largely rests upon his success as a collector, as has already been said. Many excellent men, "mighty in the Scriptures," able expounders of the Word, snccessful along all the lines of a preacher's legitimate work, are not good collectors of money. To such the collections are "thorns in the flesh," not of God's giving. The annual gathering, which ought to be a season of refreshment and spiritual fellowship, is looked forward to with dread and entered into with sense of defeat and humiliation. Pastoral work is hindered, because of the necessity of collecting some subscription or urging some financial claim before leaving the house. The preacher who has charge of a circuit must present some claim nearly every Sunday from February to June, and from September to December, or "come up short" at Annual Conference and suffer the mortification of "falling behind" in collections the Lord never called him to take.

If the law, as it stands, is sufficient, let the sentiment of the officials be educated to it; if not, as we think, let the next General Conference relieve the preachers of all responsibility in this matter. There is pressing need of radical change.

Five hundred thousand copies of "Ben Hur," the celebrated story by General Lew Wallace, have been sold to English readers, and the demand for the work continues. It has been translated into several different languages. The story is surely wonderful and wonderfully well told; but if the topic had been something else, the demand for the book would have been far less. It is another evidence of the eagerness with which intelligent people devour everything connected with the Nazarene.—New York Christian Advocate.

Last year there were 1,254 out 7,000 Presbyterian Churches report vacant, not even having a stated sup ply.

Dr. Briggs will publish at an ear date his defense offered to the Gener Assembly of the Presbyterian Church It will be issued in a cheap pamphl by the Scribner's.

The Census Bureau gives out the 257 cities, with 15,316,167 inhabitant there are 61,336 saloons, an average one saloon for every sixty familie The licenses vary from $10 to $3,8 per year.

This is the way a secular paper pu it:

Rev. B. Fay Mills is acquiring great reputation as a revivalist. H has just "converted" 7,000 persons i St. Paul and distributed them amon the churches.

There are three things which wi generally give success if used properly Conscience, will, and courage. Th man who possesses these and use them wisely will, as a rule, be the suc cessful man.

Dr. Briggs, though suspended fro exercising the functions of the min istry, declares that he will neithe leave the church nor countenance schism. He advises his friends t stand by the church.

"Grant me patience, just Heaven Of all the cants which are canted i this canting world, though the cant o the hypocrites may be the worst, th cant of criticism is the most torment ing."—Laurence Sterne.

"Godly sorrow worketh repentance unto salvation not to be repented of." There is a great meaning in this Scrip ture. When a man realizes the result of such sorrow, its working is followed by no regret. The man who truly re pents is never sorry that he repented of his sins.

"The gifts of God are without re pentance." The humblest man we know has some gift from God. He has some personal and peculiar endowment from the Lord, and while he may neg lect the use of that gift, or abuse it, God does not hastily recall it. God does not repent of his bestowal of gifts up on men.

"Stand for the right! Humanity
Implores with groans and tears
Thine aid to break the fettering link
That binds her toiling years.
Stand for the right!
Though falsehood reigns,
And proud lips coldly sneer;
A poisoned arrow can not wound
A conscience pure and clear."

The man who never failed is a myth. Such a one never lived, and is never likely to. All success is a series of efforts, in which, when closely viewed, are seen more are less failures. The mountain is apt to over-shadow the hill, but the hill is a reality, nevertheless. If you fail now and then, don't be discouraged. Bear in mind it is only the part and experience of every successful man, and the most successful men often have the most failures.—Selected.

The New York World says:

So far as the published programmes of the Woman's Congresses at the World's Fair enabled us to judge, not one thing is to be done to show the progress of women as women. There will be no showing made of any increased capacity on their part to make homes happier, to make their husbands stronger for their work in the world, to encourage high endeavor, to maintain the best standards of honor and duty, to stimulate, to uplift—which from the beginning of civilization has been the supreme feminine function.

If that is true—but it surely can not be true.

The United States District Court in Chicago has decided against the opening of the Exposition on Sunday. As the directors are so persistent in this matter, we suppose they will now take the case to the Supreme Court. There, we are of opinion, the case will be decided against them again. We would not be surprised, however, if the directors should endeavor to open the gates anyhow. They seem to be brazen enough, not only to ignore their own contract with the government and the expressed wish of 20,000,000 citizens, but to disregard even the decisions of the Federal Courts.

It has been said over and over that Dr. Briggs "had no right to stay in the church and preach doctrines contrary to her standards." If we have read aright, that was the point in controversy. Dr. Briggs denied that what he taught was contrary to the standards. It was a difference of interpretation which could only be settled by the church courts. If Dr. Briggs was sincere in his opinion, he had a right to stay in the church until the question was settled by the proper tribunal. Is a sincere man to step out of his church relations because some unauthorized people or papers say his teachings are contrary to church standards? There are tribunals to determine such questions, and the Briggs case has been adjudicated, and he has been suspended. He was wrong in his interpretations, according to the decision rendered; he was right in staying in the church until that decision came.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

Poor Richard says: "Laziness travels so slowly that poverty soon overtakes him."

We are glad to report that Bro. Faunt LeRoy is gradually improving, and we trust will soon be able to go about his work.

There were eight young preachers and eleven preachers' sons pursuing their studies in Centenary College last session.

There are 378 099 educable children in Louisiana, and the school fund for the second quarter just distributed is $49,152 87.

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, evangelist, accompanied by Rev. C. W. Perkins, of the North Mississippi Conference, paid us a pleasant visit last week.

Prof. N. L. Lupton, of the Agricultural and Mechanical College, at Auburn, Ala., died last week. He ranked with the foremost scientists of the country.

The revival at Jackson, Miss., under the leadership of Rev. J. B. Culpepper closed last week. It seems to have been a success. One hundred and fifty persons joined the churches.

For the relief of the sufferers in the overflowed district we have received from J. E. Breland, $2; Rev. W. J. Dawson, $1, Avera, Miss. This will help in the good cause of relieving the poverty-stricken.

The papers report that Meridian, Miss., is to have two new schools—one for males, and the other for females—and both under the management of Prof. L. M. Stone, formerly president of Shuqualak Female College.

Now that expenses at Centenary College have been lowered within the reach of everybody, let all the friends, lukewarm and warm, busy themselves to fill up the halls with students. Begin the canvass right away and keep it up continuously.

When the faculty and Board of Trustees of Centenary College conferred the honorary degree of Doctor Divinitatis upon Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, of the Mississippi Conference, it was a handsome recognition of superior merit. We congratulate the college and the new Doctor.

An Experience.

At Millsaps College, a few days ago, during an experience meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association, one of the boys rose and gave his experience as follows: "Gentlemen, my religious life has not been what it ought to have been. My religious life is not what it ought to be, chiefly because of one sin, because of one great evil. This sin stands like a great rock in my pathway. It is also the dark shadow which covers my past life. Nay, more, it is the black cloud which seems to overhang my future. It is the dark stain which marks many pages of my history. It is the strong current which threatens to sweep me away every moment. Gentlemen, this great evil is the sin of idleness, the sin of laziness. I call it a sin because it prevents me from doing much good which I would do otherwise, because it injures my religion, because it threatens to wreck my life. Especially have I felt the force of this evil since I have come to Millsaps College. I came to Millsaps last Fall. I entered the freshman class. I could and ought to have stood at the head of all my classes; but instead of all that, I find myself very near the foot. Although I plainly see that if I do not get an education now, I am not likely to get it at all; although I plainly see that now is the turning-point in my life, and if I do not turn in the right direction, I will almost certainly go in the wrong direction. But, perhaps, some one else would like to say a word of warning, give a few words of advice or speak a few words of experience about this sin, this great evil which is called laziness."

Leaving out his figures of speech, leaving out his eloquence, there seems to be much truth in what the young man said about "this great evil."

The Jackson Methodists.

In our two churches in Jackson, Miss., there are about 650 members: First Church, 425, and Capitol Street, about 225. Many of them I think are as good people as the sun shines on, many only medium, and quite a number very ordinary. Dr. Black said he never was among a people that attended prayer meetings better. Among these 650 members I don't know of but two dancers. There are two or three others that I hear have occasionally danced since they have been in the church. There are about a half dozen most excellent young ladies in Jackson—but they are rather inferior as Methodists—that are fully in the social swing. They hold their membership elsewhere or have their certificate in their trunks. The trunk is, perhaps, the best place for them, until they resolve to give up the theatre, cards and dancing. Of these 650 members seven names appeared on petitions to sell whisky by retail. Bro. Watkins takes the position squarely that a name on a whisky petition ought not to be on the church roll, and in this I will have to stand by him.

Some time ago a charity ball was announced by the King's Daughters. As the names of several prominent Methodists were connected with it, much criticism in different parts of the State was provoked. These names, I am told, were there without the knowledge or consent of the parties, and they had nothing at all to do with it. This announcement did not help us any at home and did us injury abroad. Prominent men said, "I will not send my boys to Millsaps College if they are never educated, and I will never put another dollar in that institution." "I don't want my children under the shadow of a great worldly, dancing, gambling church; I would rather my children were not instructed in the Sacred Scriptures by a dancing, card-playing Sunday-school teacher." Gentlemen, I think you may send forward your boys. The social, moral and religious influences at Millsaps are as good as you are likely to find anywhere. Some of the college boys attend Sunday-school at First Church, some at Capitol Street. We will try to train them properly.

I have been around over the State a good deal as a pastor, and I have had more or less trouble with dancing young people and tippling old people almost everywhere I have been. I am inclined to think that Jackson is not on this line more than other places, and much better than some I know of.

Educational Loan Fund Association, North Mississippi Conference.

The Board of Education, at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference, recommended the organization of an Educational Loan Fund Association to aid poor, deserving boys and young men to acquire an education in Millsaps College. By action of the Conference, a Board of Managers was appointed to take this matter in hand, and at a meeting of this Board, held during the Conference session, Dr. R. W. Jones was elected president and J. W. Malone, secretary and treasurer. A committee was also appointed to prepare a circular letter to the church and to draft a constitution for the government of the association. This circular letter and constitution is now ready for distribution. The plan adopted provides for an auxiliary in each presiding elder's district, to be operated in connection with and under the supervision of the parent or Conference association. It is the object of the Board to place this matter before each District Conference during this Conference year, so as to get its merits before the church at once. The Sardis, Greenville, Columbus, and Kosciusko districts have organized, subscribing a sum aggregating not less than $1,000. The Winona, just held, has made no report yet. These auxiliaries are under the control of their respective District Conferences.

The funds are raised by membership fees or shares ranging from one dollar up to five dollars, and in the Sardis, Greenville, and Kosciusko districts, these pledges were made to be paid annually for five years. The Loan Fund idea takes well. The Board of Managers asks the hearty co-operation of all the preachers in this enterprise. I will gladly furnish copies of the constitution to laymen and preachers. Address me at Coldwater, Miss.

A Question.

MR. EDITOR: If a member of our church takes up a notion that some of the brethren in his church are liars and rascals, and on that account refuses to go to church for ten months, and when remonstrated with by the pastor he positively refuses to ever go as long as those he dislikes remain in the church, what must he done with him?

Growth of the Use of the Sound Discs for Deafness.

NO QUESTION RAISED OR DOUBTS ENTERTAINED IN MEDICAL CIRCLES AS TO THEIR EFFICIENCY.

In a number of Medical Journals there have recently appeared several interesting articles, as to the value and practicability of the Sound Discs invented by H. A. Wales, who has an office at 603 Ashland Block, Chicago. From data collected from men who may be looked upon, each as an expert in the treatment of diseases of ear, it is learned that the Sound Discs are applicable only to cases of partial deafness, and do not in any way take the place of an ear trumpet, but that in those cases where the hearing is but partially defective they have been very successfully used. As there can be no harmful effects from their use, they are considered an important addition to the medical profession. Aurists have been the first to feel the beneficial results of this invention, and in view of such facts they consider it a part of wisdom to say nothing to discourage their use, as to do so would ultimately be a great impediment to the progress already made towards the relief of this most obstinate affliction. The public themselves are most profoundly interested in the progress and success that has already followed the use of this simple invention.

Notice.

To the Brethren of the Center, West and South of Mississippi Conference:

Our young Japanese Christian brother, T. Masao—student of theology in Vanderbilt and formerly interpreter to Dr. J. W. Lambuth—expects to come to our section of the Conference about the middle of July. He comes first to Edwards. From this place he can proceed to such other points as write in advance and secure his service. He is highly recommended by Dr. Walter R. Lambuth, and other associates at Nashville, as an interesting lecturer on Japanese customs, religion, etc., as well as a Christian gentleman. In fact, he is fully indorsed by those best calculated to judge of him. He only asks your encouragement and aid and entertainment while passing, and opportunity to ask the people for a small contribution toward his support. This is his method of securing another year's instruction at Vanderbilt. We believe any church and community will be benefitted by such a visit and lecture service in direct proportion to the zeal with which they take hold of it, and the amount they may contribute to this worthy cause. He is very modest in his requests. Any community can meet them and feel it only as a benediction.

So, brethren, if you wish the blessing, write at once to Rev. T. Masao, care of Wesley Hall (V. U.), Nashville, Tenn. He can then schedule his appointments and notify you in due time. I would not miss the opportunity for a great deal. He can give only the latter half of July to this section of our Conference. Hence to the "mighty East." Your brother,

J. P. DRAKE.

Notice.

The Brandon District Conference will convene at Pelahatchie, Miss., July 7 and 8. There will be a sermon by Rev. L. Carley on the fifth at 8 P. M. On the sixth we will hold the District Sunday-school Conference in the forenoon, and the district Pastors' and Theological Society in the afternoon.

A Victory Won by An Oxford Young Lady.

On May 27, 1893, Miss Minnie Cowan, of Oxford, succeeded in finishing the broad and thorough M. A. course in the Latin language and literature of the University of Mississippi, being the first lady and the only student that has completed this course since the raising of the standard of scholarship, and the reorganization of the faculty in 1888. She won the gold medal at Whitworth, as being the best Latin scholar in this institution. She is an alumna of Whitworth Female College, Brookhaven, Miss., and of the University of Mississippi, having spent three years in each school, and has an excellent record throughout her entire school life—all the time being in the forefront of her classes, and frequently receiving the applause of her instructors.

These facts are far more eloquent than any words could be. Those who know the high standard now required in University of Mississippi for this degree will best appreciate the rare intellectual endowment which could fit a woman for so splendid a triumph. Nothing is hazarded in saying that Miss Cowan is one of the finest Latin scholars in the country. She is a young lady of the highest order of mind, brilliant and accurate in her learning—a rare combination. And she has in very high degree that very rare quality of being able to transfer her own thought exactly and with crystalline clearness to the minds of her auditors—a gift essential to a great teacher. Miss Cowan adds to these intellectual accomplishments the most charming graces of person and manner. Her pre-eminence in intellectual competitions is only equalled by the exquisite modesty with which she wears her honors. Oxford, Whitworth and the University of Mississippi are proud of her triumphs, and look with pleasure to the dawn opening upon her, golden with hopes certain of fulfillment. About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. Is is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

Rheumatic Gout.

General Colton Greene, President of the State Savings Bank of Memphis, Tenn., Leaves His Crutches at BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS—Value of Buffalo Lithia Water in Gout, Uric-Acid Diathesis, Etc.

BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS, VA., September, 29, 1892.

Colonel Thomas F. Goode:

DEAR SIR:—It is now four weeks since I reached Buffalo Lithia Springs, suffering from the effects of recurrent attacks of acute articular gout in both feet, which had lasted and confined me to bed for two months. Though I had biennially, sometimes annually, suffered for short periods, the malady on this last occasion was more violent than before and threatened to take a chronic form. My digestive organs were impaired, my health was shattered, I was crippled, and calcareous deposits were appearing on both feet. Directly on my arrival I copiously used the water of Spring No. 2 conjointly with daily hot baths. A fortnight later I was in condition to walk without the use of crutches, the swelling and inflammation of the parts had measurably subsided, and my health improved. To-day my general health is better than it has been in twelve months, the deposition of uric acid sediment is dissipated, and my feet, though sensitive to pressure, are restored to their normal condition.

Respectfully yours, COLTON GREENE.

ITS GREAT TRIUMPH IN RHEUMATIC GOUT.

[Statement of Mr. Charles Bernaschina, of Hot Springs, Ark.]

Proprietor of Buffalo Lithia Springs, Va.:

DEAR SIR:—I cheerfully place at your disposal the following statement, showing the remarkable benefit which I have derived from the Buffalo Lithia Waters in a case of Gout. I am a resident of the Hot Springs, Ark. In October, 1885, I was attacked with Rheumatic Gout in a very severe form, being confined to my bed until the April following. For fourteen consecutive months I used the hot baths, and visited many of the noted mineral resorts of the country, and from time to time since have made use of the hot baths, but without finding any relief. Chalkly deposits formed in most of my joints, I was unable to walk or to use my hands. Four months ago to-day I arrived at these Springs, and was for some time after confined to my bed. At the expiration of six weeks slight improvement was perceptible, the chalkly deposits began to disappear, and I have continued to improve to the present time, and to an extent that I consider, under the circumstances, almost marvellous, the chalkly deposits having almost disappeared. I am now in vigorous general health, and walk readily and actively, walking often several miles over the surrounding hills, and am able to use my hands in dressing myself and at the table, which I was not able to do previous to coming to the Springs.

You are doubtless aware of the fact that my case has attracted unusual attention among your many guests from all parts of the country. Yours very respectfully.

WHEREVER I GO.

BY MARY WILEY STAVER.

Wherever I go, wherever I look,
Up on the tree, on the ground, in the brook,
Something is living, and everything trying,
With climbing, with creeping, with swimming, with flying,
Some object to win, some duty to do;
Wise teaching of lesson to me and to you.
The low humming bee, the bonnie wee bird,
The sheep in the fold, the cows in the herd—
Active and earnest, each one at their best,
Till object attained, unmindful of rest.

Nature and Grace.

The Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, in his recent Christmas sermon in the West London pulpit, related this incident:

"When I was a student, our grand old professor of theology was a man for whom we had a great veneration—simple, child-like, holy; none had ever known him to be anything else, and that gracious and unfailing sweetness and beauty were to us his natural disposition. To such a man it was no trouble to be always blameless. But one day it chanced that a student came in late to the class, and pushed his way to his seat. The professor stopped to ask gently why he was late. The answer was given somewhat flippantly, an excuse which aggravated the offense. Instantly the professor, who had been sitting, rose up to his full height, until the big, massive man seemed to fill the room, stretching out a trembling and terrible forefinger at the offender. The great shaggy eyebrows were lifted, and the lightnings shot from his eyes. Like thunder rolled these words from his lips, 'Leave the room, sir.' We started in amazement, almost in fright. The culprit crouched away from his place, and left, while that majestic figure stood there all ablaze with wrath. The door was shut. Then again the professor sat in his chair. But the storm was done. With a trembling voice he read the discourse, seeming almost unable to go on. After the lecture we left, only to gather in groups and discuss this wonderful thing. Presently came a message that the offender was wanted; and he hastened to the irate professor, expecting an angry reprimand. But there sat the old man in tears.

"'My brother,' he sobbed, 'will you forgive me?'

"'No, sir; indeed, it is I who should apologize,' said the student, overwhelmed.

"'No, no, I am older. Will you forgive me? I am very, very sorry. Say that you forgive me——'

"The student managed to get out a word or two.

"'And you must tell all the students that I have apologized, will you?'

"And again there was a pause for the promise.

"'Now,' said the noble old man, 'I will go and ask God to forgive me.'

"Nothing in all that life, nothing in all his words, ever did us so much good as that. We knew then under that gentleness and beauty what fires burned; and every man of us had a new faith and a new hope and a new love.

"Go home, and tell thy friends what great things the Lord has done for thee. The Lord go with you every one, and keep you true and loving and brave. Amen."—The Christian Advocate.

The Mother's Moods.

The household barometer is always to be studied in the mother's face. Others in the home may have moods, but she can not afford to indulge in such a luxury; for her promise is to regulate not alone the weather, but to fix the climate and ordain the atmosphere which shall prevail in the nursery, at the table, in the parlor, and over the whole house. "What is mother about?" inquired a big boy of his sister, as he came home from the shop where he was learning how to be a business man. "Making sunshine for everybody, as usual," was the reply. When we think how the mother's looks and tones affect the babies, how early the little ones begin to reflect her in that soul-likeness which shines out in the face, we can not overestimate the importance of her self-control. She must be amiable, whoever frets. She must be brave, whoever else is cowardly. She must be tender, though others are brusque. Because she is a mother, and, therefore, the arbiter, under God, of her children's destinies, the former of their characters, she must abide with Christ, deriving daily strength from communion with him.—Christian Intelligencer.

Filled with the Spirit.

It matters much to the child of God whether he have the Holy Spirit in the measure of a rill, a river, or an ocean. Just as there is a great difference between the serviceableness of the rill, the river, and the ocean in the economy of nature: the rill beautifies the landscape, slakes the thirst of bird and beast; the river has a larger utility in ministering to commerce and life; but the ocean is tributary to civilization and human welfare as is neither the rill nor the river. So if the believer has the spirit in the measure of a rill, it is much to his experience and life; if he has him in the measure of a river, it is more; but if he have him in the measure of an ocean, that is, in his fullness, then the believer becomes the most effective and serviceable, both to the church and the world, that it is possible for him to be. Let us take him as an ocean within us, even his fullness. The fullness of the Holy Ghost is indispensable.—S. A. Keen, D. D.

Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested: that is, some books are to be read only in parts; others to be read, but not curiously, and some few to be read wholly and with diligence and attention. Some books, also, may be read by deputy, and extracts made of them by others; but that would be only in the less important and meaner sort of books; else distilled books are like common distilled waters, flashy things.—Bacon.

Scripture for Women.

Take the "wife's chapter," Proverbs xxxi—that is for women, for young women. No girl ought to think of getting married till she learns it by heart. The fact is, it was written by a woman. Don't startle for fear I have made a mistake. You will say it was by King Lemuel. Yes, I know, but you will notice before the first verse ends, it says, "The propheoy his mother taught him." He would have known nothing about such things unless she had told him. In that chapter a man is simply an amanuensis.

The "marriage chapter," Ephesians v, belongs largely to the sex named, and Judges xiii, which is "the mother's chapter," belongs wholly to her. So with the "widow's chapter," Isaiah liv, and I. Timothy v. The "household chapter," Colossians iii, "wives' and husbands' chapter," I. Peter iii, together with "the father's and mother's Psalms," cxxvii, and cxxviii, are portions unto women. So is the bigger part of I. Corinthians vii, which is not for public reading, but for a woman, a wife, to read when she is alone in her closet, and thus be taught to foil the enemy of souls.

Take the second chapter of Titus. Here Paul writes to the preacher, that he speaks the things which become sound doctrine; and what does he say? Here his message is unto the woman of riper years, telling the aged women they must be teachers of good things; and no doubt is left as to what they are to teach, and to whom they are to teach it. Listen: "That they may teach the young women to be sober." And if any lesson is needed nowadays, that is it; girls giddy and thoughtless, rushing into pleasure and into company, and into marriage with as little thought about the outcome as a runaway colt—no sobriety whatever; no judgment; no reason; rushing on whither their likes and emotions lead them, regardless of consequences; sadly do they need this.

"To love their husbands"—one divorce to every eight marriages in staid old puritanical New England! And why? Because this lesson is not taught. Love has no use for divorce courts.—Yalman.

Why Should We Be Religious?

It was this which distressed our Lord; it was this which filled him with pity; that men turned their very religion into a burden; that the connection with God as his children, which was meant to be the strength and the joy of human life, should actually be considered an oppression. To our Lord himself it was a constant source of pleasure to be conscious of his connection with the Supreme; this filled his soul so that all toil and suffering were cheerfully borne. This was his true life, and it grieved him to find that this same consciousness of relationship with God, which was meant to be in all men a strength enabling them to bear all burdens, was turned by their own misconceptions into an additional load. Furnished with a carriage to bear themselves and all their belongings, they preferred to yoke themselves to it and drag additional weight. Religion is meant to make life hopeful, to make it reasonable, to make it strong, to give it abiding result. If to us it makes life harder, if it only worries us with a thousand meaningless restrictions and petty performances, it is an erroneous idea of religion we have. It is meant to develop all that is good and abiding in our nature and to give us the fullest freedom and the fullest enjoyment of life; and if, on the contrary, it seems to stint our energies, to make us formal, and to make us false, then our religion is a mistake and not the true religion.—Dr. Marcus Dods.

Read for Personal Profit.

Do not read the Bible for others, for class or congregation, but for yourself. Bring all its rays to a focus on your own heart. While you are reading, often ask that some verse or verses may start out from the printed page as God's message to yourself. And never close the book until you feel that you are carrying away your portion of meat from that hand which satisfieth the desire of every living thing. It is well sometimes to stop reading and seriously ask: What does the Holy Spirit mean me to learn by this? What bearing should this have on my life? How can I work this into the fabric of my character?

Above all, turn from the printed page to prayer. If a cluster of heavenly fruit hangs within reach, gather it. If a promise lies upon the page as a blank check, cash it. If a prayer is recorded, appropriate it, and launch it as a feathered arrow from the bow of your desire. If an example of holiness gleams before you, ask God to do as much for you. If a truth is revealed in all its intrinsic splendor, entreat that its brilliance may ever irradiate the hemisphere of yourself like a star. Entwine the climbing creepers of holy desire about the lattice work of Scripture. So shall you come to say with the Psalmist: "O, how love I thy law; it is my meditation all the day."—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

The Cause of Her Sweetness.

My mother's habit was every day, immediately after breakfast, to withdraw for an hour to her own room, and to spend that hour in reading the Bible, in meditation and prayer. From that hour, as from a pure fountain, she drew the strength and sweetness which enabled her to fulfill all her duties and to remain unruffled by all the worries and pettishnesses which are so often the intolerable trial of narrow neighborhoods. [As I think of her life, and of all it had to bear, I see the absolute triumph of Christian grace in the lovely ideal of a Christian lady. I never saw her temper disturbed; I never heard her speak one word of anger, or calumny, or of idle gossip. I never observed in her any sign of a single sentiment unbecoming to a soul which had drunk of the river of the water of life, and which had been fed upon manna in the barren wilderness. The world is the better for the passage of such souls across its surface. They may seem to be as much forgotten as the drops of rain which fall in the barren sea, but each drop adds to the volume of refreshful and purifying waters. The healing of the world is in its nameless saints. A single star seems nothing, but a thousand scattered stars break up the night, and make it beautiful.—Archdeacon Farrar.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

A POOR RULE.

Said Mary to Johnny, "O dear!
This play is too poky and slow;
There's only one hubbie-pipe here—
O, Johnny, please, I want to blow!"
"No, I'll blow them for you," said he;
"Just watch, and you'll see every one;
That leaves all the labor to me,
While you will have only the fun."

Said Johnny to Mary, "O my!
That apple, so big and so bright,
You can't eat it all if you try;
O, Mary, please, I want a bite!"
"No, I'll eat it for you," said she,
"And show you just how it is done;
I'll take all the labor, you see,
And you will have only the fun!"

In Japan.

ALONG A LITTLE RIVER.

This time you may walk with me two miles into the country. The other companions are the young man who lives with me and a student of a college at Tokio. The former is a Christian; the latter is an inquirer. He is unwell, and is visiting his brother in Matsuyama, hoping to get better. Both can speak English, and are eager to walk, so that they will be useful companions. Let us take the road that goes up the left bank of the Ishiti river, a clear, rapid stream which flows through the southern part of the city. It is 3 P. M., and all along the way we meet boys and girls carrying fuel into the city, their last load for the day. Some have charcoal; other twigs cut from the mountain-side, formed into two great bundles placed at either end of a short pole. Horse and oxen, and some wagons drawn by men and boys are doing service in hauling heavier materials. The horses are led and have on straw shoes; a bell is on the neck of nearly everyone, and a glance at the load on each animal's back will show at once that Americans do not know how to load a beast of burden.

Between the high road and the fields is a row of the trees whose fruit supplies the wax used in making candles. It is not time for rice culture, because snow recently covered everything; but all the dry portions of the field, and even the rugged slopes of the river banks, have been tilled as a garden, and wheat and beans are growing in rows upon the heaped-up beds. The farmer throughout the year is earnest in accumulating fertiliser for his rice, and now he is seeing to it that the pools at the mountain basis be repaired, and that the devices for taking the water from the river be in trim, against the hot days when his rice fields will become dry. We pass one rude monument erected in memory of a man who projected a little canal in which about a third of the river's water is carried beautifully through a higher level than the river itself keeps as it moves toward the sea. At one place a part of this is used to run a modest little rice mill. It hides itself amid the thickly growing bamboos, and you might not know that it was there but for curiosity which causes you to turn aside and go down the little path. The works of man for two thousand years have not hurt the beauties of the little river. Its water is sweet and clear everywhere, even surpassing that in the streams of South Mississippi. Sometimes it winds; sometimes it dashes and falls. At one place, where there is a little depth, a fisherman is trying for trout. We would like to go on to the falls at its source, only three miles ahead; but the sun is getting low.

Let us return by way of that Buddhist temple under the mountain, and pause at the gate. A huge gnarled pine is over us, spreading all around; a brook runs at our feet; a sacred old stone lies across the brook. Do not step upon it; it will make your feet lame. See those more than two hundred straw sandals hanging just inside. They were sent to represent persons who wished cures, being too unwell to come themselves. Through the lattice we can see the whitewashed idols.

"In vain with lavish kindness
The gifts of God are strewn;
The heathen in his blindness
Bows down to wood and stone."

HENRY G. HAWKINS.

Matsuyama, Japan, March 15, 1893.

Cultivate a Sweet Voice.

There is no power of love so hard to keep as a kind voice. A kind hand is deaf and dumb. It may be rough in flesh and blood, yet do the work of a soft heart, and do it with a soft touch. But there is no one thing it so much needs as a sweet voice to tell what it means and feels, and it is hard to get it and keep it in the right tone. One must start in youth, and he on the watch night and day, while at work and while at play, to get and keep a voice that shall speak at all times the thought of a kind heart. But this is the time when a sharp voice is more apt to be got. You often hear boys and girls say words at play, with a quick, sharp tone, as if it were the snap of a whip.

If any of them get vexed, you will hear a voice that sounds as if it were made up of a snarl, a whine, and a bark. Such a voice often speaks worse than the heart feels. It shows more ill-will in tone than in words. It is often in mirth that one gets a voice or a tone that is sharp, and sticks to him through life, and stirs up ill-wind and grief, and falls like a drop of gall on the sweet joys at home. Such as these get a sharp home voice for use, and keep their best voice for those they meet elsewhere, just as they would save their best cakes and pies for guests, and all their sour food for their own board. I would say to all girls and boys: "Use your best voice at home." Watch it by day as a pearl of great price, for it will be worth more to you in the days to come than the best pearl hid in the sea. A kind voice is a lark's song to heart and home. It is to the heart what light is to the eye.—Epworth Herald.

Quite Legal, But Not Honorable.

A certain English laborer who was noted for his great size and strength once thought of an original fashion to avoid toll. The incident is described in the "Autobiography of an English Gamekeeper."

The laborer was going along the road mounted on his donkey, which was a good-sized animal, when he came to a turnpike gate.

"How much do you charge for my donkey to walk through," he asked the pikeman.

"Twopence," was the reply.

"And how much do you charge for carrying a parcel through the gate?"

"Nothing."

"Whoa! whoa!" cried Joslin; and quietly dismounting, he deliberately slipped his hand under the donkey, seized his forelegs with his hands, lifted him off the ground, carried him through the gate, and set him down on the other side.

"Gee up, Neddy!" he cried, getting on the donkey's back; and off they went well content.

Dolly's Jumbles.

Dolly was fond of jumbles; and next to eating them was the pleasure of seeing Sarah make them.

Her mamma left her one morning, while she went to call on a sick neighbor. Dolly did not know what to do with herself. She would like to watch Sarah in the kitchen. She knew she was always welcome when Sarah was good-natured; but sometimes Sarah was cross, and then Dolly had to keep out of her way.

She went quietly to the kitchen door and looked in, but no Sarah was to be seen. There was a hot fire in the range, and on the cooking table were boxes and packages. Dolly knew what it meant. She caught sight of a basin and mixing spoon; and standing on tiptoes she saw a mixture that made her blue eyes sparkle.

"Sarah's making jumbles, I do believe. She never puts in sugar enough, and I am just going to," she said, climbing into a chair and tugging at the cover of a large wooden box. There were two boxes just alike, standing side by side, with black letters on the outside; but Dolly was only five, and could not read.

She dipped up a cupful, and turned it into the basin. It made her little arm ache to stir it all in, but she kept at it till all the sugar was hidden in the dough. Then she sat down to wait for Sarah. She came in in a moment with a pan of green peas. Seeing Dolly quietly seated, she praised her for not touching anything, and promised her one of the first jumbles she cooked. Dolly did not feel very comfortable, but she said nothing. She watched Sarah's quick fingers mix and mould and cut the dough.

"Now, Dolly, this is yours," she said, cutting out a prettily shaped leaf, and sprinkling it freely with sugar.

Dolly soon had her jumble in a napkin waiting for it to cool. As soon as she could she took a large bite. Oh, dear! what was the matter?

She spit, and sputtered, and made such a face that Sarah thought she must have burned her mouth.

"You foolish child! Why didn't you wait till it had cooled?"

"It didn't burn, Sarah; but oh, it tastes just awful! I guess I put in too much sugar;" and Dolly began to cry.

Sarah took the jumble, broke off a piece, and tasted it. It was her turn now to make a wry face; and it was a very cross Sarah who sent Dolly out of the room.

Dolly had used a cup of salt to sweeten her jumbles.—Lizzie May Sherwood, in Our Little Ones.

Boys That Succeed.

"A new boy came into our office to-day," said a wholesale grocery merchant to his wife at the supper table. "He was hired by the firm at the request of the senior member, who thought the boy gave promise of good things. But I feel sure that the boy will be out of the office in less than a week."

"What makes you think so?"

"Because, the first thing he wanted to know was just exactly how much he was expected to do."

"Perhaps you will change your mind about him."

"Perhaps I shall," replied the merchant; "but I don't think so."

Three days later the business man said to his wife: "About that boy you remember I mentioned three or four days ago. Well, he is the best boy that ever entered the store."

"How did you find that out?"

"In the easiest way in the world. The first morning after the boy began work he performed faithfully and systematically the exact duties assigned which he had been so careful to have explained to him. When he had finished he came to me, and said: 'Mr. H., I have finished all that work. Now, what can I do?'"

"I was a little surprised, but I gave him a little job of work, and forgot all about him until he came into my room with the question, 'What next?' That settled it for me. He was the first boy that ever entered our office who was willing and volunteered to do more than was assigned him. I predict a successful career for that boy as a business man."

Business men know capacity when they see and they make a note of it. Willingness to do more than the assigned task is one of the chief stepping-stones to commercial success.—Selected.

Difference in People—and Horses.

A Philadelphia paper recites this pathetic and beautiful incident. It should do much toward convincing certain heathern-hearted people of the fact that animals have rights which ought to be respected.

An old man was leading a thin old horse across the commons in the northern part of the city, when a passer-by asked where he was going.

"I'm searching for a bit of green for the poor beast," he answered.

"I'd send him to the bone-yard or the glue factory," said the other, contemptuously.

"Would you?" asked the old man in a trembling voice. "If he had been the best friend you had in the world, and helped you to earn food for your family for nearly twenty-five years? If the children that's gone and the children that's livin' had played with their arms around his neck and their heads on him for a pillow when they had no other? Sir, he's carried us to mill and to meetin', an', please God, he shall die like a Christian. Nobody'll ever abuse old Bill, for if I go before him there are those paid to look after him."

"I beg your pardon," said the man who had accosted him; "there's a difference in people."

"Ay, and in horses, too," said the old man as he passed on with his four-footed friend.

Correctly Described.

A schoolmaster in a Board school was endeavoring to make clear to his young pupils' minds the meaning of the word "slowly." He walked across the room in the manner the word indicates. "Now, children, tell me how I walked."

One little fellow who sat near the front of the room almost paralysed him by blurting out: "Bow-legged."—Tit-Bits.

God is a declaratory Deity. The whole year is to his saints a continual Epiphany—one day of manifestation. In every minute that strikes upon the bell is a syllable—nay, a syllogism from God. God translates himself in particular works—nationally and personally. If I be covetous, God will tell me that heaven is a pearl, a treasure: if cheerful and affected with mirth, that heaven is all joy: if ambitious and hungry of preferment, that heaven is all glory: if sociable and conversible, that it is a communion of saints.—Donne.

GANN—Mrs. G. W. GANN was born in Abbeville district, S. C., Dec. 26, 1844; died April 21, 1893, aged forty-eight years three months twenty-five days. She was married to G. W. Gann Aug. 8, 1865. To this happy couple were given eight children, two of which have already preceded her to that beautiful home of the soul. She leaves a heartstricken husband and the other six children, one of which is a bright little boy of five summers, to be raised without that love and tender care that none but a mother can give.

We can offer no comfort to the bereaved ones greater than that which they derive from the knowledge that she died just outside of the beautiful gate of the city. She was known by her fruits. Her life was and is a light that can not be extinguished, a city set upon a hill and can not be hid; her works do follow her.

Composed and amiable in disposition, she drew around her trusting and loving friends that spoke words of tribute like these: "Oh, how she'll be missed. The church has lost a stake."

As a mother, she was a perfect model, wrapped up in love and care for her children. As a wife, she was all that the word means; as a neighbor and friend, she was thoughtful considerate, charitable, preferring to say nothing than to speak evil of anyone. With her beautiful character, loving heart and gentle manner, she won and never repelled those with whom came in contact. She walked in the path of the just. No wonder she was ready when the summons came. When Jesus called she was ready to lay down the cross and put on the crown. Methinks that heaven did ring from the throne to the gate of the city with the echo of these words, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," when she took up that harp and played that song that no one can sing, only those that have been redeemed from off the earth.

Children, where is that dear mother? She is in heaven, and her last thoughts, if not her words, were, "Meet me there." Husband, where is that devoted companion? She has passed through the beautiful gate and is now standing, waiting and watching for you, and longing for that grand reunion that will take place by and by.

Thanks be unto God for a religion that can not be confined to this world, but reaches from our homes on earth to our home in heaven. Her voice and touch is missed here, but she has renewed her melody in the land where songs never grow old. Let us meet her there, where parting is no more. Her Pastor,

C. C. E.

Hillsboro, Miss.

SHIPP—C. T. SHIPP was born Aug. 4, 1840, and died at his old home, near Water Valley, Miss., May 3, 1893.

Bro. Shipp's illness was very short, and his death a great shock to the entire community as well as to his own family and loved ones. He leaves a most afflicted and helpless family to mourn their loss. His aged mother, with a dislocated hip, has been confined to her rolling chair for five years, and his older brother, with paralysis, has been confined to his bed thirteen years; also leaves a wife and five small children. How sad, how sad! He was the stay and dependence of all.

Bro. Shipp was a most devoted son, a kind and attentive brother, and a loving father. It was so hard to give him up. He is a loss, not only to his family, but to the entire community, and to the church; but we feel that our loss is his eternal gain.

Bro. Shipp professed religion at Driver's Flat Camp Ground in 1871, and joined the M. E. Church, South, the following year, of which he has been a faithful member, often serving as steward, in which he took great delight. No man had the interest of his church and the welfare of his pastor more at heart than did Bro. Shipp. Nothing that he had was too good for his pastor. His house was the preacher's home. He bore his sickness with Christian patience and fortitude, often trying to sing that song he loved so much, "How firm a foundation." His last instruction to his little boys was, "Get ready for Sunday-school, and be good boys." God bless his bereaved family, and may they so live as to meet him in that home beyond! W. A. BOWLIN.

SMITH—Died in Covington, La., May 15, 1893, Mr. JOHN ENIS SMITH, aged seventy-eight years and twenty-eight days.

Bro. Smith was a native of the city of Baltimore, Md., and came to New Orleans in 1836. He went back to Baltimore in 1843, and married Miss Eliza Jane Masson, and, returning to Louisiana, settled on Bayou Chitto, in St. Tammany parish. Sister Smith, a most estimable lady, died in 1882, leaving him with twelve children, and in 1883 he married Mrs. Amelia Holbrook, who survives him. He removed to Covington, La., in 1855, he and his wife joining the church, of which they remained consistent members until death; he filling for over a quarter of a century the offices of trustee and steward.

Bro. Smith was but little demonstrative in his religious feelings; but his consistent, upright life recommended the religion he professed, and proved to a worldly-minded community that "godliness has the promise of the life that now is, as well as that which is to come."

But he is gone! Yet his son of the same name had just joined the church, and takes his father's place as steward. Of six sons and six daughters all were raised, married, and now living, having never lost a child; so it is to be hoped that each one may so live as to make an unbroken family in heaven.

WILSON—Miss MARY DAVIS WILSON, born in Monroe county, Miss., Jan 17, 1854, went to heaven from her father's home, in Aberdeen, Nov. 7, 1892. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church at Pine Grove, Okolona circuit, when quite a girl. During the pastorate of Dr. William Murrah her membership was moved to Aberdeen station.

We have never known a more beautiful Christian life. Her home influence was all that could be desired to induce her to live a consistent Christian and a loyal Methodist.

For thirty years she was greatly afflicted most of that time a constant sufferer. No one ever heard her complain. She was "patient in tribulation." Perfectly unselfish, she was concerned for the welfare of the church and the happiness of others. The impress of her consecrated life is upon her loved ones. It was a benediction to be her pastor. Her devoted father, sisters and brothers ministered to all her necessities. In their bereavement they rejoice in her reward. We never saw any better prepared for heaven. To all who suffer we commend the grace that sustained her. To the family we tender our sympathy.

HOLCOMB—JOHN L. HOLCOMB, son of S. A. and Minnie Holcomb, was born in this county, near Williamsburg, Miss., Sept. 16, 1889, and departed this life May 10, 1893.

Dear little John has gone to join little sister in heaven. He has finished his work here on earth, and has plumed his little pinions and gone to him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The King has called him hence, and has crowned him, that he may wield a scepter over father, mother, brother and sister. His little body is in the grave, but his little soul is in the sweet by-and-by. God has taken back the beautiful life he gave! Oh, how we miss him, and home is so lonely without him; yet heaven seems brighter since God has taken that jewel up there. The last kiss from his lips, just before his spirit took its flight to meet our adorable Savior, seems another golden link to bind us to heaven. May God bless the parents, and help them so to live here on earth as to meet their loved ones in heaven!

JOHN H. EVANS.

GREEN—JESSE A. GREEN, oldest son of Mrs. S. S. Green, was born in Webster parish, La.; joined the M. E. Church, South, at Pleasant Valley, when ten years old; was married to Miss Delanie Hortman by Rev. R. M. Blocker, April 29, 1886, and died of pneumonia at his mother's home, April 23, 1893.

Bro. Green was an obedient son, affectionate husband and father; an industrious farmer, a good citizen and faithful to the church of God. He was not on Pisgah's height at all times, but had his seasons of gloom and despondency, and amid all the temptations he seemed not to forget that he had been "purged from his old sins."

His illness was short. When the end of life came he comforted his affectionate wife and loving mother with the assurance that Jesus was with him, and his way into the heavenly city was clear.

May this testimony heal up the wounded hearts of his sorrowing family, and, by God's grace, so live that you may meet Bro. Jesse "on that happy golden shore."

W. L. HAMIL, Pastor.

FALL—Died at her residence, near Arcola, Miss., on May 26, 1893, Mrs. ELIZABETH A. FALL, aged eighty years.

She was a native of Tennessee, and taken to Warren county, Miss., while the native cane yet covered the hills on which the city of Vicksburg now stands. She knew little of schools, but was highly educated in social life. The portrait dressed in bridal attire, which yet hangs in the deserted house, shows that she was once young and beautiful. When quite young she was married to Joel Cameron, but soon was left a widow. In 1833 she married Alexander G. McNutt, who died in 1848. About 1853 she married George R. Fall, who died in 1869. For sixty years she has been an exemplary member of the Methodist Church; her house the home of the preachers. She has been chiefly noted for the number of orphan girls who found at her fireside a comfortable home and in her a loving mother. A. J. PAXTON.

BUSSUM—Bro. B. A. BUSSUM was born in Alabama, April 18, 1832, and came to Smith county, Miss., when twelve years of age, where he resided up to his death, which occurred suddenly, May 16, 1893, in his sixty-second year. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, 1863. On Feb. 15, 1866, he was married to Miss E. A. Amason, who survives to mourn her loss.

Bro. Bussum was a kind and loving husband and an indulgent father, good citizen and neighbor. Quiet and peaceable—more, he was a faithful and earnest Christian. Left no dying testimony, but his life points to yon heaven, where rests his soul. He left widow and several children, with many relatives and friends, to lament their loss. After a memorial sermon at Gasque Chapel, where he held membership, we deposited in the tomb his mortal remains to await the resurrection morn. We will meet again on the shady banks of eternal life. R. A. SIBLEY.

CAWTHON—Died at his residence, Richland parish, April 19, 1893, Bro. J. L. CAWTHON, aged sixty-nine years to a day. Bro. Cawthon was born in Georgia; moved to Mississippi when only nine years old; moved to Missouri and lived in that State until he was twenty-six years old; and then to Louisiana, where he has lived ever since. He was twice married; his first wife having died over thirty years ago. His last wife survives him. He was the father of eight children; five by his first wife, and three by his last. Five of his children are living; five boys, all grown.

Bro. Cawthon was once a steward in our church and lived a consistent life. He was buried at Midway Church with Masonic honors by Delhi Lodge, of which he was a member. He was a good husband, kind father, and true and faithful friend. Peace to ashes.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Mayor Fitzpatrick, of this city, has signed the ordinance appropriating $6 000 for the relief of sufferers by overflow in the north Louisiana parishes.

The ultimatum of the Federal Court of Chicago, delivered on June 8, to the effect that the World's Fair can not be opened on Sundays is final, and will be backed up by force of arms if necessary.

It seems that the talk about Prof. Briggs heading a secession from the Presbyterian Church has no foundation in fact. He does not propose to leave or be put out of the Presbyterian Church, but will remain there and fight his battle for progress.

The forty-first Annual Convention of the International Typographical Union began in Chicago, on June 12. There were fully 300 delegates present. President W. B. Prescott called the meeting to order. Mayor Carter H. Harrison made an address of welcome.

Eulalie, the Infanta of Spain, went to the World's Fair, on June 9, without any military escort and without any of the fussy ceremony that royalty is usually supposed to require. The princess was accompanied by three or four friends, and she laughed and had fun and enjoyed the sights just as any woman would.

The election ordered by the police jury of Livingston parish, La., for this (the sixth) ward passed off quietly, again showing the honorable body that whisky is not to be tolerated in Livingston. The vote stood as follows: 83 dry and only 4 wet. The colored citizens voted the dry ticket to a man, the four wet tickets being cast by white men.

The Louisiana State Building, at the World's Fair, now beautifully furnished, is wide open to the public, and is so different from any of the other State buildings that it has become one of the most popular show places at the Fair and hundreds register there every day. The chief attraction is the curly pine room, and Major Carey, of Jennings, is kept busy explaining our pine lands to business men. This exhibit alone will be worth thousands of dollars to Louisiana.

It seems that Findlay, Ohio, does not mean to be downed. But the other day a statement was going about to the effect that her gas was failing, her houses standing vacant and her manufacturers suspending operations. And now comes the report that she has made the biggest gas strike ever known in Ohio. The new well is seven miles from the city and has capacity of 4 - 000 000 feet more than the wonderful "Karg," which made Findlay famous. This last well reached the sand at a depth of 1,116 feet.

The old Ford Theatre Building in Washington City, occupied by the Records and Pension Division of the surgeon-general's office, collapsed on June 9. There were 475 persons, mostly government clerks, employed in the building, and nearly all of these were employed at work when the building fell. Twenty-three were killed and sixty-eight severely injured. As a consequence, the next Congress will be called upon to pay heavily for its neglect. There is some talk of damage suits, but it is the general impression that friends of the victims will write and ask Congress to pay all funeral expenses of the dead and give the family of each deceased clerk a sum equal to one year's salary. The injured are to have leave of absence with pay until entirely restored, and all bills for medicine and attendance to be paid by the government. Fifty thousand dollars is the lowest estimate on this item.

FOREIGN.

Cholera has appeared at Narbonne, France. Seventy deaths of cholera are reported at Mecca.

The sums of money given to the Pope during his episcopal jubilee by bands of pilgrims, by orders and by individuals, amount to 90,960,000 francs.

Hon. Thos. F. Bayard, the first American ambassador to England, arrived in Southampton on June 10, and was given a cordial reception. The municipal authorities were in waiting, and immediately upon the coming of the Paris to its dock an illuminated address was presented to the American ambassador in the saloon of the steamer.

The report of the council of administration of the Suez Canal, recently made, shows that the affairs of the canal are in a very healthy condition. The receipts of the year past amount to 77,809 780f, and the expenses, including interest and the repayment of capital, 36,081 237f, leaving 41.728 543f net profit, making a dividend of 92f per share. During the year 3,559 vessels and 189 809 passengers passed through the canal. The average time consumed in the transit has been reduced to two hours and a quarter.

The Minister of Colonies has introduced in the Spanish Cortes a bill providing for the reorganization of the government of Cuba. He proposes to suppress the provincial councils and to create a single supreme council, which will sit in Havana and have power to deal with the budget and frame laws for the purpose of realizing reforms recommended by the Spanish government. The conservatives, Cubans, Carlists oppose the bill. The public generally, although regarding it with disfavor, are less bitter in their opposition.

An Odessa correspondent writes to the London News that according to advices from Memel, the exodus of Russian Jews passing through that port for Bremen and Rotterdam is assuming portentous proportions. As many as 700 daily leave the port mentioned. Ostensibly all these emigrants are to proceed from Bremen and Rotterdam to America, but it is no secret that large sections of them are making their way to England. The Jews committee at Memel has the greatest difficulty in meeting the stress put upon it by this wholesale movement.

Rich, red blood as naturally results from taking Hood's Sarsaparilla as personal cleanliness results from free use of soap and water. This great purifier thoroughly expels scrofula, salt rheum and all other impurities.

The number of deaths from cholera in Mecca on June 10 was seventy, indicating that the disease is on the increase.

Manufacturing wit, and selling wit go well together.

A good example is Vacuum leather oil. It is the best preserver of harness and shoes; you pay a quarter for it, "your money back if you want it;" you get a "lambskin-with-wool-on awob" with it, free, the handiest thing in the world; and a book, "How to Take Care of Leather," free.

Manufacturing wit makes good things. Selling wit makes them a thousand times more useful.

Sympathy for the Distressed.

Our lives are all music if we but touch the chords rightly, so says one of our poets, and we all know there is a golden thread entering into the warp and woof of every-day life that is touched by sympathy for the distressed and suffering. At such a time what a boon to have on hand Dicks' Mul-en-ol to offer as a relief for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains and colic. It is soothing and cooling. Large bottles 50 cents.

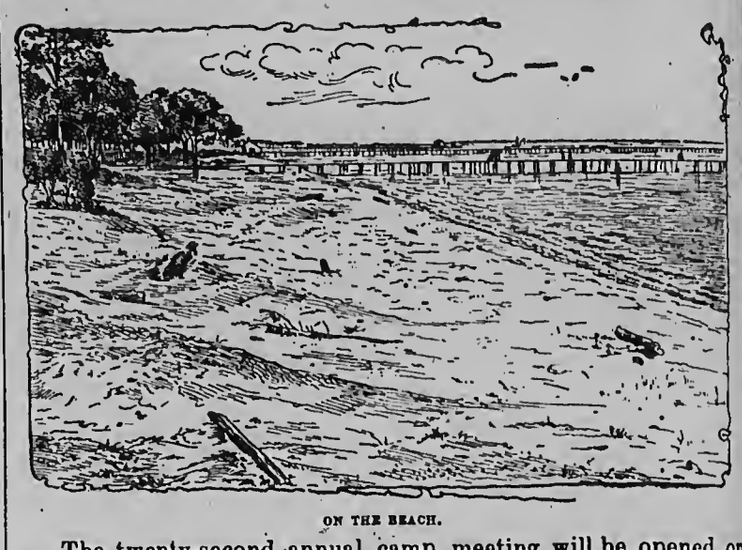
SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.



ON THE BEACH.

The twenty-second annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 12, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 5, and remain on the grounds until the twenty sixth. Holders of camp meeting railroad tickets desiring to attend the session of the Biblical Institute and Summer School for Christian Workers, which opens its first annual session on July 26, can get their railroad tickets extended until August 31. All trains stop at the grounds during the meeting. Express trains Nos. 5 and 6 will stop on signal from June 1 to Oct. 1.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the rush at the opening of the camp meeting should address communications to W. B. Thomson, chairman Tent and Cot Committee, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Cot Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution towards defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

Seashore District Conference.

The fifth wheel of the Seashore district Methodism made its revolutions 1893 at the little town, Pearlington, ing May 16-21. Six preachers failed nswer to roll-call, and the lay delegation was small, owing to length of rict and great business pressure. l it was a delightful session, and of the most spiritual your correspondent ever attended. The reason: presidect of the Conference is ply spiritual, and everything was ordinated to the spiritual interests the occasion. Rev. H. E. Partridge, iding elder of the district, presided. If Florida Methodism has any e transfers like Henry E. Partridge, e's room for them in Mississippi. T. W. Adams—splendid scribe, rate, careful, business-like—wielded the secretary's pen. Revs. J. M. h and N. B. Young—the one carg a load of seventy-one almanacs, the other somewhat over sixty—wiched the sessions with many ht criticisms and much good ad-. The agent of Millsaps College present—Rev. J. W. Chambers, ng, affable, big-hearted—and repcted that institution, which has alady become dear to the hearts of issippi Methodists. "All the proers are experimental Christians one, and he is a seeker," said the l. Let the Methodist Church of issippi encore! God grant that it ever be so! His report surpassed hopes of the most sanguine friend the college. Rev. W. D. Dominick ttle-spirited, "mild as a May ning"—moved among the brethrepresenting the Conference colage. He was assisted in his work v. R. C. Calloway, superannuated ber of the North Mississippi Conce. The resolutions on the spiritual state of the district stirred the ei, and it blew hard for several . By direction of the Conference body the resolutions in this report.

Whereas, The one thing needful for rch and people is greater consecration to the service of God and holier ng; therefore, he it

Resolved, That we faithfully and tly urge our people to seek with h at the throne of heavenly grace for piritual enduement of power—the ism of the Holy Ghost.

Resolved, That we will rigidly set faces against all Sabbath desecrating, teaching our people, by example well as precept, to regard the sanctity of the Lord's day, strictly abstaining from the use of Sabbath trains and and all unnecessary preparation

Resolved, As the proper use of discipline is one of the marks of a true rch of God, that we look to the ful, loving enforcement of the discipline in our several charges.

Resolved, That, as the Church Conference is a means of acquainting our ple with the institutions of Methodism, its doctrines and polity, we urge the holding of regular Church Conferences in all our charges.

L. Dantzler, Dr. E. F. Griffin, W. ite and Hon. J. P. Carter were ed trustees of the Seashore Camp ing. In this connection we give following resolutions:

Resolved, We deem the collection of ney on Sunday at the Seashore p Ground to be a violation of the w of God concerning the Sabbath, inconsistent with the position of the rch on this subject, and subversive the best interests of the cause of st.

Resolved, That the Seashore District Conference urge the trustees of the camp ground to abolish this Sunday ffice, thus enabling us to attend the closing services of the meeting without violating the holy Sabbath.

The following brethren were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, to convene at Hazlehurst, Dec. 7: W. Johnson, S. S. Cope, Jno. A. McCall and Dr. W. F. Ferrill. Alternates: Lt.-Gov. M. M. Evans, Henry Hill, J. A. Vanderwall, and Hon. T. Ford.

There was a kindly face and gentle form missing from the Conference when Jno. A. Ellis had sweetly fallen asleep. The memoir and resolutions offered by Rev. R. Selby were a fitting tribute to a well-spent life.

The preaching by Chambers, Walker, Dominick, Pugh, Adams, Parker, Trevillion and Young was full of unction and spiritual.

Greenville will entertain the next District Conference.

There was a hearty ring to the voices of the preachers as they voted thanks for the cordial hospitality extended to them by the people of Pearlington.

N. B. HARMON.

Sam Jones Camp Ground Association.

Communications and District Conference resolutions published in our ADVOCATE give unmistakable evidence that some of our wise men have unpleasant apprehensions of evil from camp meeting associations. By the aid of powerful field glasses, brethren occupying commanding positions see the movements of enemies in the distance that endanger "the peace and prosperity of our church." The danger signal is raised, the alarm is sounded, and the true, faithful and valiant are urged to rally and "settle speedily and finally the legal status and real functions of camp meeting associations."

I am truly rejoiced that the Woodville District Conference, appreciating the peril of our beloved Methodism from the arrogant, illegal, and unrecognized assumption of prerogatives by camp meeting associations having "no recognition whatever in our law," met the emergency of the hour with Spartan heroism, and by two Whereases and three Resolved warned the disloyal and promulgated the conditions of "peace and prosperity to our church."

What is the cause of these direful apprehensions, these depressing predictions, these hurtful accusations? Who are the offenders, and what is the offense?

I can not vouch for Bethel, and Orville-Whitington Camp Meeting Associations in the Woodville district; but I can and must speak for the Sam Jones Camp Ground Association. Therefore permit me to state a few facts, fearing if I remain silent after these publications, good, true, loyal and innocent members of this association will be regarded as the cause of this storm—

"This storm in a tea kettle."

These premature, convulsive throes of the mountain—it is only a mouse.

"Old ocean into tempest lashed,
To wait a feather, or to drown a fly."

Only the bewildering flight of a poet's imagination can secure glimpses of the shadow of a possibility that the Sam Jones Camp Ground Association can act disloyal, treacherous, and betray the church. The members have given their time, labor and prayers to this enterprise; have invested liberally their money in permanent improvements. The local, social, religious and financial interests of these members surely cause them to feel as deep solicitude for the success of the annual services of the camp meetings, and should insure them against damaging suspicions, as those whose connection with the association is only ex-officio and dependent upon the appointment of a Bishop.

The First Article of the Charter of Incorporation states emphatically the object of the association: "To secure suitable grounds and buildings, and provide for and conduct a camp meeting annually under the auspices and control of ministers and members of the M. E. Church, South." Article Third declares that to be a member of this association it is absolutely required the "person shall not be under eighteen (18) years of age, and shall be a member in good standing in the M. E. Church, South."

The association has constantly and cheerfully recognized the law of usage constituting the presiding elder of the district and the preacher in charge of the circuit chairman and member of the Committee on Public Worship.

To pacify a preacher in charge who failed to find record of this recognition in the Constitution and By-laws, or Minutes, the association, by formal resolution and vote, recorded this recognition.

The association can not justly be charged with an attempt to overleap legal functions, disregard general usage, infringe upon the official rights and prerogatives of others, and thereby endangering "the peace and prosperity of our church," because by resolution "this association extends an unlimited invitation to itinerant ministers to attend the camp meeting, 1893," and made provision to entertain free of charge all who attend. If this unlimited invitation and generous provision were legal, loyal, so also the resolution appointing a committee to give special invitation.

"Do thyself no harm, we are all here," praying and planning for a glorious camp meeting on Sam Jones Camp Ground, to begin Friday, Aug. 18, 1893.

Whitworth College.

Having been appointed one of the Visiting Committee of Mississippi Conference to Whitworth College, I desire to make some report of the operations of the institution for the present year, and especially of the recent closing exercises.

The sermons on Sunday, June 4, by Dr. C. F. Evans and Rev. J. W. Chambers, were able, interesting, and of an elevated character. Good judges commended them highly, and felt that the day was one for instruction and blessing. Dr. Evans' theme was, "The Beauty of Holiness;" that of Bro. Chambers, "The Attractive Power of the Cross of Christ."

The elocutionary contests of Monday were very enjoyable, showing skill in the teacher in this department and talent in the pupils.

It is not necessary to make mention now of the music rendered on various occasions during the exercises. This is a specialty in Whitworth College, and that department was some time since erected into a conservatory of music, with the best instructors possible to be secured. In this respect the college maintains its pre-eminence. The lovers of good music delight to gather there as opportunity offers, sure to be rewarded with something beautiful and rare.

The literary address, on Tuesday, was by Hon. E. W. Carmack, the distinguished editor of the Memphis Commercial. It was noted for its felicity of phrase, its strong sense, and its touches of fine humor, all rendering it worthy of the occasion.

After that the valedictory was read by the first honor graduate, Miss Mary Lee Read, of Baton Rouge, La. The subject of her essay was "Culture." I can not omit to mention the fine thought and excellent form of this essay, which, read in a manner full of grace, quite easily stole, with modest violence, the hearts of all the hearers.

Diplomas were awarded to thirty young ladies, and surely a finer sight than this could not be witnessed. This fact alone testifies to the commanding influence and power of Whitworth College, that she sends out so large a number trained in her halls, who go forth into the world bearing her impress, and crowned with the qualities of pure and gracious womanhood.

The past session has been most prosperous and satisfactory in every way. In the boarding department there were one hundred—not falling behind the number of the year before. Numbers are a main element in success everywhere. We can not regard without interest anything which affects multitudes of persons.

As to the thoroughness of the instruction given in the college, and the rigid requirements for graduation, it is necessary to mention only the names of President Fitzhugh and Prof. Ricketts, long an honored teacher in the institution. The course of study is second to none, and in all things Whitworth is in the front rank, if she does not occupy the first place among Southern female colleges. She has come to be classic, while she preserves undiminished her vigor and her renown. The church has a treasure in this really great school, of which she will, I trust, show herself properly appreciative.

From all that I observed, I am of the opinion that Whitworth College is doing efficiently and successfully the work for which she was founded—that of Christian education.

President Fitzhugh remains to continue the work for which he is so well qualified and in which he has been so greatly blessed.

To the Pastors and Presidents of Epworth Leagues.

Dear Fellow-Workers: Some weeks ago I was made treasurer of the fund to defray the expenses of our delegates to the International Epworth League Convention, to be held at Cleveland, Ohio, last of this month. Dr. Cunnyngham, chairman, sent out an urgent request to each league, asking for a small contribution for this worthy purpose. Up to this date only twenty-nine leagues have responded, aggregating less than $65. It will require $400 to $500. If every league will send only a small sum, we can soon have the amount. The time is very short, and we should surely pay the bare expenses of our delegates. Will not every league in Southern Methodism send some amount at once? Yours fraternally,

J. R. PEPPER, Treas.

Conference Claimants.

Don't forget, my brethren, that the second quarterly payment is due July 1. Let the seventy-nine who failed to report last quarter report in full at this time. Let those who made partial payments make other payments, that there may be no delay in settling the amounts due our claimants.

Your ready response shows that you favor the liberal policy of the Board. We are making a large payment each quarter, aggregating nearly $1,200. If the seventy-nine will only do something, and the other brethren will help again, there will be no trouble.

The division of the funds was made by the full Board. They appropriated ninety per cent. of the entire assessment. We have nothing to depend upon but the loyal love of the active ministry for their brethren who have worn themselves out in the service.

Brethren beloved, shall these men and women suffer? Give us the emphatic denial by sending your Conference fund in full.

JOHN W. CHAMBERS,
Chair'n Joint Board.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. G. E. Greene, P. C., Big Cane, La., June 13: "We have held one protracted meeting at Melville, assisted by Bros. Denson and Grace. Church much strengthened. Five accessions there since, two of whom were Sunday-school pupils. Finances very well up on my work, and all matters working along very well, indeed."

Rev. B. S. Rayner, P. C., Morton and Forest charge: "Pelahatchie is a very prosperous church. Congregations have been fine all the year. The Sabbath-school is flourishing, the prayer meetings good, and every interest of the church going forward. Assisted by Bros. E. T. Breland and Thomas Miller, we have just closed a very successful meeting. Thirteen accessions, about twenty prayed in public who had never done so before, and many new family altars, a woman's prayer meeting and a young man's prayer meeting are some of the results. In this church we have much fine material both developed and developing. The net increase to date is fifteen. Our services are all good to the use of edifying. God is with us."

Rev. Harry W. May, Lake Charles, La., June 9: "We are engaged in a meeting that has been going on more than two weeks. The church has been too dead to move until the last few days. I preached to-day on Eccl. ix, 10, and told my membership that I would open the door of the church for their benefit, and thought that the whole business ought to join again, and at once one of the stewards started, and about one hundred members came and renewed their vows by kneeling in penitence at the altar. We are having some happy conversions in spite of the deadness of the church. We are going to turn this thing upside down, Doctor, by the grace of God. My health is very poor, indeed, and my family have been sick all this year; but God is with us, and we are putting in the best lick of our life. (Heb. xiii, 20, 21.)"

Rev. W. T. Currie, Ponchatoula, La., June 15: "I have just closed a meeting at James Chapel. The meeting commenced last Friday night, Bro. Boyce preaching the opening sermon. The Lord was with us in power from the start. Blessed us the first night, and continued to bless us until the last. Five joined the church; many renewed their vows. The old members say it is the best meeting they have had in twenty years. To God be all the praise. The collections ordered by the Conference are about up in full in cash and subscription. The amount is $103.60. We have $85 in cash and subscription. We have had twelve accessions up to date this year. We have held Children's Day at four of the churches. The children did their part well. The collections amounted to $7.10. God bless the children and young people! The people of Springfield were made to rejoice last Saturday over their victory over the whisky men. Seventy-nine for no whisky, 4 for. They are determined to keep down that evil. Our church here looks nice now. We expect to have Bishop Galloway to dedicate it some time this year. We are trying to build a parsonage. I think I will be able to report it at Conference."

Rev. J. T. Ahney, P. C., Anguilla, Miss., June 14: "As you have not heard from the Sunflower charge this year, I suppose a word from the pastor would not be amiss. While we are badly scattered, we are not entirely lost nor dead, but are striving earnestly to get nearer together and nearer to God. Our work covers about thirty miles in length, and some distance broad; but the Sunflower river being in the way causes us to travel several miles further, as we are forced to go some distance by water. We have had several things to discourage us and to impede our progress this year. I think now the obstacles are about all removed, and we are beginning to move along smoothly. The wind has visited us and has blown down one of our churches, which caused some friction; but having a man alive to the interest of the church and to his neighborhood, we are able to worship in that church again. And I want to say that there was no dancing money used in rebuilding it. We have two Sunday-schools on the work. Have had Children's Day at each. Both largely attended and a liberal contribution followed, considering the number of members enrolled. The zeal of those who trained the children for the exercise was made manifest by their readiness to respond when called upon to act their part. We have not had a revival meeting on my work this year; hence have received but two members by profession. Our congregations are increasing all the while, and the members seem to be more active now than when I entered the work; still there is a need of more heartfelt religion and a stronger realization of the responsibility that rests upon them as Christians. In fact, we need, we want and we must have a deeper work of grace at each appointment, and that right early. Brethren, pray for us."

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, Sidon charge, North Mississippi Conference: "This week has been a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord at Sidon. We began a series of revival services there last Sunday. On Monday Rev. George H. Lipscomb came to our help, to the help of the Lord against the mighty. As he came in the Spirit of the Master, coveting the salvation of souls, he preached in the power and demonstration of the Spirit of God; consequently, the services grew in interest with each sermon, and the people became more and more in earnest about their salvation and the salvation of their friends. Sidon, as most other places of the kind, was quite cold and hard when the meeting began, and the people seemed not to care if they all went to ruin together. We had two saloons there until recently. The last one died hard Wednesday night, amid the lamentations of the children of Bacchus and the rejoicings of the good people. Sidon is dry. Thank God for it. It seems as if hell had been removed from the community. The next sight we covet is to see Leflore county dry, and, by the help of the Lord and the good people of the county, we will see it this Fall. We are going to work to that end. Our meeting took on new life when the saloon died. Bro. Lipscomb was taken sick about the middle of the week, and had to leave us, to the regret of all. Then the writer was taken sick on Thursday night, and, consequently, had to close out. Could the meeting have continued another week, I think Sidon would have well-nigh been redeemed. We received five into the church, baptized two children, and left the people to improve the blessing by working out their own salvation. Every pastor desires to see his people grow in holy things, and every development of spiritual life brings joy to the pastor's heart. I, therefore, rejoice in the Lord for the work that has been done in Sidon."

REVIVAL NOTES FROM THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Shubuta circuit, DeSoto, D. P. Bradford, P. C.: 6 accessions, and "a delightful communion service" June 11.

Waynesboro, J. V. Penn, P. C., assisted by Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Aberdeen, Miss., Rev. W. D. Dominick and Rev. I. L. Peebles: 6 accessions by certificate and 14 on profession of faith; "church greatly revived, some bright conversions, many fine testimonies."

The brethren are planning wisely for the Summer campaign. Our District Conference is being felt throughout the district. Preachers and laymen were baptized anew with the Holy Ghost.

REPORT FROM TCHOUPITOULAS MISSION.

It gives me pleasure to report that the Tchoupitoulas Street Mission is in excellent condition. The work is encouraging, and we believe the blessing of God rests upon it. The attendance continues good, very steady and enthusiastic. When people come to religious meetings three times a week, as these do, and are attentive and thoughtful, we take it as an evidence that God is in it, and is drawing them to his Son. The greatest foe that we have to meet in this work is ignorance, especially ignorance of the plan of salvation; hence it requires a great deal of patience, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, to rid their minds of false notions of religion and prepare them for an intelligent reception of the truths of the gospel. We see on every hand in this work evidences of deeper earnestness on the part of those who come to the meetings; and many of them, while they do not see spiritual things as clearly as we do, nevertheless are able to see men "as trees walking." We are glad to make this report, and are praying the Master to touch their eyes once more, so that they may see the beauties of his gospel with greater clearness. We do not know how many are converted, and do not like to specify, but we believe that there are several who are walking, not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. We believe that these are members of the Lutheran Church, who heretofore had little or no conception of the saving power of the gospel. We have a number of Catholics who are steady attendants at the meetings, and some of them—children—get soundly whipped at home whenever they are reported as having misbehaved in the meetings. This particular family of Catholics has been in attendance during the sixteen months I have been at the mission, and while they have been greatly moved at times to break away from the teachings of Rome, we have not yet been able to get them to take the decisive step. Romish doctrine is very much like an inveterate bad habit in its power for evil, and is equally as hard to break away from.

Our Sunday-school is doing well, and some of the children, we are sure, have given their hearts to the Savior. We have an attendance of nearly forty, and hope to increase it before long. We need three more teachers, but we want only converted teachers.

We have not been able to get the members of churches other than Carondelet interested in this work. All our workers at present are from Carondelet. We would be glad for the pastors of the different Methodist Churches to interest their people in this work.

The members of the W. C. T. U. have been holding meetings at the mission with excellent results, but their efforts have been spasmodic and irregular. Permanent good can only be accomplished by persistent effort, and if these ladies would only be regular and systematic in their meetings, they would accomplish inestimable good.

If the Mission Committee can induce workers from other churches to take part in this work, it will greatly help us. If this end can be accomplished by my withdrawal in favor of some one else from any one of the other churches who would be able to draw fresh workers with him, and thus broaden the scope of this work, I shall be very glad to do so, and let the committee try the experiment of having a new superintendent from one of our other Methodist Churches. In this way we might be able to get some other churches interested in this work, and should the change prove to be unsatisfactory, the writer would be willing, with the Lord's help and sanction, to resume charge of the work once more. With this suggestion I submit this report, and pray God that you may be able, by his Spirit's guidance, to accomplish much good at your meeting to-day.

STRIVE, WAIT, AND PRAY.

Strive yet I do not promise
The prize you dream of to-day
Will not fade when you think to grasp it,
And melt in your hand away.
But another and holier treasure
You would now perchance disdain
Will come when your toil is over,
And pay you for all your pain.

Wait, yet I do not tell you
The hour you long for now
Will not come with its radiance vanish'd
And a shadow upon its brow.
Yet far through the misty future,
With a crown of starry light,
An hour of joy you know not
Is winging her silent flight.

Pray, though the gift you ask for
May never comfort your fears,
May never repay your pleading,
Yet pray, and with hopeful tears;
An answer, not that you long for,
But diviner, will come one day:
Your eyes are too dim to see it,
Yet strive and wait and pray.

Holiness.

"Holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection."—Rev. xx, 6.

I. We select this text because of its direct bearing upon the much-controverted question of holiness. It will be seen that it conditions this upon part in the first resurrection, or that it is the result of the first resurrection. Some tell us that the first resurrection means that Christ will come a thousand years before the judgment, and raise the bodies of the righteous dead, etc. If this were true, then it would be vain to seek holiness in this life by the first or second blessing theory, or any other, for, as holiness is conditioned upon and results from it, it can not precede it. But the first resurrection does not refer to the body at all, but to the soul. It is eminently true that man, in his entirety, both soul and body, fell under the curse of sin and death; therefore, any system of redemption that does not provide for the renewal to life of both is too short to reach his case; but God has richly provided for both, and the redemption that is in Christ Jesus will not be fully realized in the experience of any one man until he shall stand, renewed in both soul and body, in the full image of God, when death shall have been swallowed up in victory. The first resurrection, then, relates, not to the bodies, but to the souls of men. It is God, by his Spirit, quickening the souls of men, dead in trespasses and in sins, to life. The Scriptures abound with this truth.

See Eph. ii, 1: "You hath he quickened, who were dead," etc. Also Eph. ii, 5: "Even when we were dead in sins, hath (he) quickened us together with Christ." Also sixth verse: "And hath raised us up together . . . in Christ Jesus." See also Col. ii, 13: "And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him." Therefore says the apostle (iii, 1): "If ye then be risen with Christ," etc. Was Paul teaching these Corinthian and Colossian brethren that their bodies had been dead and raised to life? No; but their souls. This, then, is the first resurrection. It relates to the souls; it is to be born of the Spirit; it is to be regenerated; it is to be made partaker of the divine nature.

The second resurrection relates to the raising of the body to life. This first resurrection, like the second, has its appointed time and condition. It follows immediately upon the exercise of faith in Christ, or upon the reception of Christ by faith. See John iii, 36: "He that believeth on the Son hath life; but he that believeth not shall not see life." Also I. John v, 12: "He that hath the Son, hath life; but he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life." Jesus says, "I am the resurrection and the life, and ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." Then, to have part in the first resurrection is to have life in and by vital union with Christ by faith.

II. Now, brethren, in the light of these scriptural postulates, we are prepared to arrive at a true idea of scriptural holiness, or sanctification. Remember that holiness in this life applies to the soul, inward man, or heart, for "without holiness," says the apostle (Heb. xii), "no man shall see God;" yet Christ says, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." The pure in heart are holy. They that have part in the first resurrection are holy. They whose hearts are regenerated by the Spirit of God are holy. Is regeneration holiness? No; but regeneration is a work wrought in the heart by his Spirit. The result of that work is a holy heart or sanctified nature. Regeneration is the cause of sanctification; sanctification, or holiness of heart, is the effect of that cause. With soap and water you wash a soiled garment; a clean garment is the result of the washing. The washing is regeneration, the clean garment is holiness; they stand related as cause and effect. Therefore, the new-born soul, or babe in Christ, is holy, for the blood of Jesus Christ, applied by the Spirit, cleanses from all sin.

Now, candidly, brother, is the new-born soul, or babe in Christ, prepared to die and see God? If so, he is holy, [illegible] holiness no man shall see

Yes, sir, you do; and I, dim as is my vision, can see from 120 to 200 pounds of it in those who have professed the second blessing. But you say Paul himself says of babes in Christ that they are carnal. Yes, he does; and he plainly says of the same babes that they are saints, and sanctified by his Spirit. (Compare I. Cor. i, 2; iii, 1, and vi, 11.)

1. Here Paul addresses this, his epistle, to persons who are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints.

2. At the beginning of the third chapter he calls them carnal babes in Christ.

3. At the eleventh verse of the sixth chapter he says they are sanctified by the Spirit of our God.

Now, it was to the church at Corinth that he wrote these letters. Then the same parties addressed in the first and sixth chapters as sanctified saints are the parties denominated babes and carnal in the third chapter. "But," enquires one, "how can they be holy and carnal at the same time?" Why, simply because, first, they are holy at heart; because they have part in the first resurrection—i. e., because their souls are raised to newness of life in Christ, or because their hearts are regenerated by the Spirit of God. But they are carnal because they are yet in the old fallen, unregenerated or unresurrected body. We have seen that the first resurrection relates to and affects the soul, the second the body; and you, my regenerated brother, have undergone the first. You, therefore, have a pure heart, pure and holy tempers, motives and purposes; but you have not yet undergone the second resurrection; therefore, you have yet to contend with the carnal and unrenewed body. It's still the natural and corruptible body that it was before you were regenerated in heart.

But, brother, let me say for your encouragement "that our citizenship is in heaven, from whence we look for the coming of our Lord Jesus, who shall then change our vile bodies and make them like his glorified body." Yes, bless his holy name!—then these carnal bodies will be regenerated and become spiritual bodies; then death will truly be swallowed up in victory. (Phil. iii, 21.) Till then, brother, we, like the apostle, often will be made to groan within ourselves waiting for the . . . redemption of our bodies. (Rom. viii, 22.)

Will any say that Paul was not a holy or sanctified man when he wrote his epistle to the church at Corinth? No, I presume not; but still we find him contending with the carnal body, for at the ninth chapter and twenty-seventh verse of this first epistle we hear him say: "I fight not as one beating the air; but I keep my body under, and bring it into subjection: lest while I preach to others, I myself become a castaway." Yes, Paul well knew that during this life every sanctified soul had to contend with the unsanctified body or flesh; therefore, he (away over at the thirteenth verse of the eighth chapter of Romans) reminds us that "if we live after the flesh, we shall die." Notice, we draw nothing from the seventh of Romans. Let it represent the awakened Pharisee, if you will.

Even to Christians at Galatia he says: "The flesh lusteth (desireth) against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other." (Gal. v, 17.) Here is the struggle of life, and here is where the fight must be made if the victory is won.

At the closing hour of his life the holy apostle tells us that he had fought the good fight, and he just as plainly tells us who his most persistent enemy had been. I have kept my body under; I have crucified the flesh, etc.

III. But can we not live without sin? I answer: In one sense, No; in another, Yes.

"There is none righteous, no, not one." But "Noe was a righteous man." Again: "There is none good." But "Barnabas was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost," etc. Again: I. John i, 8: "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." But at the third chapter and ninth verse the same author says: "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; . . . for he can not sin," etc.

Now, brethren, I do not hesitate to say that no living man can reconcile these several Scriptures and measure sin by one and the same standard at all times. If our lives are measured by the perfect law of God, then we all come short of the glory of God, for by the deeds of the law can no man be justified; but if the honest intent and purpose of the truly regenerated heart be measured by the grace of God in Christ, as revealed in the gospel, he sinneth not. Man can only see the outward life and conduct; therefore, he notes many defects and shortcomings that condemn us; but God sees the heart and intents, and with him—bless his glorious name!—the question is, "Is thy heart right?"

But again: Can not the new-born babe become better? Yes, by crucifying God, and, at the same time, gain strength by the exercise. In other words, he can and will then grow in grace and knowledge, etc.

IV. But, again, says one, 'Is the regenerated man perfect?" No. "Is the sanctified man perfect?" No. "When he dies will he be perfect?" No. "When the body is raised and glorified, and he shall stand renewed, soul and body, and hear that welcome plaudit, 'Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord,' will he then be absolutely perfect?" No. "When he has lived in heaven a thousand years, will he be perfect?" No, no; but is yet to grow and learn and develop, and still become more and more like the inimitable pattern of Divine perfection.

Brethren, there is lying dormant in the fallen, depraved soul of the sinner a latent principle of spiritual life. Let the divine Son come down and touch and fertilize this, and spiritual life is the result. That soul then enters into newness of life.

Again: When this sanctified soul lays off in death this carnal body, it does not die. No; but like the butterfly leaving the chrysallitic state, it only enters into a higher state of life.

Again: When Christ shall come and raise and spiritualize this carnal body, and the two both renewed and sanctified, it will then again enter into a still higher state of spiritual life, and there, in the third heaven, with God and the angels, we shall still live and grow in knowledge and wisdom and power forever and ever and ever. Oh, that immortal host!

Brethren, I am one of that great throng; death can not destroy me. I shall live when stars grow dim with age. The advancing ages shall never fade my immortal youth. Where Paul now stands I shall some day stand, rich with equal greatness and wise with equal wisdom; but then he shall have gone far on to greater heights and richer attainments.

Onward and upward is the divine law to greater growth and higher attainments forever and ever.

Some Reflections.

With much interest I have of late read many articles in our and some other Conference organs relative to the administration of discipline and tendency of our church to congregationalism. All of which have resolved themselves (in my mind) into the following, to-wit:

That the day of faithful and impartial administration of the discipline is past. Whether or not we can, or will ever, return to the former paths should be prayerfully considered by every one.

The cause of lax administration of discipline, as intimated in nearly every article bearing on the subject, is laid at another's door in imitation of the first transgression. (Gen. iii, 12, 13.)

The private member often, when interogated, says, "Our preacher will not try to bring disorderly members to account." The preacher in charge says, "My official members will not co-operate with me, nor sustain me in the attempt, and that the presiding elders discourage the execution of discipline." The presiding elders say, "The Annual Conference is to be blamed, as it does not inquire into the official administration of the preachers as it should."

Now, I take it for granted that all these are men of truth. If so, then it is clear that in this respect "we have all sinned and come short of the glory of God." This I do not think we can deny. For it can be proved, in some instances, where efforts have been made to enforce the discipline, a private member has said: "Does this mean to turn anybody out? If so, I am opposed to it." There are preachers who will not take legal steps to bring offending members to account, but insist that the church "wait till the protracted meeting and reclaim them that way."

It can be proved that preachers have applied to their presiding elders for advice in regard to enforcing the discipline, and their replies were, "Well, I reckon you will just have to let her alone; let her dance on; I don't see what you can do under the circumstances." An ex-presiding elder said to one of our young preachers, "Where our members are unconverted and worldly minded, we have to be very careful how we enforce the discipline lest we drive them from us into the Episcopal Church." Which would only strengthen the worldly element already in that church, and thus make it harder for us to combat than if we had them ourselves. The Lord help!

It is a fact that our Annual Conferences practically ignore the question, "Are all our preachers blameless in their official administration?" I have never yet heard the question asked, "Does he enforce the discipline?" Are not these things so? This state of affairs is not peculiar to Methodism alone, but is apparent in other churches

Church who boasts that he dances and gives dances when he pleases, and that his church can not expel him.

I have in my mind numbers of members of the Baptist Church who habitually swear—yea, a Baptist preacher who repeatedly gets drunk, yet he is not disturbed! Episcopalians let their members, at some places, play cards, drink whisky—yea, keep open saloons, use profane language, dance, etc. The Roman Catholics know no sin for which a member must be expelled unless it be disobedience to priest or Pope, and many of their priests are immoral; they break the Sabbath, drink to drunkenness, and the like.

In the face of these facts the question naturally arises, "What will the results be?" Taking the Scripture for our guide, there is but one answer, viz.: "I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent." (See Rev. ii, 5.) In a word, God will withdraw his divine presence from us, and we shall become "weak like other men." As a result of which preachers will be found seeking their own interest, and not the interest of the church, as indicated by their accepting "calls" prior to the session of the Annual Conference, and churches will be found inviting preachers from a distance to preach for them to see whether or not he will fill the bill. If he performs to their satisfaction, the church and the visiting preacher will be found asking the Bishop to "ratify" the appointment contracted between themselves.

This being tolerated by the Bishop and his "cabinet" will produce dissatisfaction and often disloyalty in the churches and preachers who otherwise would be as true as steel. This being the inevitable result of worldliness in the church, the question arises, "How shall we do that these things come not upon us?" To which I answer in my humble judgment:

First. Let the General Conference at its next session place the trial of its private members in the Church Conference, where it rightfully belongs; to insert in connection with the calling of the roll, the question, "Is there anything against Bro. A.?" If so, let it be stated.

Second. Let the General Conference either give us a form of trial, by which we shall go, or relieve the preacher in charge of the liability of being prosecuted for maladministration of discipline.

Third. Let our Bishops give prominence to the question, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?"

Fourth. Let the Bishops inquire whether or not the presiding elders encourage the preachers and laymen to enforce the discipline. If not, let him put some one in his stead who will.

Fifth. Let the presiding elders ascertain whether or not the preachers discharge their solemn obligation which they took when they promised "not to mend our rules, but keep them." If he is "found wanting," let him be censured, at least, for same by the next Annual Conference.

Sixth. Let the preacher in charge inquire into the lives of his official Board. If they are found to be immoral (as some of them are), let him have the courage to put some one else in office at the fourth Quarterly Conference.

Seventh. Let every member report all others whom he or she knows to be immoral, and see that proper action is taken toward their recovery or expulsion.

"Then shall" our "light break forth as the morning, and the glory of the Lord shall be" our "reward." And we shall be called "the repairer of the breach, the restorer of paths to dwell in." To which let every reader say, Amen.

"Unload the Preachers."

MR. EDITOR: Our hat is off and thanks due you are hereby tendered for your editorial in the ADVOCATE, of June 1, on "Unloading the Preachers." For some time I have been working to redeem time enough to give to an article on that subject. Now, since you have expressed my sentiments so clearly and so much better than I could, I ask only the privilege of rising to second.

Not only is it a heavy burden upon the pastor to be charged with so many outside duties, not only is it an unjust basis upon which to pronounce judgment upon his faithfulness that he fails to bring up all the collections, but it is a positive injury to his influence upon the unconverted, and a hurtful education to the church. In a pastorate of eight charges I have found but one where the collections ordered by the Conference were regarded as equally binding as the assessment for the pastor.

As a rule, our stewards are disposed to draw the line between these two interests and class them as "our collections" the unpleasant experience of the writer to have his Board of Stewards, in their efforts to meet the ministers' salaries, to openly oppose "the collections." Here evidently was an erroneous idea of the obligation of the church. Through this education the people came to regard these collections as of secondary consideration and have very little conscience in the matter. The boast is often made and very evident consolation received in it, "Well, we paid our preacher."

With from six to eight collections upon his hands, the preacher, in the eyes of the unconverted, is soon lost in the collection. Scarcely has he made the rounds finishing up the subscriptions to one cause when he must begin another. Often he is put off until, through disgust or embarrassment, he destroys one list simply to begin another. I think I have known one or two preachers who took apparent pleasure in this work; but I speak for the great majority when I say it is irksome and unpleasant in the extreme. Under different education it might be different. I speak of what exists.

The observant pastor sees with regret all the good impressions of his visit often destroyed by the simple handing of a card for subscriptions or a modest reference to the collections. He goes away fully conscious of having marred if not entirely destroyed any good impressions made.

It was not only a means of relief to the apostles, but a wise compliance with the prejudices and convictions of the people that caused the setting aside of Stephen and his colaborers to the work of the collections, thus giving the ministers both time and unembarrassed opportunity for their most important work.

Conscious of the obligation resting upon him, and knowing the disposition to estimate his work by his financial report upon the Conference floor, his daily thought is of the "collections." Many a poor sermon has been the result of this constant strain upon the preacher's mind and body. In this I speak for one, at least. Somehow sermonizing and money gathering do not harmonize well. I believe the gain to the congregations in this one particular would fully repay them to unload the preacher. I speak from experience and observation. The failure to meet assessments is no evidence against the zeal of the preacher.

My purpose, Mr. Editor, was only to write a note, and lo! to what it has grown. Give us more from your long experience as pastor and presiding elder on the same subject.

Fraternally,

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Annual Conference Resolutions.

Some of the brethren seem to think that any resolution that is recorded by the secretary of an Annual Conference, as passed, is binding on the conscience of every member of the Conference, and others are of a different opinion. If I were required to answer the question categorically, I should say that there is no law of the church nor well-defined principle of Scripture that requires unconditional submission to majority rule of an Annual Conference. If there is, let it be shown, and that will end the controversy.

An Annual Conference is not a legislative body. Its prerogatives are prescribed in our Book of Discipline by the General Conference, the only law-making body known to our economy. The Annual Conference is competent to try, suspend, or expel any of its members for a breach of law enacted by the General Conference, but can not impose any rule or condition upon its members not contained in the Book of Discipline. I demur to majority rule of the Annual Conference on the legal ground of its want of jurisdiction. But, secondly, waiving this objection, it does seem that there is manifest impropriety in an Annual Conference resolving to do or refraining from doing anything already binding on its members. Such resolution is a tacit acknowledgment of guilt, even when it is not confessed in the preamble, which oftener than otherwise it is.

Now I submit, if law has been violated, that the legal steps be taken; if not, that nothing be said. It is an easy matter to raise committees, and the tendency is in the direction of an increase of the number. It is thought by some that the proper thing for all ecclesiastical bodies to do is to endorse every good thing and denounce its contrary; and to carry out that policy requires a multiplication of committees. If this tendency is not corrected, we can not conjecture to what extent the absurdity will grow. Why not add to the burdensome number of committees one on "Woman Suffrage," another on "Whitecapism," and yet another on "Mob Law," and to complete the list, one on each one of the "Ten Commandments." We ought to take it for granted that some things [illegible] settled, and among these are to be from alcoholic stimulants. I seriously doubt the propriety of raising a committee to consider these questions, for first, there is no diversity of opinion among Christian people as to the obligation to keep the Lord's Day holy and to abstain from the use of alcoholic drinks; and hence, secondly, resolve to do what we are obligated to do tends to weaken the obligation rather than strengthen it. It is as God's authority were insufficient without being backed up by church authority. If it be said that an Annual Conference may state by resolution what constitutes a breach of the law of the Sabbath, I reply: Yes; but the construction of the law of the Sabbath can not arbitrarily be imposed upon those who dissent from that interpretation. We may suppose that a man who has sense enough and piety enough to be a Methodist preacher may be trusted to explain and apply the law. If not, Conference resolutions will not remedy the defect.

In the last place, the way these resolutions are hurried through on the last day of the session of the Conference, when the members are impatient to adjourn, justifies refusal to be bound by them. It frequently happens that a half dozen reports are to be read and acted on during the four hours of the closing session of the Conference before reading of the appointments. All is confusion and hurry. Calm, quiet deliberation is impossible under such circumstances, and hence many things get through on what is said to be a majority vote, consisting, it may be, of not more than twenty votes out of a total membership of one hundred and twenty-five; yet it is true that the measure was passed by a majority of those who chose to vote. Sometimes we vote to adopt a paper because of something in it we like, while, at the same time, there are things we do not approve, but will vote for rather than fail to get Conference indorsement of the part we do approve. It is strictly true that any member of the Conference has the right to make a motion to amend any paper before it is submitted to vote of the Conference; but practically he is prevented from exercising his rights by the surrounding circumstances. Whether right or wrong, these things weaken Conference resolutions.

Cullings from Culpepper.

This great revivalist has just held a meeting of two weeks or more in Jackson, Miss. It was my privilege to listen to him a few times and to hear much about him. He has stirred the town more deeply than anyone has done for years. For he is filled with the Spirit, intensely earnest, deeply pathetic; delineates character admirably and relates incidents so really that you seem transported to the scene. Withal there is a ready flow of chaste and sparkling wit. At times he is fearfully plain against the most commonly prevailing sins in section. None of your far-off preaching—"giving it to the Jews" etc. He often comes as close home as Nathan did to David. In thus faithfully acting for the living present he reminded some of us of the old brother who could never preach without hanging his followers to the "fords of Jordan." Start where he would, he was sure to reach that favorite "Sunday resort." So with Bro. Culpepper. Whether his text were from the Mosaic Law, the Songs of Solomon, or the teaching of Jesus, he was sure to find some route of approach and point of attack against dancing, card playing, theaters and whisky. This quartette of soul-destroying vices received something like their due in direct denunciation. As to dancing, he unearthed the loathsome worm that crawls below where once it flaunted in the gay sunshine. He gave the opinion of many widely travelled and observant men who have taken pains to inquire (Moody among the rest) to the effect that nine-tenths of all the fallen women on either side the Atlantic owe their downfall to the ball-room and the theatre. A like proportion of gamblers start in the path taught by fair hands of thoughtless young women. The thought was suggested (and it has Scripture warrant) that the idolatries of Israel were due to lack of knowledge of God, confidence in Jehovah, but to the fascinating influence of Baal worship, which lascivious dances were a prominent and engaging part. He showed so plainly that dancing is delightful except as it panders to passions that need constant restraint, that those who engage in this choice instrument of demoralization may be winced.

God honored his faithful servant. The crowds increased to the last. About one hundred and fifty joined the churches, and much lasting good was accomplished. Among other things, the organization of a [illegible] C. T. U. We venture to predict the banishment of liquor saloons

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON.—June 25, 1893.

PREPARED BY REV. A. F. WATKINS.

The Quarterly Review.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths." (Prov. iii, 6.)

CENTRAL THOUGHT.—Wisdom.

HOME READINGS.

Sunday (June 18)—Afflictions Sanctified. (Job i, 7-27.)

Monday—Confession and Restoration. (Job xlii, 1-10.)

Tuesday—Wisdom's Warning. (Prov. i, 20-33.)

Wednesday—The Value of Wisdom. (Prov. iii, 11-24.)

Thursday—Against Intemperance. (Prov. xxiii, 29-35.)

Friday—Reverence and Fidelity. (Eccl. v, 1-7.)

Saturday—The Creator Remembered. (Eccl. xii, 1-7.)

INTRODUCTORY.

The books containing the lessons for the quarter are Job, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and Malachi.

TIME.—The chronology of the lessons is uncertain, and the reader is referred for probable conclusions to the different lessons. If, as some suppose, the Book of Job is the oldest book in the Bible, and, as is generally believed, the Book of Malachi is the latest, then the time covered by the lessons is the entire period of revelation as found in the Old Testament—many thousand years.

PLACES.—It would be hard to find a series of lessons in which the question of locality would be of so little interest. Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and Malachi were probably written at Jerusalem, and Job in the northern part of the Arabian desert; but such is the character of the subjects treated that local interests are of but little importance.

PERSONS.—Apart from the questions regarding the authorship of the books—a question, by the way, that involves all four of the books—the personal element in the quarter's lessons is of but little interest, except in the case of the patriarch, Job, the central character of the book which bears his name. All four of the books belong to what is called the "Wisdom literature" of the Bible.

Christian Education in Louisiana.—No. 2.

DISTRICT HIGH SCHOOLS.

One serious drawback to thorough educational system and success in the South is found in a certain class of "colleges." Such institutions, purporting to be colleges, celebrating what is called commencement day, delivering what claim to be diplomas, and awarding the degrees of A. B., B. S., and even A. M., with an occasional D. D. thrown in, have often foisted on an unsuspecting public classes of untrained young men full of the idea that they were educated. Thus a great injustice is done to the young men themselves, as well as to the public, for many of them, in the absence of such institutions, would have obtained a thorough high-school training, and some of them a thorough college education. Some young men thus afflicted with an A. M. have been known, through wise advice, to attend college subsequently, when they found themselves unable to read the simplest Greek, and barely able to enter the freshman class.

On the other hand, a great deal of good has been done by schools like that of the Webb Brothers, of Tennessee—schools which, instead of attempting what they are not prepared to do, and hence failing to do what they really ought, only propose and simply do thorough preparatory work. Such institutions as this will supply Louisiana's greatest educational need. Public and individual enterprise have so far failed to meet this pressing want. Hence the church is needed in this department of education, and also needs the results of it. Especially is this true of Southern Louisiana, which God is surely opening to the efforts of our Methodism, and where convents and parochial schools will, if left without competition, perpetuate the dominion of Romanism. In this great southern half of Louisiana, from New Orleans to Texas, and from Alexandria to the Gulf, we have not a single school of any kind. Our greatest need here, next to the preaching of the pure gospel, is a system of thorough schools which will prepare the boys and girls of the State for an intelligent enjoyment of life, and give them besides such a taste of learning as will awaken a thirst for knowledge that will only be satisfied by high and thorough culture. Each of our districts ought to have such a school conveniently located, well conducted, and conscientiously patronized, and we will have not only feeders to our Conference college, but institutions in themselves valuable to the State and Church for their own training work. Let Louisiana Methodists then build these high schools all over the State, and thoroughly equip their Centenary College to carry on the work, even though it require a large outlay of means, for parsimony in such vital matters is nothing short of criminal. Woman's Work.

Home affairs hindering our active district secretary, Mrs. J. S. Parker, she has just written: "I can report some degree of progress, with prospects for still greater in the near future. I organized at Lumberton a few days ago an auxiliary of ten members from whom I expect much. A noble band of ladies, cultured and intelligent, and anxious to do something in the vineyard of the Lord. We have a few auxiliaries in the district who are wide awake, and doing fine work. At Bay St. Louis they have established a mission at the Canning Factory, which, no doubt, will accomplish much. Our presiding elder, Bro. Partridge, is in full sympathy with our work, and from his hearty co-operation I look for an advance movement all over the district. I rejoice to state that which will be of interest to all my sister workers. We have in the Seashore district a consecrated woman who will in a short time offer herself to the Woman's Board for work in the foreign field.

"Later—A note just received from Bro. Partridge brings the glad intelligence that during the District Conference, just held at Pearlington, thanks to his co-operation, a Woman's Missionary Society was organized. He gave us a part of an afternoon. Dear, good man! I may well be hopeful with such help. If all our presiding elders were so interested in our work, how it would prosper!"

All will be pleased to know that Miss Bettie Hughes, Shanghai, China, is in excellent health. Dr. Lambuth said, at the convention of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, at St. Louis, that missionaries to China, with ordinary prudence and attention to advice, could withstand climatic influence, and with five years' experience most efficient work could be done.

How much have we observed the following is plan of work: "That we do all in our power to discourage Sunday travel by members of the Woman's Missionary Society, and to encourage a holy observance of the Sabbath;" and in finance: "That we will use no indirect methods of raising our funds, but that our offerings shall be the fruits of our prayers and self-denying efforts."

"Louisiana Epworth League Union."

An effort is being made to bring together the organized Epworth Leagues of this city in such a way as to promote or organize a "Union Epworth League," and therein embrace each and all workers and utilize what we have of energy, devotion and zeal for the spreading, strengthening and enlarging of our Christian activities.

We wish the combined strength of our church throughout the State to put her shoulder to the wheel and help us to climb on Pisgah's top and possess (I do not say, view the Promised Land, for we want to take the Promised Land) the land of promise, and possess it for God and Christ. In order to success we need much information, more encouragement (the most finances), and all prayers of every Christian everywhere. We also need to know who is willing to stand on the Lord's side? Who will take hold and help their pastor organize at their church, if he already has not? And who will help us to work and pray until we are strong enough to hold our own State conventions, support our church organ, run one of our own if need be, canvass our State for openings for mission work, enter all open doors and push forward the cause of Zion until every soul in city, town, hamlet, village or county shall have and hear the gospel; until bar rooms shall be demolished, and missions for the spreading of Christ's kingdom established on their ruins; until our society young people shall know the need of the poor for the gospel, and until our covetousness shall release her hold on our hearts and we be wholly the Lord's, and the State the acknowledged throne of his Christ? Who will help us, who? Let us hear.

SIDES OF THE SAME PRISM.—That love and faith and obedience are but sides of the same prism, will not be questioned by those who observe how easily each can be stated in terms of the other, and also how easily each can be tested by the others. Try it. It is sometimes especially helpful to those who are puzzled about faith, finding it somewhat mysterious, to be told that the truest form of faith in God is just the doing of his will in whatever reveals itself to be the duty of the hour. For no one can thus perform his bidding without the most real and practical sort of faith in him. And that the keeping of the commandments is the primary proof of love, everybody knows, or ought to know. Let these three—love, faith and obedience—which are one, never be disassociated in theory or thought. They can not be in practice.—Zion's Herald.

TO A YOUNG MINISTER.—"Do you not know, young man," said an aged minister, in giving advice to a younger brother, "that from every town, and every village, and every little hamlet in England, there is a road to London?" "Yes," was the reply. "So," continued the venerable man, "from every text in Scripture, there is a road to the metropolis of Scripture, that is, Christ. And your business is, when you get a text, to say, 'Now, what is the road to Christ?' and then preach a sermon running along the road to the great metropolis, Christ."

Happy indeed would it be, if every minister, old and young, occupying the pulpit, would lead his hearers to the metropolis, Christ, in every sermon. —Christian Standard.

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. Notice to Patrons.

The publisher of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Rev. D. L. Mitchel, having retired from his contract with the undersigned, giving only a few days' notice, instead of three months, as the terms of the contract require, there may result some delay in the publication of our next issue. Arrangements have been partially made, and it is hoped that the paper will appear under a new management some time during next week. Every effort will be made to prevent loss to the patrons of the paper, and a vigorous canvass will be undertaken immediately to place this great interest of the church on a safe and healthy financial basis.

The want of money, remote situation of members of the Committee representing the various Conferences, etc., have prevented that free conference concerning ways and means which was desirable, and at the same time has precipitated action which was unavoidable upon the few members on the ground, and upon whom the burden of the failure for this and other reasons falls with peculiar force. In a time of crisis we will endeavor to do what can be done without the assumption of unnecessary or the avoidance of necessary responsibility, looking to our brethren and to the public for that hearty endorsement and co-operation which those public servants have a right to expect who sacrifice themselves and their means for the public good.

J. M. BEARD,
President of the Committee.

The following telegram was received from Rev. N. B. Harmon:

Long Beach, Miss., June 20.

At 12:30 to-day Rev. Benjamin Jones, oldest member of Mississippi Conference, sweetly fell on sleep.

BRIEFS.

One of the best qualifications for preaching is a heart full of the love of Christ and a desire to do something for the good of somebody. Work done under such inspiration will be effective.

We believe the Interior is right in suggesting that temperance people go to holding temperance meetings again. These meetings have apparently died out. They ought to be revived. They would be the strongest ally to the cause of prohibition. Earnest enthusiasm on this line will quicken the step of the prohibition army and fire it with new zeal.

We learn that many pastors last year failed to report the ten per cent. of Children's Day collection to the General Sunday-school Committee at Nashville, and turned the entire collection over to the Conference Sunday-school Board. This ought not to be done. The law is plain on this point, and pastors should carry it out. The law is found in paragraph 245 of the Discipline.

Citizen—Christian.

There has been a great loss of power to mould a true Christian citizenship, occasioned by the fact that too often the terms "Christian" and "citizen" have been separated. The Christian and the citizen have been considered apart, and as occupying different spheres and operating on entirely different lines. The word has been: "Religion is religion," "business is business," "politics is politics." There is need of one dominating principle to govern life. If we have a right conception of religion, it is the only thing which supplies the true governing principle. As religion pertains to life in all its phases, and as it supplies motives to right living which, when carried out, prodnce the best characters and the best lives, its principles should govern everywhere and its precepts be practiced in every walk of life. If this is not so in business relations, if it is not so in civil and political circles, there is manifested a defect which is fatal to Christian character. The Christian can not lay aside his religion and retain it at the same time. The Christian citizen, whether in office or out of office, must maintain his religion or be counted disloyal to its principles. The Christian in his official relations as an officer of civil government can not ignore the law of Christian morals in any attitude in which he may be placed. As to the law of God he is not two persons, but one person, and is obliged to keep that law both in his individual and official capacity. His official position does not exempt him from the least duty of a Christian life. It does not excuse him before the bar of the Christian public, nor will it avail to excuse him at the bar of God. The enlightened Christian conscience of to-day demands Christian acts from every Christian holding official position. The position itself is a point of vantage whence an immense influence for good may go forth. To neglect such an opportunity is to prove disloyal to principle, and that destroys Christian character. "Ye can not serve God and mammon." "He that is not with me is against me."

Capt. Pharr on Centenary College.

I have just returned from Centenary College. The trustees of that college have decided to make tuition free. For each and every scholar that enters the college there will be a charge of thirty dollars for admission, and a charge of five dollars for incidentals, making the very small sum of thirty-five dollars for the entire college year. It is proposed that the admission and incidental fee for young preachers can be paid from the Conference collections for education.

In some parts of this State the collection has been wholly neglected, and the amounts collected from other parts have been divided between Centenary and Mansfield, consequently the amount for Centenary has been small and insufficient for this purpose; hence it behooves the preachers to pay more attention to this collection. Now, the income from the students will be reduced just one-half by abolishing tuition charges.

Will not each preacher in the Louisiana Conference feel that it his personal duty to see that this collection is raised, so that there will be a fund each year sufficient for the education of young men for the ministry of Christ, and to provide his own sons with an education.

It is to be hoped that each minister will pray over this matter, work for this cause, and at the end of their pastoral year come up to Conference with a full and overflowing fund for the cause. We hope that they will use all of their influence to turn students to this college, where they will find the standard of education as high, the charges as low as any good school, and the location for health better than any of the State, being in high pine lands. The moral and social influence second to none in the State.

Taking all of its advantages into consideration, from an economic, hygienic, social, moral and religious standpoint, Centenary College has not its equal in our Conference, nor possibly in the South, for the education of young men. So strong is my faith in it, had I one thonsand boys to educate and was able to give them a good education, I would send nine hundred and ninety nine to Centenary, and possibly the other one I would send to Vanderbilt.

Now, will not all of the friends of religious education and training in Louisiana unite in one grand effort to indnce all of our young men who are able to leave home for an education to enter this grand old college, where they will have more good, moral influence and religious training, a higher curriculum, and less of that which is evil than any other place of education in the South that I know of?

JOHN N. PHARR.

Our Initial Term.

MR. EDITOR: You will have reports from others about the commencement at Millsaps College. It was universally thought to be a brilliant success, reflecting marked credit upon the faculty and student body. We have reason to rejoice that the first term of our college has met high expectation, and that the outlook for the future is most reassuring.

The faculty was increased by electing Mr. M. A. Muckinfuss to the chair of natural science. He comes to us highly recommended for his scientific attainments and earnest Christian character. For two years he has been at Johns Hopkins University engaged in professional study. The president of the college and Executive Committee were also authorized to arrange for additional teaching force, if necessary, during the next term. It is quite probable that we shall need one or two tutors.

Dr. Luther Sexton, from the beginning an ardent and liberal friend of the college, having removed from the State, tendered his resignation, and the vacancy was happily filled by the selection of that noble Methodist layman, Mr. Peter James, of Yazoo City. We are fortunate in securing the counsel of so intelligent and earnest a friend of the higher Christian education.

The indications now are that the attendance next term will be greatly increased. A very large proportion of the students will return, and others have already applied for admission and accommodation. With a united purpose and policy, earnestly adhered to for a few years, we will have established on a firm and enduring basis one of the grandest institutions of its character and grade in all the land.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

Jackson, Miss., June 15.

A crevasse occurred last week just below the corporate limits of Baton Rouge. It was quite alarming at first, but by timely diligence and skillful execution it was closed before much damage was done. There is now a tremendous strain upon all levees below the mouth of Red river, and the situation demands and, we believe, commands the most careful vigilance. The people on both sides of the river are fully alive to the dangers of the situation and will do all in human power to avert them.

I count this thing to be grandly true.
That a noble deed is a step toward God,
Lifting the soul from this common clod
To a purer air and a broader view.

Millsaps College Commencement.

Fulfilling the behest of the Mississippi Conference, it was my privilege to attend the first commencement of Millsaps College. The college is situated on an eminence north of the city, and a ride of a mile and a half from Bishop Galloway's residence, in his sumptuous carriage, brought us to a point where its stately proportions emerged into full view, when involuntarily there arose to my lips: "Beautiful for situation, the joy of all Mississippi!" Around the campus, and in full view, are the Insane Asylum, the Institution for the Blind and the Baptist College, and in the distance the State Prison—all majestic piles, and all either new or of such tidy appearance as to create the impression of being so. In front are seen the frequent trains of the I. C. railroad, and in the south the numerous smoke stacks of enterprising industries in the State's capital, and the mind unconsciously fills with the sense of the thrifty, vigorous life which surrounds and lays tribute upon yon. No Sleepy Hollow sensations linger here. The ample grounds spread out in well-kept declivities from the college, the spaces between original forest trees being planted where needful for shade or beauty with a younger growth. South of the college, on a beautiful roadway, is the elegant home of President Murrah, and still further on are the large cottages for the students. Your readers have been furnished with a wood cut of the college building, and are sufficiently familiar with its imposing exterior. The interior is a constant surprise. Of course, the walls and floors and ceiling are without stain, for they are new, and a faithful janitor keeps them in order; but the rooms are spacious, well-lighted, ventilated and warmed, and in number far exceed the expectation created by the first impression of the finely proportioned building. The skill and taste of the architect needs no better statement than this. The first view of Niagara and St. Paul's Cathedral makes the same impression. Five hundred students can easily be accommodated here, and yet there are halls and halls, and stairways and stairways, broad and long, until you almost suspect a waste of space, but none too many or too broad for the large and nnmerous classes which are expected some day to throng them passing and repassing to and from recitations. The president's office is to the right of the entrance, and next to it is the library and trnstees' room, in which already quite an extensive library has been carefnlly arranged.

The faculty, with the courtly, well-poised Rev. Dr. W. B. Murrah at their head, are all young—not boyish—but in the flush and vigor of manly prime, and with one exception are all sons of Southern Methodist itinerants. Their tranquil ease and self-possession, which show them familiar with the society both of books and men, and their energy, which suggests a purpose and acquaintance with affairs, inspire in you a confidence in their ability to train your boys for any walk in life to which their ambition or taste calls them.

This in part explains the phenomenal matriculation of 149 pupils in this year of great financial stringency. There is a reasonable expectation of 250 students for another year. The class work has given fine satisfaction, and the discipline has been satisfactory. Early in the session some disorder arose, bnt those participating in it were promptly sent home, and there has been no subsequent trouble.

In spite of the hot weather, general poverty and many protracted meetings, there was a large attendance of preachers from both Conferences—just how many I was not able to ascertain, but more than could well be accommodated upon the spacious platform of the college chapel. This room on the northern side of the building, and to left of the principal entrance, was free from sunshine and delightfully cool, though packed in every part. From the platform through each open window one could get a view of landscapes as picturesque as ever delighted the eye or employed the brush of Claude or Turner, and now and then it was impossible to deny one's self the luxury of such a diversion.

As was expected, there was no gradnates, there being this year no senior class and but one student in the jnnior course. The declamation was fully up to the average of under-graduates anywhere I have been, and the original speeches did credit to both the boys and their tutors. The medals awarded were sharply contested, and in two cases were won by fractions of a mark. Mr. H. S. Stevens, of Augusta, Miss., carried off two medals—one for being the best debater and the other for highest scholarship. Mr. C. N. Smiley, of Meridian, took the prize for oratory; Rev. J. W. Tinnin, of Pocahontas circnit, the prize for best declamation and best public reading of the hymn book and Bible, and W. F. Anderson, of Flora, Miss., for best scholarship in preparatory department.

It was my misfortune to miss the commencement sermon by Rev. Dr. S. A. Steele, of McKendree Church, Nashville, Tenn. Men who were competent to form an opinion described it in superlative terms, its thought bracing as an Alpine blast, its composition lucid, and its elocution sweet and clear as a chime of silver bells. The beauty and chivalry of the State were there to hear it, and heard it with delight.

The dedication services on Tuesday were opened with prayer by Dr. T. J. Newell, of Grenada. I would gladly walk a mile and a half in an August meridian snn to hear another such. Then came the address of Bishop C. B. Galloway, to whose sagacious prevision, tireless zeal, and circumspect management, as much as to the munificence of Major Millsaps, the college is indebted for its being. The Bishop was at his best, his thought sturdy, well adjusted, fresh, bright as an oriental scimitar and just as sharp, sometimes flashing with humor and sometimes smiting like the cyclone. He knows how to organize his sentences for beauty and for power, and he knows how to marshal his thoughts for consummate results. Of his effort all agree there was inspiration in it and by it, and only one thing to regret—it was too short.

Rev. Dr. E. E. Hoss, editor of Christian Advocate, of Nashville, Tenn., followed in a speech written and read; but nobody yawned. It, too, was short—too short. He talked of heredity, environment, and volition, and knew the value of the terms and the ideas; was witty and wise, apologetic and denunciatory, and carried his audience on a high plane of thought to the noble purpose of realizing the divine ideal of human life. Following this was the dedication ode by Rev. W. R. Sims, D. D., of the University of Mississippi, which fully met the expectations of the audience and was worthy of the poet-professor, of whom all Mississippi Methodists are proud. I hope you may have the privilege of publishing this charming production.

I was not present at the trustees' meeting, but I learned that as soon as $2,500 could be collected out of a subscription list of $14,000, or otherwise, the college would be in possession of a cash endowment of $100,000.

The day of fond anticipation and manifold preparations—a in some respects the augury fate for Millsaps—has come a gone. It proved to be the of blissful realization and f omen, and has fully vindicat the necessity and expediency its being, and its ability and right to live. Millsaps Colle lives—a full, free, independe life—and is in training for career of heroic usefulness.

The publisher, on a recent visit to Meridian, was hospitably entertained by Bro. B. F. Lewis, the enterprising pastor of East End Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Bro. Lewis has succeeded in finishing the East End Church, seating same with beautiful pews from Enoch's Factory at Jackson, Miss., and with these seats there is a story which shows the liberality of the supporters of Bro. Lewis. Before this edifice was completed, the Methodists of Meridian had started to build the Fourth Methodist Church at South Side, not far from the depot. They lacked about $400 to secure the contract for lumber and work. When the noble brethren of East End Church learned that the South Side project was likely to fall through for lack of said $400, they generously urged Bro. Lewis to take the $450, that had been raised by them to purchase the seats for East End Church, and use same for the South Side Church, saying that they would do without seats and sit on boards or boxes. But we are glad to say that this generous offer was declined, and the seats for East End Church are bought and paid for, and last Sunday Bro. Lewis organized a Sunday-school in the South Side Church building and has a regular appointment in same every Sunday afternoon. The lot for this church was given by a big-hearted Methodist, John A. Lewis. This church will be completed in the next two or three weeks, painted and ceiled.

Methodism in Meridian is soon to receive another accession of churches. It is already projected to build a church at Poplar Springs, about two miles north of the centre of Meridian. Bro. Hopper has a regular appointment at this place now. Bro. C. F. Evans, at Central Church, has a membership of 600, many of whom are actively engaged in Christian work. Bro. Evans resides in an elegant home, handsomely furnished, with horse and surrey at his command. Bro. J. C. Cavett, superintendent of the Sunday-school of the Central Methodist Church, it is said, has the largest and best Sunday-school in the State of Mississippi. For years this school has been officered and taught by superior talent. Bro. Cavett stated that he thought the success of the school was due to his corps of efficient, consecrated teachers. He has two large infant classes and one class composed of five Chinese.

Bro. Cavett is a wide-awake, earnest, aggressive, Christian worker. He has promised to give the ADVOCATE his experience as a Sunday-school superintendent.

Bro. Hopper's charge is a large one; his membership is over 200, scattered for miles around his church. Many of them are railroad employees, who find it very difficult to attend with regularity to their religious duties. Bro. Duncan Harmon, known to many of our readers as a Sunday-school boy taught in Felicity Street Sunday-school, of this city, is superintendent of West End Meridian Sunday-school, president of the Board of Stewards, pastor's counsellor and the mainstay of this important Methodist Church. The pastor said to the writer: "Bro. Harmon is invaluable as my co-laborer."

The entire membership of Methodists in Meridian foots up over 1,200, among the leaders of which host is our old friend, Bro. L. P. Brown, who stands in the front rank of every good work, and at present is doing valiant service in endeavoring to defeat the whiskyites in obtaining signatures sufficient to open a saloon in Meridian. At present there is not a saloon or gambling den open in this enterprising city. Both white and black citizens of all grades seem to be of a superior type, and everyone appears sober and industrious.

Missionary Debt—Mississippi Conference.

SEASHORE DISTRICT.

Ocean Springs, J. M. Pugh, P. C.....$6

JACKSON DISTRICT.

Benton circuit, D. C. Langford, P. C $13

Bro. Pugh sends the $6 as the result of "our week of prayer and self-denial." "The amount is not large," he adds, "but I think the church was benefited by the religious exercises." No doubt of it! Ocean Springs had already contributed with measurable liberality last year towards paying the missionary debt.

Bro. Langford writes: "More to follow." God bless him for these and other words of cheer!

Bro. Towson writes me from Japan: "I saw Bro. Hawkins a day or so ago. He is well and happy and is doing a good work. I rejoice in your vigorous labors for the Master's cause and especially in your interest in missions."

A layman in Mississippi calls me a "wind-bag," and a preacher accuses me of "bull-ragging" the brethren!

Prohibition Victory.

We have just won a signal and gratifying victory for prohibition in this capital city. After a contest for ten days, and the most determined effort on both sides, the Board of Mayor and Aldermen has rejected a petition for license. This is one of the good results of the evangelistic meeting recently held here. If our victory is followed up, as I hope it may be, we will soon have a dry city. The tide has set that way. CHAS B. GALLOWAY.

Rescue Mission.

A mission, with the objects of preaching the gospel to the most neglected classes of this great city, and of reclaiming some of the fallen women in a most abandoned neighborhood, has recently been set on foot.

Every night the meeting is addressed by earnest and zealous workers in the cause of Christ; prayers for a plentiful outpouring of the Holy Spirit are offered, and the hearts of all are uplifted by the singing of suitable hyms.

The work is absolutely unsectarian, and is intended to remain so, while all professing converts will be invited to associate themselves with one or other of the churches. Abundant evidence has been given of good already accomplished; about sixty persons have confessed Christ publicly, and resolved to lead a new life, and many others are enquiring and anxious about their eternal interests.

It is earnestly hoped that all who have the Master's cause at heart will assist the mission. Subscriptions for rent and necessary expenses are urgently called for, and donations of bedding, clothing, groceries, books, etc., will be thankfully received.

Messrs. Atwood Violett and Frederick Heroy have been kind enough to receive subscription books on behalf of the mission.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

The announcement in last week's paper of the death of our much-honored "father in Israel," Rev. Joseph H. Brooks, though not unexpected, filled our hearts with inexpressible grief. The writer will ever cherish the memory of him who was his true friend and brother in the ministry for thirty-two years, and his faithful presiding elder five years. To him I shall always be indebted for wholesome example and wise counsels that have been helpful in my ministerial and religious life. Thousands will join me in invoking the consolations of divine grace upon Sister Brooks and the children and grandchildren of our departed and glorified fellow-laborer in the Lord.

Since Conference thirty-five pastoral charges have been visited by the colporter and Sunday-school agent. District Conferences, quarterly meetings, Children's Days and other occasions have been attended in towns and in rural regions. Sermons and talks have been delivered, and books and papers circulated that will doubtless produce good fruit.

Notwithstanding the so-called "hard times," more books have been disposed of than have been during the corresponding period of any previous year since we have been engaged in this work.

Sunday, June 4, was a red-letter day for Hashuqua, Mashulaville circuit. It was Children's Day, and this writer had the pleasure of being present and participating largely in the exercises. Congregations were large, collection good, dinner bountiful and everybody well pleased. Rev. R. I. Allen, P. C., is a diligent workman, and fruits of his labors are already manifested. He knows how to be courteous and helpful to a fellow-laborer also. God bless him and his people, who were so kind to the visitor.

Saturday and Sunday, June 10 and 11, were spent pleasantly and we hope profitably at Cookesville, Shuqualak circuit. It was quarterly meeting with Rev. T. C. Wier, P. E., and Rev. A. T. Buck, P. C., and a few officials present. Rev. N. M. Clarke, of the Mississippi Conference, united with us one day. We had preaching, Sunday-school, Children's Day services, etc. Bro. Wier said that "good seed was sown." We hope that it fell on good ground, and that a good harvest will be reaped.

More Children's Day programs have been sent out than in any former year. We have reason to expect larger results than ever before. Brethren, send us your reports and let us hear from this part of the field work as soon as possible. G. W. BACHMAN.

Rev. B. Jones.

Rev. Benjamin Jones, superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, was stricken here last Wednesday, June 7, with a very dangerous and painful trouble. His strong constitution enabled him to bear up under a very painful surgical operation, and for a number of days hopes of his final recovery were entertained. However, in the last two days more discouraging symptoms have developed, and it now seems this grand, useful life is drawing to a close.

The people of this place of every denomination love him dearly, and prayers are ascending in his behalf from every Christian home. Quietly, peacefully he lies awaiting the will of his Master. He said to me this evening: "The doctors tell me my life-work is about over, but I have a good constitution, and the prayers of my brethren, and the providence of God over me, and I may be spared to work several years longer." Work! In one word he gave the secret of his successful ministry. Let the prayers of his brethren ascend in his behalf.

To the Auxiliaries of the Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society:

The recent fire at Newton necessitated a change of the time and place of our annual meeting. An invitation to hold the meeting at Canton has been accepted, and the time fixed for June 30 to July 3.

The corresponding secretary has issued circular letters stating those facts to each auxiliary, and we sincerely hope each will make an effort to send a representative, and that each delegate will come to Canton praying for God's blessing upon our meeting, and for the outpouring of his Spirit upon the workers.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

Woman at the World's Fair.

In a way woman has been glorified at the Woman's Congress of the World's Fair which has just been brought to a close, very much to her satisfaction and after a manner that would not have been possible at our previous exhibition—the Centennial of 1876. And yet with all that has been done "the woman problem," as it is called, is not settled. That is to say it might be and really is to a large extent settled by nature; but the trouble is, it is not settled in the way some women think it ought to be settled.

Rightly speaking, the woman question is involved in the single issue, What shall be her career—what avenues shall be opened to her, and what one shall she tread? This nature largely settles. At invention and creation she is not very successful: she has never composed a sonata, a symphony, an oratorio, or an opera; in the province of church music, even, she is an unknown quantity; and yet she has had possession of the harpsichord and piano ever since the world outgrew the Gregorian chant. She does not seem to be adapted to the career of the law, to the pulpit nor to surgery. She never was an architect, while in Art, to which she is devoted, Fame gives her a Thompson, a Bonheur, a Hosmer, and fills up the rest with the names of men.

These, with jury trials, mining, railroading, banking, commerce and milling seem outside her province; even design and decoration are mostly in the hands of men. She has won triumphs in the field of literature, but the names are few of those having a place in the front rank, and here she shines mostly as a creator of fiction. Rare some of her best work is done. As a teacher, missionary and in carrying on the work in the church, she has, when well organized and directed, rendered most conspicuous service.

But her crown of glory is and must always be motherhood. In the province of the family as a home-maker and a home-keeper, as a builder up of character within the sacred province of the home—here is where her virtues are radiant. She lays her finger upon the sleeping boy and girl and they grow up into noble manhood and womanhood which makes character and determines the destiny of nations. Having assumed these offices and filled them so nobly, she may be content to leave the others alone, for as a general rule it holds that the truest and highest province of women, as a class, must be found in those duties which they can fulfill better than men—not in those which men can fulfill and have discharged better than they.—Christian at Work.

No Longer a Luminous Nebulosity.

Such women as Lucy Stone, though separated as far as the lakes from the gulf, are potent factors in shaping the convictions and aspirations of their sex. But focused at one point, they are batteries charged by the Corliss dynamos and borne back to their respective locations with power before undreamed of, to lead, push, and drive on the work which they have undertaken.

That the World's Woman's Congress, the Woman's Building, the Woman's Directory, and the Exposition of Woman's Work shall fertilize the dormant aspirations of the sex, is evident to the most thoughtless. Whatever may have been their personal views as to woman's sphere and duty, they have been led to estimate future possibilities by present achievements. The innate conviction that one has the right to do what one can do well, illuminated by the concrete examples mustered in Chicago, must expand their conception of sphere and duty and destiny. Something has happened to them. They have pipped the shell of provincialism, and stepped out into a wonderland. The shell was good enough once. It is broken. It can neither confine nor shelter them again. They go back to their homes different beings. Not worse, better. Not narrow, wide-visioned. They have seen the world's womanhood in council. Of it themselves a part. No longer Coloradan, Indianian; nor yet American or German; they are cosmopolitan. The sweep of their thought has mankind for its diameter.

Is any so blind that he can not see what this means? Even stolid Germans will feel that menial toil belongs rather to the dogs than to the women who are harnessed with them; and the movement that has already reached the gymnasia and universities of the Fatherland will borrow politics from England, and date its inspiration at the Columbian Exposition.

The "dual-unit" is no longer only a concept of the rapt seer of Boston University. It has materialized in every civilized nation of the earth. It has taken consistency and form at Chicago, and goes thence to lift a new standard in all the capitals of the world.—Western Christian Advocate.

"Home, Sweet Home."

Of all the songs we sing the loveliest is "Home, Sweet Home," and how true is the saying that the two sweetest words in our language are "Home and Heaven." Yes, God meant that there should be a very close link between the two, and that is why there is so much in the Bible about family life. Yet how is it that so many young people seem to be happier anywhere than at home? There must be something wrong, and when there is anything wrong in the home life the mother must ask herself where she has been making a mistake. Have the children learn that home is a place where there are sour looks, harsh words, and continual fault-finding; a place from which their friends are banished; where innocent merriment is silenced, and their gathered treasures condemned as rubbish and litter. If so, can you wonder that they prefer the liberty of the streets? But let the children learn that home is a place where peace dwells; where mutual rights are respected and justice is done to all, and it will have an enduring attraction for them.

The corner-stone on which true home happiness rests is religion. The home must be consecrated by family prayer. Wherever Abraham pitched his tent there he built an altar. Family prayer is the strongest cement with which you can bind your home together; it raises it from a mere lodging-place, where we eat and sleep, to a sacred spot around which gather the holiest feelings of our hearts. Where God is thus honored, parents will be more readily obeyed, brothers and sisters will be more loving, and there will be harmony instead of discord.

Cherish courtesy in your own manner towards your children, and in that of child to child. Show them that the home is not a bear garden, but a place for gentle words and deeds. Teach the boys to wait on the girls, and the girls to accept their help with ready thanks. Be patient yourself with the children's noise and litter; it is better for your head to ache now than your heart by and by. Take an interest in their games and pursuits, guiding them in the choice of those that are good and elevating. Encourage the boys in handicrafts, not scolding them for making a mess, but teaching them to clear it away themselves.

Do not let your home be all self-centered; let the light of your household joys fall on other homes less happy. Encourage your children in acts of voluntary self-denial. Mark your family anniversaries by some deed of kindness to others.

Try this plan, and you will find that when the children are scattered along life's many ways the memory of the old home will be a safeguard in temptation and a solace in trial, because it was a foreshadowing of that eternal home where "tears are wiped away," and where "naught that defileth enters in."—Mary Cochrane.

The Elder Sister.

Next to the mother, the first-born daughter in a family generally occupies the post of honor and responsibility. Of her the mother makes a companion. With her she shares the care and nurture of the younger children. To her she confides the responsibility of the household when she must be absent from it. She shares with this daughter many perplexities, anxieties, and plans, confided perhaps to no one else. She takes her into her counsels, and gladly avails herself of the aid this daughter can give better than anyone else in all the world. Separated by only a brief interval from the sports of childhood, she is at once companion and counselor for the junior members; she can sympathize readily with the little wants and the little griefs that fill the child's heart to overflowing, and show it how to compass its desires and forget its sorrows.

A short girlhood is usually the allotment of the eldest daughter, but this is made up to her in the long and pleasant companionship she has with her mother, in the sense she is compelled to have of her importance in the family, and in the unusual capacity she is obliged to develop and exercise. If she must stay out of school sometimes to help her mother, she has the consciousness that she is contributing to the building up of the family fortunes by saving outlays for hired help, or preventing overwork on the part of those dearest to her.

Let older sisters magnify their office. Great power for good is theirs. They can sustain the burdened hands of their mothers, cheer and soothe their hard-working fathers when the day's toil is over; they can be potent to restrain the feet of brothers from paths of vice, and guide the uncertain steps of childhood in ways that are pure.—New York Advocate.

GIVE WHAT COSTS.—The noble Psalmist of old said he would not give to God that which cost him nothing. The joy is in real self-sacrifice—to give what we love—to give what we value. I am very much afraid it is with some of us as I heard it was with a congregation—among a people who used to say Amen. The minister said in prayer: "Lord, we give thee our hearts," and the people said, "Amen." "Lord, we give thee our lives," and the people said, "Amen." "Lord, we give thee our money," but there was no Amen!—Ladies' Home Journal.

It is not good to speak evil of all whom we know bad: it is worse to judge evil of any who may prove good. To speak ill upon knowledge, shows a want of charity; to speak ill upon suspicion shows a want of honesty. I will not speak so bad as I know of many; I will not speak worse than I know of any. To know evil by others, and not speak it, is sometimes discretion: to speak evil by others, and not know it, is always dishonesty.—Warwick.

27 Per Cent. Stronger.

The amusing advertisement of a rival Baking Powder, claiming that "it is 27 per cent. stronger than any other," must refer to its smell (as it is a well known ammonia powder).

Dr. Price's
Cream Baking Powder

Is a pure cream of tartar powder, brought to the highest degree of strength and perfection.

Truly the ideal Baking Powder.

Its superiority over every other can be clearly shown by any fairly conducted competitive test, whether made in the laboratory or kitchen.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

WHY TOMMY DID NOT SPEAK HIS PIECE.

BY SYDNEY DAYRE.

"There was such a lot of people there—
And all the gaslights seemed to stare—
And—some one whispered: 'Hold up your head;'
And—'Don't be scared, dear,' somebody said.
And—all of 'em clapped when I went in—
And somebody said: 'Go on! Begin!'
And—I forgot every word I knew—
And—all of 'em laughed—Boo-oo-oo-oo."

In Japan.

DAI SAN UWAJIMA MARU.

Dai San Uwajima Maru is the name of a boat. It stands at Hiji, a little port on the southern side of the island of Kinshiu. Oita is the name of the Ken, or province; Bungo, the old name of the region. Xavier visited Bungo, and several hundred years ago a battle was there fought, in which the Christians, who composed one of the armies, were defeated. The defeat was followed by cruel persecution. It seems, however, that much of the evil that befell those early Roman Catholic Christians resulted from the effort to establish Christianity as the state religion.

Hiji is upon a little bay within a larger bay. Though there is an easy passage out, land climbing into mountains meets the eye in every direction. Shadow and clouds cover some of the mountain-tops and sides. On others the sunshine reveals pine, fern, and bald head. On an eminence in the village is a Shinto temple, with some smaller shrines attached. They are adding to the vessel's cargo twigs of bamboo in nice bundles. These will be used in making such things as bird cages and out-door screens.

Since this writing began the boat has turned and is moving towards Beppu, which was left at sunrise with the steam of 700 hot springs rising above it; but the direction changes again, as the sea becomes more open. The Kiushiu coast will be on the left until one more port is passed, after which the vessel will make for Shikoku Island, moving into the Bungo Nada a portion of the sea, which will probably be rough enough to cause writers to lay aside pencils, spread blankets, and lie down to prevent sea-sickness. The vessel reaching Shikoku, will coast along Ehime Province, of which Matsuyama is the capital, and there make for Kobe and Osaka, on the main island.

Beppu is five miles from Oita, where the Metsuyama district of the Japan Annual Conference has just closed its first regular session.

HENRY G. HAWKINS.

How Will Was Cured.

"I don't know what to do with my little boy," said Willie's mother, "He hasn't been well, and the doctor told me to take him to the seashore, and let him play all day in the sand. But how am I going to make him play, when he does not feel like it? He hides from merry children, and sits and mopes by himself."

"I know a prescription much better than your doctor's," said a strange lady sitting by.

"What is it?" asked Will's mother.

"Call him, and let me try it," said the stranger.

"Will! O Will! come here a minute, my son," called his mother.

Will got up slowly, leaving his bucket and spade in the sand. "They are just going to tease me about not playing," he grumbled to himself. "I wish everybody would let me alone."

But they didn't say a word to him about playing. "Will," said the strange lady, brightly, "if you are not too busy, I wish you would help me a little."

Will pricked up his ears. It had been a long time since he had been allowed to help anybody but himself.

"You see that little yellow cottage way off there?" asked the lady. "It is about a mile up the beach. There is a lame boy in that cottage, and I want to send him an orange; will you take it?"

"Yes, ma'am, certainly," said the small boy.

"And, Will," she continued, "if you can do anything to amuse or cheer him, it would be a good thing, you know; he can't get out of the house by himself, but he might with you to help him."

Will was done moping now, forever and a day. He forgot all about himself in doing things for lame Lucien. That strange lady's prescription worked wonders. If you ever feel dull, little readers, I advise you to try it.—The Sunbeam.

Cheer Up!

There is one thing that Satan does well; he is good at stating the discouraging side. He knows how to fish for obstacles, and every time brings up his net full. Do not let us help him in his work. If you have anything to say in prayer meeting that is disheartening, may you forget your speech. Tell us something on the bright side. Give us no sermons or newspaper articles that are depressing. We know all that before you start. Amid the greatest disheartenments there are hopeful things that may be said. Perhaps we can not always be cheerful, our own burdens may weigh us down; but the best cure for our own heartaches is trying to heal those of others. "The face we wear, the thoughts we speak, a heart may heal or break." Therefore, "be of good cheer."—Epworth Herald.

Politeness.

My young friends, do not be afraid of politeness. It will not hurt you. Politeness teaches how to obey gladly, fearlessly and openly. The truly polite child is a good son, a good daughter, for politeness teaches him the duty and respect he owes to his parents; he is a kind and grateful brother; his very willingness to help his sister makes her feel better and stronger. He is a true friend, for he scorns the unkind words that wound those who love him. Politeness and charity are twins—they make the true gentleman, the true gentlewoman, helpful, loving, unpretentious. The world would be better if the young boys and young girls, who are soon to be our man and women, would obey the watchword of true politeness, which is charity.—Selected.

"Well, how do you like going to school, Wendalline?" inquired her mother.

"The intellectual discipline pleases me very much, mama," replied the dear little Boston girl who had just returned home after her first day at school; "but the methods are somewhat crude and the teacher impresses me as one who has not wholly succeeded as yet in the struggle to overcome the disadvantages necessarily resulting from defective early education."

An Interesting Exercise.

"How many things come on the table that begin with A?"

The children thought a minute, and one responded, "Apples;" another, "Asparagus;" another, "Almonds."

"Is there nothing else we eat that begins with A?"

No answer.

"Well, look it up after dinner."

"What do we eat that begins with B?"

A simultaneous shout, "Beef," then "Bananas," and "Butter," "Beans," "Bread," followed in quick succession.

"Now I want you to make up lists of all the articles of food used by us, or any humans, except cannibals. You may hunt through the cook books, through the dictionary, through the botany, through the encyclopedias and books of travel. Put each list under its appropriate letter, and at the bottom of each list the number it aggregates. Then the aggregate of the whole. We shall then easily see on what the human race subsists. The one that gets the longest list is to have a prize."

Right after dinner the children made little blank books, leaving a page for each letter of the alphabet, and set to work on their quest. It couldn't be concluded in half a day or half a year, but it was decided that in three months they should compare notes, and see which one had made the largest aggregate.

The books were a curious study when they came in. In going over the lists a great many items were struck out; meat being one, though beef, mutton and pork were allowed to remain. Cake was struck from the list, and its components, wheat, eggs, sugar, butter, etc., allowed to remain. What was left when the revision was made represented the original staples used as food.

Of course, some of the pages, as K and Q, were not very well filled.

"I think C is a mean letter," said one of the boys, "it robs poor K of all nearly that belongs to him, and not content with that, filches from S what rightly belongs to him. Indeed, if C gave up all he has taken away from his neighbors, I don't know what he'd have left if H didn't come to help him out."

The children talked over their pursuits in the line of foods with their playmates, and several of them started books and lists, to which, as they read, they were continually adding.

If anyone thinks this exercise is not interesting, let them engage in it and see.—Christian Advocate.

Mastery of Details.

Thoroughness implies attention to details, neatness, and method. A young man who was shrewd and exacting, but whose business habits were careless and unmethodical, succeeded, by hard work and economy, in establishing a prosperous business, but failed and went into bankruptcy at the early age of thirty-five because of his carelessness in omitting to place a note for a large amount in his bills payable.

Hon. Josiah Quincy was at one time conversing with Daniel Webster upon the importance of doing even the smallest thing thoroughly and well, when the great man related an incident concerning a petty insurance case which was brought to him while a young lawyer in Portsmouth. The fee promised was only $20. Yet, to do his clients full justice, Webster found he must journey to Boston and consult the law library. This involved an expense above the amount of his fee, but after hesitating a little he decided to go to Boston and consult the authorities, let the cost be what it might. He gained the case.

Years after this Webster was in the City of New York. An important insurance case was to be tried that day, and one of the counsel had been suddenly prostrated by illness. Money was no object, and Webster was asked to name his terms and conduct the case.

"It is preposterous," said he, "to expect me to prepare a legal argument at a few hours' notice."

But when they insisted that he should look at the papers he consented. It was his old twenty-dollar case over again, and, having a remarkable memory, he had all the authorities in his mind, and won the suit. The court knew he had no time for preparation, and were astonished at the skill with which he baudled the case.

"So you see," said Webster, as he concluded, "I was handsomely paid both in fame and money for that journey to Boston." And the moral is that good work is rewarded in the end, though, to be sure, one's own self-approval should be enough.

Young Philosophers.

The funny things which the little folks say at bed-time would doubtless fill a very large volume, says Wide Awake. Here are three bedtime queries and remarks which excited much amusement in their respective households:

Little Richie wanted to omit his prayers the other evening when his room was quite cold. So his mama asked him:

"Don't you want to ask God to take care of you through the night?"

"Oh!" was the naive reply, "you don't catch God comin' round such a cold night as this."

Little Marion was told to include the petition, "and make me a good girl," in her evening prayers.

"Wh at," she cried, "an' set up all the crusts? Well, I guess not."

A little seven-year-older, whose philosophical mind was bent on allowing its little owner to stay up longer than usual, asked a question which could not be answered off-hand. It was this:

"Mama, what would we have been if we hadn't been anybody?"

A little six-year-old girl, whose favorite aunt had gone away the night before, came down to breakfast quiet and sober.

"Don't you feel well, my dear?" asked her mother with tender solicitude.

"I feel well, physically," was the suggestive reply.

It is hardly necessary to add that this careful line-drawer is a Miss Boston.

Let the love of your brethren be as a fire within you, consuming that selfishness that is so contrary to it and is so natural to men; let it set your thoughts on work to study how to do others good, let your love be an active love intense within you, and extending itself in doing good to the souls and bodies of your brethren as they need and you are able.—Leighton.

A teacher was explaining to a little girl how the trees developed their foliage in spring-time. "Ah, yes," said the wee miss, "I understand; they keep their summer clothes in their trunks."

Overheard in the nursery: "Don't lie on your back, Freddie; it will make you dream." "All right, mama. I'll lie on my edge."

An Obedient Child. Mother: "Now, never let me catch you at the jam again." Willie: "I—I—tried not to let you catch me this time."

MOORE—Mrs. EMMA L. MOORE, daughter of James and Catharine Miller, was born in Waterproof, Oct. 25, 1842, and died on the place where she was born and reared, May 20, 1893.

She gave her heart to God when scarcely ten years of age, and during most of her life was a firm, unwavering follower of Christ. One of the precious memories of the writer's life is that of her young face radiant with joy as she arose from her knees and claimed to be a child of God. She was ardently attached to her parents, and was uniformly obedient, and ever thoughtful for their comfort. Her father's death was the first sorrow of her life, and seemed to make her more tender in her love to her mother. To her sisters she was unselfish and affectionate, ever more ready to render kind offices than to receive them. Generous to the full amount of her ability, she aided the poor and sympathized unto any form of suffering. Though unobtrusive and retiring, exceedingly sensitive to ridicule, and ever anxious for the good opinion of others, the firmness of her Christian principles developed with her years, and she was courageous enough to avow them and defend religion in any company where they were assailed. Her heart was a rich store-house of love and affection, and to love and be loved the chief desire of her life.

On May, 9 1861, she was married to Dr. James Moore, to whom she was devotedly attached. There were born to them five children, of whom two, a son and daughter, are left. Her mother-love almost amounted to idolatry; her maximum of happiness consisted in their doings and sayings, and when suffering and sorrow came to them no mother could have been more solicitous and watchful. This happy home-life was all too short. Here the writer would pause and obliterate if it were possible the trying scenes dawning upon us. War, cruel and relentless, had invaded our home, and we were scattered as Autumn leaves. During these dark days my sister received an injury from which she never fully recovered, and many mile-stones on her onward pathway were marked with trials, pain and disappointment. Our dear mother, the stay and the comforter of our lives, left us in sorrow and tears and went up through the "shining portals" to eternal rest. One by one the dear ones went, and so after a lingering illness, clouded with delirium, our loved one fell on sleep. We can not claim for such triumph in death as would give consolation to her friends, nor fully solve the question whether the joys of the departed are most to be inferred from that triumph, or by the fruit of a living Christian faith. We read that a book of remembrance is written before the Lord for them that feared him and thought upon his ways, and they shall be his when he comes to make up his jewels. We trust that when the vision of our loved one failed on earth, it was but "turned away to gaze on other scenes more high;" that her sun will no more go down, neither shall her moon withdraw itself, but the Lord will be her light and the days of her mourning are ended.

SISTER.

JACKSON—Mrs. MARIE J. JACKSON was born on the home-place of her grandfather (Juan C. Harmon, a soldier of the Spanish army), at Washington, Adams company, Miss., Dec. 12, 1811; died near the same spot of her birth, Nov. 2, 1892, aged eighty years and eleven months. She was the daughter of John Forsyth, for many years sheriff of Adams company, and Mary Harmon. She was reared and educated in Natchez, and was a scholar of no mean attainments. She possessed a high order of intellect; was a French scholar, also an accomplished musician, owning at one time probably the only piano ever manufactured in Natchez. Mrs. Jackson was a great reader, and, possessing a wonderful memory, was familiar with the facts of history, the choicest gems of the poets, the best of fiction. She and her husband owned one of the finest and best-selected libraries in the State, which, with the old home, was destroyed by fire in 1879. Here she showed her heroism and Christian fortitude, bearing bravely this great loss.

At sixteen years of age she married Dempsey P. Jackson, of Kentucky; and a few years later moved from Natchez to "Sheriff's Retreat," where she lived for more than fifty years, a kind, good neighbor, ever ready to visit the sick. She was a faithful Methodist all of her life, drinking deeply of its profound truths while a Sunday-school scholar of Dr. Drake. She was charitable. No one ever applied to her in vain. She ever remembered the widow and the orphan. In all the relations of life she was a noble, good woman. "Her end was peace."

CHAS. W. CRISLER.

Utica, Miss.

RITCHEY—DRURY ETHEL RITCHEY was born near Utica, Miss., June 28, 1888; died April 26, 1893.

His was a young, sweet life fraught with much suffering. A sad accident brought him to an untimely end. While loved ones were engaged in the different home duties, his clothing caught fire when no one was near, and before the flames could be extinguished he was so badly burned that after two months of great suffering death gained the victory, and his innocent little soul passed from its earthly home to that house eternal in the skies.

Rest in place, gentle child, and may your father, mother and loved ones meet you with heaven's redeemed. CHAS. W. CRISLER.

PIERCE—SARAH EMMA STEEN was born in Rankin county, Miss., April 24, 1824; was happily married to Wiley P. Pierce, Aug. 8, 1844; joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Samuel Scott, at Sinai Church, Marvin circuit, where she lived a consecrated Christian until the day of her death, which occurred April 23, 1893.

Sister Pierce was a devoted wife, affectionate mother, and a true Christian. She was the mother of eight children; three of whom are still living—four died in infancy. "Aunt Sarah," as she was familiarly called, was one of the oldest members of Sinai Church and her worth to the church and community can not be estimated. She is not only sadly missed by her family, but by the church and community. Fidelity was a leading characteristic of her nature. Being true to God, she was true to her family, to neighbors and to friends. She reared her children by love. Such a life—so beautiful and well rounded—was a benediction to her household and community. She was a great friend to the preachers, and loved them for their work's sake.

Hers was not a life of profession, but of devotion to duty. As a neighbor she was thoughtful, considerate, and charitable. She walked in the path of the just. No wonder she was ready when the summons came!

Just before she died she called her youngest son, J. B. Pierce, with whom she was living, and said to him she would soon be with her husband, who preceded her to the land beyond in January, 1892. Thus ended the life of a good and true Christian woman. May her children and grandchildren follow her as she followed Christ. Her former pastor,

JAS. F. ROBINSON.

CRUM—WARREN CRUM was born in the year 1812; departed this life at his home in Wilkinson county, Miss., on April 15, 1893. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in the year 1850, and lived a noble Christian life until the day of his death.

No man or woman could truthfully say he was not a Christian. It was inspiring to talk with Bro. Crum. His confidence in God never failed, nor did his faith ever weaken. Talk to him of his Savior, and he would rejoice; tell him of heaven, and his soul would rise on joyful wing, cleaving the sky. After a long life of about eighty-one years we find him at the river's brink, still cheerful and faithful. While waiting for the last summons to call him up higher, he called his faithful wife and children and grandchildren to his bedside and told them good-by; then, looking heavenward, said, "Oh! see that beautiful city up yonder." His last words were, "I can not talk much, but I know I am going home to heaven." Then the weary wheels of life stood still, and the saintly soul of Warren Crum went home to heaven.

GEO. W. HUFF, Pastor.

GILLOCH—Mrs. NANCY GILLOCH (nee Applegate) was born Dec. 6, 1822, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Nettie Stipes, in Lula, Miss., May 10, 1893. Sister Gilloch was married in 1880 to Bro. Michael Gilloch, who preceded her to the spirit-world several years. She professed faith in Christ in 1841, and joined the M. E. Church, South. She lived a consistent and faithful Christian until death.

She was truly a mother in Israel, always attentive to the sick and the needy. She was much loved by her neighbors, and held in high esteem by all who knew her. She lived to a ripe old age and died in great peace. She was the mother of twelve children; all have preceded her save four, who mourn their loss. To these we extend our sympathy, and will say, be faithful a little while and you shall meet your mother beyond the river.

W. M. YOUNG, P. C.

ADLEY—FRANK A. ADLEY was born Feb. 11, 1835, in Bashie, La., and died at East Point, La., March 28, 1893, after the illness of eleven days.

God called from me my darling husband. He was a kind, good, devoted husband and affectionate father. He leaves four children to mourn his loss, which can not be realized. The loss of a dear father! Oh! how we miss him; how sad and lonely I feel here without him! His voice we can no longer hear; the vacant chair. Oh! we miss him. Yes, God has called him home. So God's children are gathering home, no more to sorrow, no more to roam. Won't it be joyful to meet to part no more. Yes, we will meet him at the beautiful gate. He is waiting, watching for us to come. God will help me take care of my dear children and teach them to know and to love their God until we meet him. His wife,

M. J. ADLEY.

COLLINS—FANNIE EATON, daughter of R. J. and Hennie Collins, of Hattiesburg, Miss., was born Sept. 26, 1892, and died June 7, 1893.

Another home has been darkened by the entrance of the death angel, who came at ten o'clock and released little Fannie from the sufferings she had borne so patiently for several months. She has gone to that beautiful sun-bright clime, where none ever suffer or die. May the bereaved parents realize that there are beautiful beckoning hands at the gate of the Celestial City, and when earth's trials and conflicts are past, oh! how sweet it will be to meet our loved ones over there!

H. D. HOWELL.

HOLMES—To-day we bury "LUCILLE," younger daughter of Dr. Chas. B. and Minnie B. Holmes. This little darling had only brightened their hearth-stone for the space of two years and eight months. She was a most lovable child, and possessed characteristics of sublime worth. In her death earth has only contributed to heaven. Two days ago she was in the arms of mama and papa, but now she gently rests on Jesus' breast.

May the blessed Savior comfort the hearts of the bereaved! HERVIE MELLARD.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1039 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

We, the undersigned, do testify that we have used Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar for years, for all throat and lung troubles, with the greatest benefit. For coughs and colds it never fails. When taken according to directions, it cures our children of croup and whooping-cough, and for serious lung troubles it always gives relief.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A most destructive fire took place in this city on June 15. The immense freight depot of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, containing a vast amount of merchandise, and the Illinois Central railroad's fruit depot, were totally destroyed, involving a loss of nearly $100,000.

Three more breaks have occurred in the levee line. A serious crevasse has occurred on Reserve Plantation, about 47 miles above New Orleans. Also one at Uncle Sam Plantation, in St. James parish, and one at Harlem, in Plaquemines parish, about 85 miles below the city.

A statement has been made which shows that the total sugar bounty for the fiscal year ending June 30 will be $9 403,989. The amount actually paid is as follows: On cane sugar, $8 097,894; on beet sugar, $531,363; on sorghum sugar, $19 817; on maple sugar, $60 119. Total, $9 309 293.

The Whistling Dick Saw and Shingle Mills of the Cypress Lumber and Shingle Company, known also as Carpenter's Mill, in Plaquemine, La., caught fire on June 15, about 10 o'clock, and were burned to the ground, together with about two-thirds of the stock of lumber. Loss, about $30 000.

Prof. Koenig, the chief of the Michigan Mining School, says that the United States has a deposit of marble which is finer than the best product of Carrara or Paros. This marvelous deposit underlies the stone quarries at Avoudale, Pa., from which some specimens were taken recently with a diamond-pointed drill and submitted to him for examination.

On June 15 the names of sixty-five clerks were dropped from the rolls of the general land office. In making this reduction, which was made obligatory by the legislative appropriation bill, Secretary Hoke Smith was guided by a desire to raise the standard of the service, and to that end politics have not been permitted to enter into the question of who should be dismissed, and who retained.

Chief Justice Fuller, on June 16, in Chicago, overruled the decision of the Federal Circuit Court, which issued an injunction restraining the directors from opening the World's Fair on Sunday. The decision means to a certainty that the World's Fair will be kept open on Sundays, and settles the case for all time, as an appeal would have to go to the Supreme Court of the United States, which does not meet until October, when the Fair will be ended.

FOREIGN.

Several cases of cholera have been reported in Limoges, France. One case has already proved fatal. Six new cases and four deaths were reported, on June 16, in Cette and four cases and one death in Privas, the capital of the department of Ardeche. The spread of the disease is favored by intense heat.

Five thousand workmen, in defiance of a police prohibition, held a meeting in favor of universal suffrage at Wessenberg, outside Brunn, in Austria, on June 18. When the police attempted to disperse them they were received with a volley from revolvers and a shower of stones. A commissary of police was killed, and five policemen were critically injured. On the other side, twenty-six workingmen were injured.

It is said that the Colombian government has determined to enter a formal protest with the government of Holland against the traffic in Indian children by Dutch traders on the Goajilla coast. It is said that they are carrying on an active and unfettered slave trade there. Only a few days since a schooner brought more than thirty girls, from 10 to 12 years old, to Curacoa, where they are openly sold into domestic service.

The returns in Germany have almost ceased coming. Reports from 30 districts are still lacking. On June 18 the army bill parties and groups had eighty-three seats, the opposition parties eighty-five. All depends upon the second ballots. The government has decided to exert all its influence to induce all the factions favorable to the bill to unite against the Richterists, social democrats and clericals in the elections, which will be held about one week from June 17. Second ballots will be necessary, it is estimated, in almost 200 districts, the returns received thus far having not been complete enough to render possible accurate predictions of the result.

Considerable excitement has been caused by the decision of the court of cassation on the appeal of Chas. De Lesseps and the other defendants convicted of fraud in connection with the Panama Canal Company. The court has handed down its decision quashing the sentences on the ground that the statute of limitations covered the offenses charged and that the indictment on which the prisoners were tried was irregular. There were five defendants convicted on the trial which ended on Feb. 9, last. These were Ferdinand de Lesseps, his son Charles, Marius Fontane, and Henri Cotin and Gustave Eiffel. Ferd de Lesseps was sentenced to five years' imprisonment and to pay a fine.

"The Russian laws enacted against the Jews, which have resulted in driving many of them out of the country, are necessary to protect the Russians," said Pierre Botkine, secretary of the Russian legation in New York. "The Jews are cleverer than the Russians. They are shrewder business men and keener in intellect, and if they were admitted to the schools freely they would outrank the Russians in all particulars. It is because of this need of protecting the Russian citizens from the Jews, who are really immigrants, that these edicts have been made."

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure Bilious and Nervous Ills.

A law has been enacted in Russia to provide for severe punishment of seal-poachers in Behring Sea. Hereafter all persons, Russian or foreign, caught sealing in Russian waters will be liable to sixteen months' imprisonment and to the confiscation of their vessels with cargo and tackle.

Sympathy for the Distressed.

Our lives are all music if we but touch the chords rightly, so says one of our poets, and we all know there is a golden thread entering into the warp and woof of every-day life that is touched by sympathy for the distressed and suffering. At such a time what a boon to have on hand Dicks' Mul-en-ul to offer as a relief for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains and colic. It is soothing and cooling. Large bottles 50 cents.

The mind, by a sort of natural magic, raises the ghost of a departed pleasure, and makes it appear without any dependence upon space or time. This almost omnipresence of an advantage is a circumstance of value; it gives opportunity for use and repetition, and makes it so much the more one's own.—Robert Hall.

BOOKS.

SOME REBEL RELICS FROM THE SEAT OF WAR. By Rev. A. T. Goodloe. Barbee & Smith, Nashville. Price, $1.50.

This story of the war will be read with absorbing interest. The record of the happening of those dark days will always command attention.

LITTLE PAUL AND THE FRISBIE SCHOOL. By Margaret Sidney. 12mo., Illustrated. $1. Boston; D. Lothrop Company.

Little Paul, the boy-hero, is one of the most winsome of the many boy creations of the author, who seems to understand boy nature by intuition; a great heart in a frail body, he is a power for good among the coarse, rude, hard natures that surround him; his sway over them, and the refining influence of gentle Mrs. Faraday are forces that the roughest boy finds it difficult to combat long. The unexpected marriage of Aunt Philena and the impetuous choleric, but kind-hearted Mr. Bronson, gives another friend and ally to the school, and the boys find a most indulgent patron in Uncle Asa. It is a thoroughly good boy's book.

DOROTHY THE PURITAN. By Augusta Campbell Watson. E. P. Dutton & Co., Publishers, New York. 16mo. Cloth. $1.

The events contained in this new and pleasing romance occurred in the historical old town of Salem, Mass. The realistic pictures of life among the early settlers, with a vivid and accurate description of the witchcraft delusion which prevaded New England during the latter part of the seventeenth century, are graphically interwoven with the romantic scenes of the story. Dorothy, the heroine, whose picture appears on the frontispiece, is a most lovable, womanly character, and her pathetic story, with its background of tragic history, appeals deeply to the heart of the reader. The plot is new and striking, and the action well sustained to the closing chapter; the style is clear and simple, the characters well drawn, true to life nature, and replete with dramatic force. The book is of undoubted literary merit, is tastefully designed, and sure to meet with popular favor.

Vacuum leather oil (to be got at a harness or shoe store), doubtless the life of leather, keeps it good-looking and waterproof, makes it soft, and is handy.

This last is important. People will not put up with the inconvenience of the old-fashion grease-pot.

A writer in a rural exchange says that he saw "two men starting for town with a gray horse and sleigh seated upon a box containing holes that had been made with a two-inch augur going after a pig." How's that for construction?

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

ON THE BEACH.

The twenty-second annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 12, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 5, and remain on the grounds until the twenty sixth. Holders of camp meeting railroad tickets desiring to attend the session of the Biblical Institute and Summer School for Christian Workers, which opens its first annual session on July 26, can get their railroad tickets extended until August 31. All trains stop at the grounds during the meeting. Express trains Nos. 5 and 6 will stop on signal from June 1 to Oct. 1.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the rush at the opening of the camp meeting should address communications to W. B. Thomson, chairman Tent and Cot Committee, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Cot Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution towards defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

"The Spirit of Faith."

Paul affirms that the motive led him to preach, and to suffer er to preach, was the possession spirit of faith. He substantiates y a free quotation from the : "According as it is written, I d, and therefore have I spoken; lieve, therefore speak." It was irit of faith which indnced the st to speak unto the Lord, and me spirit of faith moved the to preach the gospel. This is a uggestive expression—the spirit h, signifying that faith which is operation of God. It is some- more than mere commercial nce, more than human confi- nf any sort, the illustrations of the contrary, notwithstanding. divine thing, this deep, mysteri- wer of faith. It is more than ntellectual activity, or the prod- yllogistic reasoning; it is spirit, l possessed with a spirit of firm nce in God and an inward per- of the things of God. It is rdly subjective; it is the expres- spiritual character, the soul of , the main-spring of spiritual . When faith begins spiritual ins, and, like all life, you can lyze it, you can not illustrate it. re you illustrate and analyze it re confused it becomes. In the atmosphere of faith live and move and have our being. We are to receive the truth in faith, declare it in faith, and live it by faith, for "whatsoever is not of faith, is sin."

It is the presence of the Holy Spirit in the heart which promotes the dispositions and powers of faith. His presence there makes faith an easy thing, indeed. Would you have the spirit of faith? Then seek the fullness of the Spirit. Here you will find a new strength. Old truths will become new to you, the promises of God will induce to mighty exercise of soul, mere opinion will become conviction, and conviction will come forth in word and deed. P.

Giving to Carry Forward and Sustain Missions.

I have read that some years ago, in one of the West India islands, a missionary meeting was held by the Christianized negroes. After some discussion three resolutions were formulated and adopted.

Resolved, first, We will all give.

Resolved, second, That we will all give according to our ability.

Resolved, thirdly, That we will all give cheerfully.

Let us consider the reasonableness and justice of these resolutions. All ought to give because all are under great obligations to do so. All our blessings, our being and all that constitutes our well-being is from God. The beautiful light, the vitalizing air; the water, with its excellent uses, and our food, all are from God. So are our various capacities to enjoy these benedictions. Our nobler gifts of intellect and will, to enjoy the sublime, the beautiful and useful works of God, are from him from whom all blessings flow. And so our highest endowment, the capacity to know and enjoy God, is from the same beneficent and all-giving hand. Being such large recipients of the greatest blessings, we ought to make the best return we can. Being sown with such favors, we ought to yield a harvest—thirty, sixty or a hundred-fold of grateful gifts. The obligation to do so is as universal as our possibilities. The marching orders are to go into all the world, to every creature. Giving is in the line of these orders, for we can not all go, but we can all help to send. We can all let our light shine. When this Southland was invaded, all could not go to the field of conflict; many had to remain to care for home interests and produce supplies to sustain those that could go. So the laity can do now. The ministers and missionaries at the far-off front must be sustained, and all must be united and engaged in the same purpose to drive back the powers of darkness and take the world for Christ.

All should give: "kings of the earth, and all peoples, princes and all judges of the earth; both young men and maidens, old men and children." None of us can be poorer than the widow, who cast "all her living"—two mites—into the treasury of the Lord. Small as it was, it was all she could do. An angel could have done no more, and it was enough to call forth the Master's commendation. Perhaps most of us would have been tempted to say she should give nothing, she needed it for herself; but this would have been to distrust the promise that "the liberal soul shall be made fat, and to him that gives shall be given, and he shall have more abundance."

"Give according to our ability." The small sum of twenty-five cents per member as an average among our members would largely exceed the assessment of the M. E. Church, South. But there are tens of thousands who literally give nothing to send the gospel to the millions who are perishing for its light and saving power. A comparatively small number do most of the giving. There are quite a number of persons, with incomes of less than a thousand dollars, who, outside of various other gifts, give from twenty-five to thirty dollars to missions annually; but there are examples of professedly religious people, with incomes of several thousands, who do no more, or not so much, for missions. Now, this is not according to the second resolution (which is a fair one)—"that we give according to our ability." If a man with an income of a thousand dollars can spare from other needs and gifts twenty dollars for missions, then he that has an income of two thousand should give in this direction forty dollars, and a three-thousand income, sixty dollars, and a four-thousand income, eighty dollars, and a five-thousand income, at least, a hundred per year for missions. It ought to be far easier for an income of five thousand to devote annually for missions one hundred dollars than a thousand-dollar income to devote twenty dollars to missions.

I have no doubt if our people, as a whole, gave to missions according to ability, we could sustain a thousand missionaries. The Moravians, with a membership of forty thousand, maintain over three hundred missionaries. We have largely over 1,200,000 members. If as devoted to missions as the Moravians, how soon would the earth be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the face of the great deep!

Some time back a youth in England wrote a prize essay and secured the prize. He devoted one-fifth to the Lord, and kept up that habit to the end of his great career. That young man was none other than the illustrious Charles Spurgeon, one of the most benevolent men and successful preachers in modern times.

The Lord Jesus gave himself for us. You are not asked to exile yourself from home and country, to hurt your credit, or curtail reasonable enjoyments for yourself or family; yet we may have the honor to be workers together with God in carrying forward the grandest and the best enterprise that ever challenged the admiration of angels or men. God could have printed the gospel on the skies; could have built churches as easily as hills and mountains. He could have commissioned a million of angels to preach as they did to the shepherds; or he could sustain the missionaries by miraculous power; but he honors us in making us the agents of his love.

We ought to give cheerfully. So far as we are concerned, no other gifts are acceptable to us. God loves a cheerful giver, who is glad when it is in his power to give; not "to be seen of men," but glorify his redeeming Lord. It is one of our sweetest pleasures to give to those we love. If we love him who first loved us, if his love constrains us, our gifts will go forth from us as freely and sweetly as odor from the rose. J. B. WALKER.

South Carolina Letter.

We are moving along about as usual in the "Old Palmetto State." For some years, as you know, we have had a terrible political upheaval in our State. Three years ago there was a break from the old regime, and Capt. B. R. Tillman, a farmer, was nominated for governor, and was elected. There was great opposition to him, and the campaign was the bitterest the State has ever had. He was re-elected last year. We are moving along very well now, but I fear we shall have another bitter campaign next year. Things look that way now.

We are considerably exercised just now over the new liquor law, which goes into effect on the first of July. During the election last year a separate box was placed at each voting place to receive the vote of the people on the prohibition question. A large majority of the votes cast were for prohibition. The people wanted it, and were willing to give it a fair trial. But instead of prohibition the Legislature gave us the "Dispensary Law," which, in the opinion of your correspondent, is the biggest humbug that has ever been put off on a people. It changes the name of the bar-room to that of "dispensary," and the name of the bar-tender to that of "dispenser," and gives the appointment of the liquor dealers into the hands of the Board of Control. In some respects it may be an improvement on the bar-room, but it is not what the people asked for, and there is much opposition to it. Of course, the whisky men are opposed to it, because it takes the business out of their hands, and the prohibitionists are opposed to it because it is still the liquor traffic; and so it goes. The signatures of a majority of the free-holders of any place must be secured before a dispensary can be established, and, as there is so much opposition to it, it is thought that very few will be established in the State. It is rumored that if it turn out thus, an extra session of the Legislature will be called to repeal that feature of the law, and allow the Board of Control to say where dispensaries shall be established. This would clearly show the whole thing to be a fraud, so far as prohibition is concerned.

In the world of education we have had a good time lately. I have been unable to attend the commencement exercises of our colleges this year; but from the newspaper accounts I judge they were pleasant and profitable occasions. The commencement at Wofford College was, as usual, a grand time. Bishop Fitzgerald preached the sermon, and Hon. J. Wofford Tucker, of Florida, delivered the literary address. Here is what the Southern Christian Advocate says of the sermon and the address:

But to the commencement sermon. Acts xxvi, 19—"I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision"—was his text. For forty-five or fifty minutes the preacher held the interested attention of his large audience. Our readers will find the sermon on the second page of the Advocate. But while we give the sermon we can not give the personality of the preacher—his tone, his manner, his air of sympathy, his benignant countenance, his fatherly smile.

Monday was another typically beautiful day, insuring, of itself, another large audience at the college chapel. The attraction of the morning hour was the literary address by Hon. J. Wofford Tucker, of Sanford, Fla. Mr. Tucker is the only living member of the original Board of Trustees of Wofford College, and is a nephew of its founder, the late Rev. Benjamin Wofford. These facts alone gave special interest to the occasion. Coupled with these, however, was the knowledge that the speaker would bring to his audience the rich fruitage of three-score years and ten of faithful study and rich experience. The address was an earnest plea for a better understanding between the North and the South, for more just and tolerant judgments, and for more systematic and earnest efforts for a restoration of confidence between the sections. We shall not attempt an outline of the address, as we hope to give it entire in the columns of the Advocate. At the conclusion of its delivery Judge Tucker was warmly congratulated by scores of interested hearers, many of whom were friends of the long ago.

The commencement of the Columbia Female College seems to have been a good time. The preachers of our own Conference did the preaching and speaking for the occasion. Rev. Charles B. Smith, of Orangeburg, preached the sermon, and Rev. J. W. Daniel, of Chester, and Rev. J. A. Clifton, of Charleston, delivered addresses. From accounts I judge they did about as well as imported speakers would have done.

The Williamston Female College has no regular commencement, but it has just closed a prosperous year.

These three distinctive Methodist colleges are doing a grand work for Christian education in South Carolina. Notwithstanding the stringency in money matters, they have all had a very prosperous year. Dr. J. H. Carlisle, the president of Wofford College, hasn't a superior anywhere on the continent. Drs. S. B. Jones and S. Lander, presidents respectively of the Columbia Female College and the Williamston Female College, are recognized as among the foremost educators in the State.

The District Conference season is upon us, and our connectional men are kept busy representing their respective interests. Unless more work is given to the District Conference and more life thrown into it, it will soon be numbered with the unnecessaries of Methodism. Why not let the District Conference license preachers, recommend to the Annual Conference for admission or for orders, etc.? Much more life would be thrown into it were this injunction of the Discipline followed: "At these Conferences prominence shall be given to religious exercises, such as preaching, prayer meetings, love-feasts, and the administration of the sacraments." I fear we have gotten where we think that all a Conference is for is to transact business. Oh, for the spirituality of ancient Methodism! W. B. DUNCAN.

Kingstree, S. C.

FROM THE WORK.

W. A. C., Pleasant Hill, La., June 15: "Our meeting here was a glorious victory for Christ. The Lord was with us in power. Results: Church revived, twenty accessions, and quite a number professed the experience of full salvation (or sanctification), the writer being one of the number. Bros. Wimberly, Sanders and Jackson did the preaching. Our pastor, Bro. Whatley, is very much liked by his people, and we look forward to a good year. Bro. Whatley is now holding a meeting at Marthaville. Pray for us."

Rev. C. McDonald, Forest, Miss., June 19: "While at the Trenton quarterly meeting, on the eleventh instant, I was taken with fever, which, after my return home on Monday, kept me in bed for several days. I missed the Millsaps dedication, and was also unable to start on Friday for the Westville quarterly meeting. If Bro. Barr did not get my note in time, and postpone the Quarterly Conference, I have failed for the first time, since being made a presiding elder, to hold the Conference. I am now up, and expect to meet my appointments. Rev. E. T. Breland began a protracted meeting here yesterday, with favorable indications. We are looking for the pastor, Rev. B. S. Rayner, and Rev. W. H. Huntley, of Brandon, to come this evening, and the meeting is expected to continue for some days."

Rev. H. L. Norton: "The Madison charge has been our field of labor the past eighteen months, during which period our labors and communion with the people have been delightful, indeed. We are advancing in many particulars as people and pastor. Many of our people have good cases of religion; others are hungering and thirsting for more than they have, and others still are praying for conversion. None of us are at ease and satisfied with our present attainments. The financial condition of the charge is good. The people take their Lord's view of the matter, 'The laborer is worthy of his hire,' and accordingly they pay him. They object to the use of the word 'give' in this particular. They say, 'It does not have the right ring.' 'Pay' is the word they employ. Our revival meetings are at hand. Pray for us."

Rev. W. H. Lewis, Rolling Fork charge, Vicksburg district, Mississippi Conference, June 19: "There has been no report in our Conference organ this year from the Rolling Fork charge. However, we have not been asleep all this time. The work of the Lord has been moving steadily onward, and we have great reason to feel thankful. A meeting was held at Rolling Fork the last week in May; Rev. W. B. Lewis, of Natchez, conducting the services. Rain and a prospective overflow interfered materially with the interest in the meeting. However, the preaching was enjoyed by the attentive listeners, and good was accomplished. Six joined the church—four by profession and two by letter. This enables us to report seventeen accessions to the church since the first of January. Children's Day has been observed at Rolling Fork and Anguilla. The children at both places acquitted themselves admirably, and the ladies who trained them are to be commended. The majority of the people in this section of the Delta love to attend church, and the congregations are good every Sunday. My last visit to Cary was encouraging. Dinner on the ground and a large congregation. There was some talk among the members of repairing the church there, and it is to be hoped they will begin work at once. Notwithstanding the cry of hard times, we hope to make a full report at Conference."

Rev. J. H. Evans, Williamsburg circuit, Mississippi Conference, June 19: "Our second quarterly meeting was held at Bethel Church, June 10 and 11. Bro. H. E. Partridge, our efficient presiding elder, was on hand, and was somewhat encouraged with the appearance of things, and he delighted the people of all denominations with his able and earnest preaching. We had a good attendance both days. We were all delighted with the way and manner he expedited the business of the Conference, and Bro. Partridge left us with many hearts burning with love and earnest prayer for him and his work, that he would prove to be a great blessing to the preachers and people of the Seashore district. We are getting along very well, considering the hardness of the times. We are always slow up here in the pine woods in starting—that is, the church is. The preacher always starts the first week in January, and sometimes in December; but the church always waits till grass comes before they can get out and get properly at work in the Sunday-school. We have four Sunday-schools on this work, and we are just getting ready to commence Children's Day; but I think we will have Children's Day at each Sunday-school as fast as we can get round to attend them. We have sent on nearly all our collection on the claim for superannuated preachers; collected all the Bishops' funds, and have in good subscription and some money $20 on the other claims. Pray for us."

Rev. Jas. E. Riddle, Boyce, La., June 15: "On the night of Monday, the twelfth instant, we closed our meeting here of two weeks' duration. Bro. T. J. Upton, of Alexandria, was with us the first week, preaching once a day, in the evening. Bro. T. S. Randle, of Opelousas, did the preaching the second week, holding two services per day—at 10 A. M. and 8 P. M. Mrs. Randle was with her husband, and worked hard for the success of the meeting, singing and praying in the congregation, and visiting among the people. That venerable man and superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, Rev. Geo. Jackson, came in for a day or so of the latter part of the first week, and refreshed us much with his genial presence and fervent prayers. He also conducted the only morning service of that week, held Friday. Everyone present seemed to enjoy the service, and our aged sister, Mrs. M. A. Davidson, well-known in all this section for her devotion to the church, said at the close that she was very happy. Bro. Jackson was with us Tuesday of the second week, and at the morning service prayed that we might be blessed with fair weather, and by the next morning the clouds had disappeared, and did not return during the whole time of the meeting. The congregations were good from first to last, at night, and the preaching earnest, eloquent, and direct. Everybody knows what a preacher Bro. Upton is, and Bro. Randle fires no random shots. The congregation grew steadily larger during his stay, and we closed with a full house. While there were no accessions, the church was greatly revived and blessed as a result of the meeting. We now have two gentlemen who pray in public (one a Baptist), whereas, before the meeting neither would open his mouth. There was a conversion the closing service; an estimable lady, who will unite with our church. Her husband will also come in. The health of our town and community is good. The season is favorable, and crops are growing. Our people are greatly in need of a full crop, as last year was nearly a perfect failure, which very much embarrassed them financially. May our heavenly Father smile on the land and send a plentiful harvest!"

Family Worship.

We hear many a wife and mother say: "Yes, I feel that it is the right thing to do, and I long to have it a regularly established custom in my family; but my husband is so hurried he can not stop for it." Now, I do not believe that there is one husband and father in our city who, if he really was impressed that it was a matter of vital importance, could not in some way make time for it. But if he is not so impressed, what is the mother's duty in the matter?

I well know as we live our lives today there seems little time to spare between the hurried breakfast and the train. I really know of no way but to rise a bit earlier and snatch a moment before the breakfast hour. Will the service not be acceptable even if we kneel girded, as were the Israelites the night before their flight?

We have but to decide whether or not we believe family prayers to be of sufficient importance to our children and ourselves to make this sacrifice of our comfort and inclination. What shall we gain from it? Surely, for ourselves an uplift for the day, the starting of our work upon a little higher plane, an added assurance of help wherever we shall find need, and the setting straight of what has already gone awry; for our children and the stranger who may be within our gates the proof, if proof be needed, that our religion is first and foremost in our hearts, a thing of which we have no cause to be ashamed, no desire to keep in the background, that we rely upon our God for help in all we are to do and meet throughout the day. If, then, into the little service we put what is best in ourselves, will not the children, even though they receive no immediate benefit, recall the hour and circumstances after they have gone away from us—possibly some word or prayer or verse, and because of it be kept or helped in ways we dream not of? Many have testified that the influence of their father's or mother's prayers heard at such a time has gone with them all their lives; the memory of some petition has come to them in hours of temptation, and has been just the restraining power most needed at the moment. The thought, too, that every day in the home the family prayer is offered for them has often been a comfort and encouragement to them while fighting their battles with the world elsewhere. Of course, there is the danger of its becoming a mere form, and so in time growing distasteful and irksome, but that lies in our proper power, it seems to me, to prevent.—Selected.

"DREAMING AND WAKING."

[The last published poem from the late Miss Lucy Larcom appeared in the Independent. Its refrain is peculiarly significant.]

Beside the road I dreamed of heaven;
I heard its far-off fountains play;
I heard the song of souls forgiven,
Like birds that chant the birth of day.
I dreamed I saw an angel come
Down from those heights to lead me home.

His eyes were kind, his robes dropped dew
And fragrance of that unknown land.
He spoke but to no tongue I knew—
No language I could understand;
And with a glance of pitying pain
He turned him back to heaven again.

A pilgrim passed. "And didst thou hear,"
I asked him, "what the angel said?"
Whispered the traveler in my ear,
Ere onward into light he sped:
"I heard the angel sigh, 'Not yet!
This soul knows not love's alphabet.'

"'Oh, comrade mine, thou dreamest in vain
Of heaven, if here thou hast not found,
In soothing human grief and pain,
That earth itself is holy ground.
Unpracticed in love's idioms now,
A foreigner to heaven art thou.

"'Cold wouldst thou walk, and blind and dumb,
Among those flaming hosts above,
A homesick alien; for the sum
Of all their thoughts and deeds is love.
And they who leave not self behind,
No heaven in heaven itself can find.

"'Rejoice that with the sons of men
A little while thou lingerest yet.
Go, read thy Book of Life again;
Go back and learn love's alphabet
Of Christ the Master. He will teach
Thy lips to shape the heavenly speech.'"

I looked within; a dreary scroll
Of loveless, dull, self-blinded days
I saw my humbled past unroll.
Not even my fellow-pilgrim's gaze
Could I uplift my eyes to meet,
Such glory played around his feet.

He went his way. I turned again,
Ashamed and weeping, to the road,
Thronged by the suffering sons of men;
A beckoning Face among them glowed.
Sweeter than all the harps of heaven
I heard a Voice: "Thou art forgiven.

"Come, follow me, and learn of me,
And I will teach thee how to love."
My Master! now I turn to thee;
I sigh not for a heaven above;
These human souls are angels bright,
Thy presence here is heaven's own light!

The Revised Laws of Mississippi and the Methodist Church.

In the sections of the code of 1892 of Mississippi, devoted to religious organizations, there is a clause inserted in one of the sections which excludes the Methodist and all religious bodies which act as a unit, as one organized whole. The reason of this exclusion is as follows, to wit: At the time of the passage of the law in question, the laws of Mississippi prohibited any corporation, lay or other corporation, from owning more than a certain amount of real estate or landed property. This amount is now fifty thousand dollars. This being the law, should a religious or quasi-religious corporation own more than fifty thousand dollars' worth of real estate, this would be a violation of the law.

Now, the Methodist Church was a corporation, and the Methodist Church owned more than fifty thousand dollars' worth of real estate; so what was to be done? The law was positive: no corporation should own over a given amount of real estate. Here is the Methodist Church owning, if it should adopt the act, far more real estate than the law allows. What is to be done?

The law-maker did what is very common in such cases—he made a compromise; and what was this compromise? It was this: All churches were allowed to take the benefit of the law, with the qualification that the church so organized at each particular place should be a separate and independent organization—that is the act constituted each church a corporation, to be known, and act, plead and be impleaded in the courts of law and equity as such. And thus, no individual church or corporation owning over fifty thousand dollars—the law fixing and limiting the amount of property to be owned by a corporation—was not violated.

Now, in this plan there can not be such a thing as churches being separate and independent as to the law, but a united whole in fact. This would be a fraud on and an evasion of the law, and would be doing the very thing the law intended to prevent—that is, holding more real estate than allowed by law. The law could not be violated, and more property held than allowed by law, in this indirect manner, because, when the law declares that each church shall be a separate and independent corporation, then separate and independent they must ever be, and remain as if there was no other church in existence. Neither must I be understood as saying or intimating that the Methodist Church would take the benefit of this law, and have each of her churches made a separate and independent church or society, and, at the same time, have a secret agreement among her churches that this was only for form, that they were still one and the same, and together constituted the Methodist Church. No Methodist Church has ever, so far as I know or believe, taken the benefit of this act by organizing and electing trustees or managers, keeping a record, etc.

But we are told by some competent lawyer that the reason why this qualification was inserted was to prevent the church at large from being responsible for the debts of an individual church. There could be no church at large should the Methodist Church adopt this act, because the church at large would be broken up into as many separate and independent corporations as there were churches. This could not be otherwise, because the act makes the church at each place a separate and independent corporation, capable of suing and being sued, owning property, etc. Where would be the church at large, what would constitute it, if each church should become a separate and independent corporation? Where would the churches come from to make this church at large after each church had become a separate and independent corporation? Will this competent lawyer explain? Is not a Conference composed of a number of churches united as one? Well, if each of these churches is made a separate and independent corporation, what becomes of the Conference? All relations formerly existing between the churches are destroyed by their being made separate and independent corporations. How can one corporation be responsible for the debts of another corporation, unless it voluntarily chooses to assume it? To say that the church at large might become responsible for the debts of an individual church after it had taken the benefits of this act would be to say that the church had not become separate and independent; would be to wipe out this qualification—just what I insist shall be done—and then excepting the church as to the amount of real estate which it may hold, just as railroads are allowed to own more than fifty thousand dollars' worth of real estate. Why not allow the church to own more than fifty thousand dollars' worth of real estate as much so as a railroad? The church is of as much importance as a railroad.

So we see that the reason given by this competent lawyer will not do; and though he were a codifier, I would say that there was one section of the code that either he did not understand, or gave a hasty opinion without careful examination.

This subject has escaped attention long enough. The interests involved are too weighty, and the proper course to be pursued, in my opinion, is for the Methodist Church, at the next session of the Legislature, to apply to the Legislature for a charter allowing the church, as an organized body, to own more than fifty thousand dollars' worth of real estate, to own any amount necessary for the purposes of the church, and be, in other respects, regularly chartered.

LAYMAN OR SEXTUS.

Letter from Georgia.

Our city has had several conventions recently. The only one which need be mentioned here was the Presbyterian General Assembly. It was in session for ten days. It took a new departure in electing a layman as moderator. Such a thing has not happened before. It supplied the church with a new hymn book; and, strange to say, it came into possession of the book, not by forecordination, but by adoption. Instead of appointing a committee to make a book—Methodist fashion—it simply adopted one that had been prepared by one of its members. The book is entitled, "Hymns of the Ages." It was prepared and published by Rev. Dr. Kerr, of Richmond, Va.

The assembly, of course, supplied the pulpits of the city for two Sabbaths. So far as I am prepared to judge, the preaching was good. I think the trend of the Presbyterian pulpit is away from the manuscript. But a few years since preaching from manuscript was the almost universal custom in this church, so far as my observation went. Now, many of their leading men consult no manuscript in the pulpit. One result of this has been an increase of fire and force. Presbyterianism has the right ring on the Sunday question. On the woman question it is intensely conservative. If some of its leaders would read a work entitled, "Christian Womanhood," which you may have heard of, they would receive needed enlightenment.

Wesleyan commencement was, as usual, a grand affair. Fifty-four young ladies received diplomas in the literary department, besides quite a number in the departments of art and music. Several also received certificates of proficiency in the department of industrial arts—stenography, typewriting, etc. The commencement sermon, by Dr. H. C. Morrison, was appropriate to the occasion, and was delivered with the graces of oratory characteristic of the speaker. There were two fine literary addresses. One by my predecessor in the pastorate of Mulberry, Rev. Dr. J. P. McFerrin, of Chattanooga; the other by Hon. W. G. Charlton, of Savannah. The literary exercises by the pupils were quite entertaining, as was also the music.

Mercer commencement I did not have an opportunity to attend, being absent from the city most of the time. The exercises there are highly spoken of by those who did attend. Mercer has elected Rev. J. B. Gambrell, of Mississippi, as its president. It has for the most part a new faculty. Two other members of the faculty-elect are from Mississippi—Profs. Woofter and Sellers. I received this year five invitations for commencement work—one from North Carolina, one from Tennessee, and three from Georgia. I could accept only two. These were both in Georgia—at LaGrange and at Milledgeville.

LaGrange is a town of about four thousand inhabitants. It is quite a pretty place, and said to be very healthy. The college is located on a high hill in the edge of the town. The grounds are ample, the buildings are spacious, and supplied with electric lights, waterworks and other modern conveniences. The literary exercises of the pupils, so far as I heard them, were fine. The college is enjoying great prosperity under the presidency of R. W. Smith.

Milledgeville has a population of, I suppose, three thousand. The college whose commencement I attended—the Middle Georgia Military and Agricultural College—is domiciled in the old State Capitol building. I preached in the old Senate Chamber. The college has over three hundred pupils. The Industrial College for girls is also located at Milledgeville. Its enrollment is three hundred and sixty-two. This school is modeled after the Mississippi I. I. and C., at Columbus. The Legislature appoints annually a committee of its own members to attend the commencement. It also appoints a committee of ladies from different parts of the State for the same purpose—a committee of ten. Both these schools are doing good work.

Guard the Door.

Much has been published lately in our church papers and periodicals on "The World in the Church," and "The Necessity of Enforcing Discipline." That the world has gotten in to the church, thus creating a necessity for enforcing discipline, is a fact that should send sadness to the heart of every lover of Methodism. In too many places the world in the church so dominates the church as to make it next to impossible to enforce discipline.

It might be profitable to ask how came the world in the church? There are two ways in which the world may get into the church. It may be carried in at the door in the hearts of those who enter, or it may be injected into their hearts after entering the church. I am persuaded that by far the greater part of it goes in at the door. It can not be denied that many unconverted or worldly people are received into the church. This has arisen, I think, from a misapprehension of the conditions of membership. The statement in the Discipline that "there is only one condition previously required," etc., has often been so stressed that many, I fear, have been made to believe that only a faint desire to be a Christian is all that is necessary to become a member in the Methodist Church. Doubtless, we, as ministers, in our zeal to win souls and desire for visible results, have often unthoughtedly encouraged this idea. In this way many have gotten into the church, not only without being converted, but have not even that "desire to flee from the wrath to come," which "is a fixed principle of the soul."

At the origin of the Methodist Church its members were often ridiculed and sometimes persecuted. Instead of being considered an honor it was considered a reproach to be a Methodist. On this account comparatively few would unite with them unless they were deeply in earnest. The necessity for guarding the entrance into the church was not so great then as now. I think, however, they were more careful then than we are now. The tide has changed in favor, if not for the good, of Methodism. It has become a power in the world. To be called a Methodist is now considered an honor instead of a reproach. Hence the ridicule and persecution which formerly acted as a barrier to membership with the Methodists have been removed. On the contrary, the honorable position which Methodism has taken among the churches of the world has been an incentive to the worldly to come within its pales.

Again, in the early days of Methodism the six months' probation rule acted as a sieve to keep out the worldly and insincere. But this rule is numbered among the things of the past.

From what has been said above, we feel justified in the assertion that for the purity and permanency of Methodism it is necessary that her ministry guard carefully the door of the church. I would not have her ministry with flaming sword in hand standing at the gateway of the church to terrify humble, sincere souls seeking the aid which the church alone can give; I would have them stand there to see that only those enter who have "a desire to flee from the wrath to come," which is a fixed principle of the soul. If possible, see that none enter except those who are deeply in earnest. There might be a temporary falling off in the number of accessions, but those that did come would be more consistent and efficient. I am persuaded that incalculable benefit will accrue to us by more carefully guarding the door of the church. Let the candidates be carefully examined and also instructed in the doctrines and General Rules of our Methodism. Let us guard more carefully the front door, and there will be less necessity for opening the back door.

It will, doubtless, be admitted that the world outside of the church is much easier managed than the world in the church. One of our sainted Bishops is credited with a statement like this: "So long as the church is in the world all is well; but when the world gets in the church all is wrong." We have no need to fear the enemies outside. It is those inside that injure the cause. Let us guard the door. M. H. MOORE.

Moody in Chicago.

The great evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, is setting numerous forces into activity in the wicked city of Chicago that are working for righteousness. At the Bible Institute there are nearly three hundred students—men and women—many of them preparing for home mission labors, but the majority for foreign fields. They go upon the streets from house to house, visiting the poor and unconverted, holding prayer services and persuading them to attend the tabernacle. Missions are established in the slums where the multitudes are ministered unto by these consecrated souls armed with faith and the Word of God. Soon the open-air street preaching will begin. For two weeks the auditorium of Mr. Moody's church has been filled with thousands of children who flock to the illustrated lectures of Mr. McKay, a New York broker. During the after meetings many little ones have been led to Jesus. In the Institute Hall two lectures are given each morning—lately, by the Rev. Hubert Brooks, of the Church of England; Prof. Morehead, of Ohio; Mr. Torrey, and now Mr. Moody. On next Sabbath the son of the immortal Charles Spurgeon will preach in the tabernacle. The wonderful Scotch revivalist, Jno. McNeil, has been delighting immense congregations in Chicago. He worked with Mr. Moody in Europe. He is a marvelous combination of spirituality, intellectuality and unusual personal magnetism. His delivery is highly dramatic—those who have heard both declare that the Scotchman is a strong accentuation of Dr. Talmage.

Mr. Moody selects novel places to hold his mammoth meetings. Several days ago he rented Tattersall's Hall, a hippodrome, at $100 an hour. The odor of the turf filled the atmosphere, but people thronged there to listen to the old, old story simply told; hundreds of men wept, and one sprang to his feet to testify to God's goodness in redeeming him from a life of sin. Last Sunday 20,000 human beings collected under Forepaugh's tent to hear Mr. Moody. "What manner of man is this?" Plain, direct, dealing out home-truths straight from the heart that out and sink and find their lodging in some other heart; risen from the common walks of life, he had heard and felt the throbbing of the pulse of humanity; great in body; great in soul; abrupt, kind, uneducated—save by discipline—noble-minded—in all and above all, filled with the power of the Holy Spirit which subdues, controls and conquers.

BELLE KEARNEY.

Bro. Hopper's Article.

Bro. Hopper's article in the ADVOCATE, of June 15, has fallen under my notice.

Yes, if we don't hear a better statement of the case than this, we will continue to doubt the authority of the majority, for for lameness this "takes the cake." In your examination of what we might call a descent of authority, you assume an authority that does not, never did, and, it is to be hoped, never will, exist on the part of the "Parent Board" to appoint how an assessment is to be raised.

Your number two completely answers all the succeeding argument until you reach your "Again." Now, I submit that from your own quotation of Paragraph No. 131 that the action of the Annual Conference can be not more than suggestive. And it is left to the will of the preacher to decide for himself as to whether he will use the means designated by the Annual Conference or content himself with following the directions of the Discipline. "So it is clear (to my mind) that the Annual Conference and its Board of Missions have (not) some considerable authority" in this particular. If there is any correction to be made in my article in a late number of the ADVOCATE, it is to blame rather the brethren for an erroneous construction of what was never intended as law by the Conference that passed the vexed resolution.

Now, for that argument (?) from the vows. It is true that we take the obligation to which the brother refers to: "Act in all things not according" to our "own will," but as a "son in the gospel." "Above all," that "it is needful you should do that part of the work which we advise, at those times and places which we judge most for his glory."

But who ever until now has discovered any reference to a majority in this obligation? It is, indeed, the exact reverse of the construction here placed upon it by you in your argument, and was intended to insure obedience to the appointing authority; that preachers might be kept at the command of the episcopacy, not to Conference majorities. Enough said

K S ENOCHS.

The Union League.

There's a growing desire amongst the leagues of this city to form a union. It seems to me that it would be wise, in the incipiency of such a work, to lay a good foundation. The lack of stringent by-laws seems to have hurt our leagues, while the "Christian Endeavor Society," under the most binding pledges, seems to flourish. A union should embrace all leagues in the State, and would, undoubtedly, be a great blessing to us as Methodists of Louisiana.

In order to found a perfect organization we might consider this State union as something above and beyond an "Epworth League," and at organization draft a constitution and by-laws for this special union, and include in these enough latitude to allow the incorporation of anything beneficial from any society.

For instance: Say we adopt the pledges and out-door departments of the Christian Endeavor Society, then something else good from the Young People's Union, of the Baptist Church. We should be made up of all the leagues. How? Illustration: By virtue of office let the president of each league become a vice-president in the union upon their recognition of and co-operation with the union. Allow each league one delegate's membership in the union besides the president. Then one more for every stated number of members, the pro rata to be fixed by the union.

As to the work of the union? It should be strong enough to support a traveling lecturer and organizer. Its funds might come from every league that unites; or if other and better sources of revenue be suggested at formation, such suggestion, if practicable, be adopted and incorporated. The corresponding secretary should be alive to every new move, and every successful league's methods of work be advertised through the union.

To illustrate: We have in our New Iberia Church a flourishing Christian Endeavor Society, which has taken up the out-door department and every Sunday evening holds services on the streets. Let such work as this be reported to our union; let the union order one hundred (more or less, according to the number of leagues in connection) circulars explaining how and what this league is doing, and mail to each. Then again, we may find one league pushing the literary department. Let others know of their success, and let them know what they can do in other lines.

And, in conclusion, I would say this paper was handed one of our best city pastors for correction, and was returned with this note attached:

This is good as opening the question. Perhaps it would be well to cast these suggestions, with such others as may occur to you, into form for General Conference action, as there will, no doubt, be action by that body next May on league matters. Previous discussion in our church papers will do good.

And since I hardly feel competent to discuss work for the General Conference, I will submit this paper as it is, hoping this State union will soon be a realized success.

I remain yours,

THE UNKNOWN SPEAKER.

Commencement at Edward McGehee College for Girls.

The commencement sermon was preached by Rev. H. R. Singleton. It was a grand discourse on God's self-revelation in nature, completed and perfected in his Word, from the nineteenth and the eighth Psalms. He found in this self-revelation the tenderness and compassion and saving love of a divine Father. The Psalmist had so found him without the revelation we have; and so may we, independent of the inspired Word, yet most fully expressed therein.

Dr. Featherstun delivered the baccalaureate address, Sunday night, on "The Ideal Woman." He emphasized the practical side of the biblical description: She is a worker, with hands, and brain, and heart; she is capable and trustworthy; she is trained to intellectual equality with man. He stressed especially her need of the right kind of education for the duties sure to crowd upon her in life of this generation—not such education as expressed itself in flashy "accomplishments," but such as fitted her to successfully compete with men in walks of science, teaching, business.

The literary address was delivered by Dr. C. G. Andrews. He likewise laid stress upon the practical problems confronting women, and demanding solution. The speaker's notion of intellectual equality and of general liberty in the choice of a vocation possessed the charm of being some decades in advance of the ordinary thought on this subject. Dr. Andrews consistently favored co-education, even in the university courses.

There were several minor addresses Tuesday morning, after Dr. Andrews was done, in the delivery of the medals and the graduation of the alumni. The college graduated three girls this year, and conferred degrees upon them as follows: Emmie May Featherstun, A. B.; Olive A. Reiley, Ph. B.; Josie Peets, A. M.

Miss Josie Peets delivered the valedictory address, and read in addition an essay on "The Old South," with its romance, and chivalry, and wealth, and refinement. Miss Olive Reiley wrote and read of how "Out of the Marsh the Lily Grows," the idea running through the essay as a golden thread, that inherent worth and loveliness will develop themselves into beauty, as the germ of the lily, in the teeth of adverse conditions, and seek no applause. Miss Emmie May Featherstun had prepared a thoughtful essay on "Buddha and Buddhism."

Monday evening was spent delightfully with the preparatory and sophomore classes in charge of the programme, and there were a number of capital recitations and some excellent music.

Tuesday night was a somewhat more elaborate literary and musical feast, ending in beautiful tableaux.

Wednesday evening the juniors and sophomores gave a delightful reception to the graduates on the college lawn, which was illuminated by numerous Japanese lanterns.

The Board of Trustees held two sessions—on Monday and Tuesday mornings respectively. A review of the year's work exhibited the school in more prosperous condition than at any previous time for many years. There was an enthusiastic movement for advance along all lines. An addition was made to the faculty; a fund was started to increase the accommodations of the buildings, which were becoming overcrowded, and most sanguine anticipations were expressed for the coming year. There was a very large attendance during the entire commencement occasion, and all went home delighted.

Port Gibson Female College.

The commencement exercises of this well-known institution took place on June 11, 12 and 13.

The sermon by Rev. W. B. Lewis, of Natchez, Miss., was said to have been one of rare excellence on the timely topic, "Christian Consecration." Rev. D. A. Little occupied the pulpit at eight P. M. He presented in his own peculiarly instructive and forceful style the important subject of "Faith."

Monday and Tuesday evening the audience was treated to a well-matured and thoughtfully arranged programme, which gave eminent satisfaction, and gave insight into the character of the work done during the session.

The exercises on Tuesday night were witnessed and enjoyed by the writer. Richard Reed, Esq., of Natchez, Miss., made the address. His subject was "Truth;" the elaboration of which, together with the climacteric conclusion, would go very far towards convicting him of being a Methodist Christian. Two young ladies, viz.: Miss Abraham, a Jewess, and Miss Lollie Little, having accomplished the curriculum, and after having delighted the large audience with essays of more than ordinary merit, were awarded diplomas. The president, Rev. B. F. Jones, and his corps of faithful and self-denying teachers were eulogistically endorsed by a resolution unanimously adopted by the Board of Trustees.

The art department was highly creditable to both teacher and pupils. It consisted of crayon and pastel drawing and oil paintings, some of which would grace any wall.

While the attendance has been small, not more than seventy-five pupils, it is conceded by all that the thoroughness of the work done by the faculty has not been surpassed by any previous session. The Board of Trustees are encouraged and determined to go forward. They desire it emphatically stated that the school will open at the usual time for the Fall and Winter term with a full and competent faculty. They respectfully urge the friends of higher education to rally to their support in furnishing facilities for the Christian culture of the daughters resident in this part of our beloved State.

INTRODUCTORY.

The study of the Acts of the Apostles is resumed after an interval of six months, the last lesson taken from this book (Dec. 11, 1892) being the "Apostolic Council," containing the letter to the Gentile brethren. This council was held in A. D. 50, and in the interval of two years between that event and the incidents of our present lesson the missionary activities of the apostles had been unmerited.

Separating from Barnabas and Mark, and taking Silas with him, Paul departed upon a second missionary tour through Syria and Cilicia for the purpose of confirming the churches. At Lystra the youthful Timothy was added to the party, and a number of cities were visited, where the decrees of the council at Jerusalem were delivered to the churches, and the work strengthened and confirmed.

TIME.—The second missionary journey, of which our lesson forms a part, was begun A. D. 51, and lasted three years, and the events of our lesson took place probably in A. D. 52.

PLACES.—Various provinces in central and western Asia Minor, and Philippi, a Roman colony in Macedonia, were visited. Neapolis—the new city—was the seaport of Philippi, which was about eight miles from the coast. Troas is the port in Mysia, in Asia Minor, from which the apostles sailed, and is said to be near the site of ancient Troy. The distance from Troas (in Asia) to Neapolis (in Europe) is sixty-five miles across the Ægean Sea.

PERSONS.—Paul, Silas, Timothy and Lydia—a proselyte to Judaism, a native of Thyatira, a seller of purple.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—THE SPIRIT'S CALL.

Ver. 6. Under the guidance of the Holy Ghost, whose will was made known unto them constantly and certainly, but by what means we are not informed, the apostles passed through Phrygia and Galatia, two of the central provinces of Asia Minor; but leave untouched the neighboring provinces of Lydia Caria and Mysia, lying to the west and forming pro-consular Asia, into which they were forbidden to enter.

Ver. 7. Coming to the borders of Mysia, one of the forbidden provinces, they move toward the province of Bithynia, which lies to the northeast upon the Black Sea, but are checked by the intimations of the Spirit that their work for the present does not lie in that direction. Their actions would indicate that they were being led step by step, and that they made this proposed advance upon Bithynia as if to try whether or not the Spirit who was guiding their movements would allow them to labor in this field. Their attitude is one of watchful willingness to be obedient to the divine will. The Spirit's interdict closes the way in this direction and leaves them to the westward as the most advisable course.

Ver. 8. Accordingly they "pass by Mysia" without attempting to preach the gospel in its cities, until they come to Troas, a seaport town on the Ægean Sea. From this point across the narrow Hellespont was the most direct route to Europe. They had thus been led on day by day, not knowing whither, but willing to enter any door that might be opened.

Ver. 9. Beyond the Hellespont lay Europe and the western world. As Paul stood upon the Mysian shore and glanced across the bright waters, his heroic spirit may have swept the narrow sea and grasped with strong desire the world that knew not God, and the vision of the night may have come as an answered prayer to a heart constrained by the love of God. Not in vain had they "passed by Mysia;" to the west the man of Macedonia called them, and in a broader sense than ever before the work of foreign missions was inaugurated. If the Spirit's guidance has been eastward instead of westward, missionaries from India and China might be preaching the gospel to Europe and America to-day.

Ver. 10. It is not improbable that Luke joined the missionary band at Troas; notice that from this point in the narrative he says "we"—previously he had said "they." By the apostle and his companions the inference was "assuredly" drawn: that into Macedonia the Spirit was leading them, and "immediately" they "endeavored" to obey.

II.—THE CALL OBEYED.

Ver. 11. Half way across the sea was the island of Samothracia. Here they touched after leaving Troas, and the next day they landed at Neapolis on the Thracian coast.

Ver. 12. From Neapolis they proceeded probably on foot to Philippi, "the chief city of that part of Macedonia," a Roman colony, or garrison city. The city had been built by Philip, King of Macedonia, and named for him, and was celebrated as the scene of the great victory of the royal Augustus over the republican Brutus, about ninety years before this time. The apostles seemed to have reached the city early in the week and to have spent the days intervening between their arrival and the Sabbath in rest and preparation for their labors.

Ver. 13. On the Sabbath day, probably the first Sabbath after their arrival, the apostle and his companions repaired to the usual Jewish place of worship, in this case on the bank of the river Gangas, a small stream flowing near the city. It was the law that when as many as ten wise and representative Jewish men could be gathered together they should build a synagogue. Where there was no synagogue they were in the habit of meeting in some place on the Sabbath day for prayer. It is, therefore, an evidence that there were but few Jews in Philippi. On this occasion the apostles found a few women engaged in worship, and to these they preached the gospel.

III.—OBEDIENCE BLESSED.

Ver. 14. Among these devout worshipers was a woman of Thyatira, a convert to Judaism, who was at that time a resident of Philippi, engaged in her trade as a seller of purple, for which her native province of Lydia was celebrated. In the heart of this woman, whose name was Lydia, the words of Paul found lodgement, and she was converted. Thus the first European convert was a Gentile woman, a native of Asia minor.

Ver. 15. Her own baptism and that of her family followed her conversion, and she, in whose heart the truth had found a home, furnished a home to the homeless missionaries who had led her to her Lord. She ministered in carnal things to those who had ministered unto her spiritual things. Her grateful heart "constrained" them, and thus free of charge they were enabled to prosecute their work in the city.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. To those who heed his guidance the Holy Ghost will furnish guidance. (Verse 6.)

2. Only those who seek to know His will shall be guided by His Spirit. (Verse 7.)

3. The Spirit of Christ is a spirit of helpfulness, and the cry of the sinner is for help. These two make the church possible and transform an earth into a heaven. (Verse 9.)

4. An "assured" faith is always followed by an "immediate endeavor." (Verse 10.)

5. The place of prayer points out the way to the place of work. (Verse 13.)

6. God opened Lydia's heart because she was willing to have it opened. He will not open yours otherwise. (Verse 14.)

7. A small congregation sometimes yields large results. (Verse 14.)

8. Christian activity is the natural and necessary result of Christian faith. Unless work follows, faith is vain.

Home Mission Work.

PLANS FOR THE YEAR.

We must press the plan we have constantly brought forward during the last three years, and that was so strongly emphasized at our General Convention—that is, the union of the women of the church under the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, to do, in the name of their church, the great work to be done under the names of home missions—city evangelization, etc. The work the women of the church are doing on this line is done almost exclusively through undenominational societies—their church not known in the work to which they give their time and substance. While we place no opposition in the way of these great undenominational agencies, we must remember our church needs us. This state of affairs has been brought about by the church having heretofore no connectional organization through which the women could be united to do this work under the auspices of their own church. This connectional organization, authorized by General Conference, is now presented to them. Under it they can unite and go forward as a great, strong body to work for Christ's kingdom in this country. This strong movement in the salvation of souls among us, says Dr. Allen, will encourage foreign missionaries, who are depressed when the work flags at home. The wisest men to-day who are laboring for the salvation of the world say the next movement for foreign missions must be made in this country. The home fields must be brought nearer to Christ before we can extend the labors in foreign lands.

Dr. Lambuth says of this movement on the part of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society: "You are on the threshold of one of the greatest movements the church has ever known." The church is suffering great discredit and loss of influence in that this work of city evangelization is not being done by the church. Other churches outrank us in this, although in every community the most active and most numerous workers in home missions are the women of the Southern Methodist Church; but their work is not done in church societies. While many of the church members are so occupied the large majority are not at work as they would be if developed by a woman's organization in the church for that purpose. In consequence, the church suffers and sinners are lost.

We are, as a church, said Dr. Lambuth and Bishop Duncan, doing nothing for the slums of the great cities. We should and must have our own trained women at work as city missionaries who will lead our women who are inexperienced and discouraged. It is said the M. E. Church, North, has 42 mission homes in the South, and the M. E. Church, South, has not one. If this work of our women—the Parsonage and Home Mission—was encouraged and strengthened as it should be, we would soon reverse this order of things. Though hindered on every side, and yet but a small organization comparatively, it has established several missions in the West, a school in the mountains of Kentucky, and already has stirred up a strong sentiment throughout the church in favor of city evangelization under the auspices of our own church, and in many places has set the women to work as never before in this line. All this has been done besides the steady work in aiding parsonages to the average of two or three a week.

LUCINDA B. HELM.

Sympathy for the Distressed.

Our lives are all music if we but touch the chords rightly, so says one of our poets, and we all know there is a golden thread entering into the warp and woof of every-day life that is touched by sympathy for the distressed and suffering. At such a time what a boon to have on hand Dicks' Mul-en-ol to offer as a relief for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains and colic. It is soothing and cooling. Large bottles 50 cents.

Woman's Work.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Winona district convened in the M. E. Church, South, Winona, Miss., May 25, 1893, at 3:30 P. M.; Mrs. J. P. Williams, president pro tem., in the chair. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. C. B. Ames. Mrs. Loula L. Savage was elected secretary.

The roll was called, and the following delegates were present: Winona, Mrs. Turner; Carrollton, Miss Fannie McMurray; Greenwood, Mrs. Bew; Black Hawk, Miss Clara Atnee. The minutes of the last annual meeting were then read by Mrs. Williams, after which each delegate made her report.

We are glad to note that the progress of this society has been steady. But we would urge the organization of an auxiliary in each pastoral charge, if possible.

The address read by Miss Sallie Richey was instructive and forcible. The essay on missions by Miss Smylie was excellent. Mrs. J. B. Streater then read a memorial of Miss Mattie Robinson, who so faithfully served as district secretary until she was called up higher to receive her reward. How we shall miss her! Her life was beautiful and helpful, her death radiant and triumphant. On motion, the secretary was directed to place memorial on minutes.

May this district meeting prove a blessing to all within her borders, and may this good work spread until it shall reach the heart of every good woman in our church!

THE WORLD'S FAIR And American Railways.

THE QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE, widely known as the road running the "Finest Trains in the South," is in the field to carry everybody from the South to the World's Fair at Chicago. No part of the Southern country is left uncared for by this great railway and its connections. The Through Car System is an admirable exposition of the wonderful capabilities of American railroading. From New Orleans Through Sleeping Cars run daily, morning and evening, carrying its passengers via Cincinnati or Louisville, as they may select.

From Shreveport, Vicksburg and Jackson another Through Sleeping Car Line comes to join and become a part of the magnificent Vestibuled Through Trains, which passing through Birmingham and the famous Wills Valley of Alabama, is joined at Chattanooga by the train from Jacksonville, Fla., Brunswick, and Atlanta, Ga., over the E. T. V. & Ga. Ry., and proceeds north over the beautiful Cincinnati Southern, through the grandest natural scenery and most attractive historical country in the world, to Oakdale, where another magnificent Pullman car is received, coming from the Richmond & Danville System from Charleston, S. C., through Columbia, S. C., the beautiful French Broad country, and Asheville, N. C., and Knoxville, Tenn.

The time to Chicago is made so as to afford the most convenient hours for departures from the principal cities, and arrivals in Chicago.

Passengers can purchase tickets good over one line north of the River, and returning via another if they desire a variable route without extra charge. Or they can go via Cincinnati, returning via Louisville, or vice versa.

Round-trip tickets on sale at reduced rates. Agents of the Chicago line will on request assist in looking up rooms or accommodation for visitors to the Fair.

About the Paper.

The ADVOCATE, as to its publishing interests, has successfully passed both shallows and narrows and is now in the open sea.

From this date it will be run so economically that there will be no chance of failure. In this way several hundred dollars will be placed to the credit of our cash box every month. And if more can be done for the safety of the great enterprise, it shall be done.

On the other hand, such an active canvass will be undertaken for the paper as will furnish abundant opportunity for success. What a skillful mariner desires above all things in a season of storm is sea room, and of that, thanks to thoughtful brethren and a kind Providence, there is no lack. But we shall expect and must have the hearty co-operation and present active aid of every friend of the ADVOCATE.

The loss of Dr. Carter from the tripod will be seriously felt, and was, of course, quite unforeseen; but we have every hope that his able pen will be wielded with more than a warrior's might for the columns he still loves. Despite the animadversion in his "Finally," his friends are as many more than his foes as the pledges of Summer on hill and mead than the wasted tokens of the dead season in Vallambrosa.

Again, Bro. Mitchel's failure is matter of general regret and condolence. That he may do better in another field is our earnest wish and prayer. The Executive Committee of Publication, at its late meeting, gave the present incumbent, much against his expressed wishes, full authority to edit and publish the ADVOCATE until the annual meeting of the Committee at the close of October next. He accepts it as a sacred trust, and will endeavor to discharge it faithfully and in the fear of God. The claims of the outgoing publisher will be settled by arbitration or otherwise at the annual meeting. It may be well to add that the creditors of D. L. Mitchel, as publisher, have no claim for remuneration against the Publishing Committee, or CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE property or business.

We want to introduce the ADVOCATE into, at least, one thousand families where it has not hitherto gone, during the Summer months. To this end canvassers are already in the field whom we have a right to expect will be treated courteously and generously by our Methodist public. The ADVOCATE is entitled to be the great religious journal of the Southwest, and that it can be made so in spite of any human conjunctures there is not a doubt in the mind of the writer. At least, no expense or pains will be spared to realize for it this high destiny, and if you have a heart to help us do not wait for further solicitation, but send in your subscription with the cash.

To the Readers of the Advocate.

By authorization of the Executive Committee, at a meeting held on last Wednesday, the undersigned assumes charge of the publishing and editing interests of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Bro. Mitchel's failure and the editor's withdrawal, which was both voluntary and much regretted, necessitated this arrangement, and precipitated a state of things which can hardly amount to less than a revolution in the conduct of the paper. The writer hesitates to declare himself equal to such an emergency, but can not hesitate to go forward in response to what appears to be a plain call to duty. If he should fail or fall, it will not be without the assurance that he has girded on his armor reluctantly, and that those who appointed him to the post of danger are more immediately responsible for the conditions of defeat. That which makes the situation to be one of imminent crisis is, first, the former publisher's sudden failure; second, the season of the year which is most unfavorable both to business contracts and collections; third, the year of financial depression and panic; and fourth, the overflow, both actual and threatened, and destruction of the farming prospects of a large portion of our patronizing territory. But, by the help of the one Lord and of his many faithful servants in the broad and rich Delta, which is the goodly heritage of the ADVOCATE, and its patrons, we will do our best to deserve success, if it shall not be our good fortune to win it. As to the editorial conduct of the paper, we trust that it shall combine energy with prudence, and temper the sterner gifts required for such an enterprise with the humility that assumes nothing for itself and the charity that hopes everything for others. The great need of the world and the newspapers is not more knowledge, but more love; is not more truth in the abstract, but more sense in the concrete. But while moderate in expression, perhaps, we ought to give the assurance also that the management in this department will be neither timid or time-serving, or party-serving, and, while venturing nothing rashly for mere opinion's sake, have both the enthusiasm and courage of its convictions. J. M. BEARD.

Finally.

The sudden collapse of the publisher of the ADVOCATE threw the whole business upon an unprepared Committee. The Committee could give me no assurance for the future, and as I have worked the greater part of the present year for nothing, rather than further embarrass matters, I have retired. I repeat what I said when I took charge of the paper, June 10, 1886: "The present arrangement was made to meet the 'present distress,' and was thought by the Executive Committee to be the best that could be done under existing circumstances."

I appreciate two facts which my connection with the paper has disclosed to me. I have made some of the best and firmest friends, and some as determined foes as any poor editor ever made. Both have been serviceable to me, and I trust that the blessing of God will rest abundantly upon both. Should anyone desire to communicate with me, my address is 163 Delachaise Street, New Orleans, La. C. W. CARTER.

A correspondent in the Arkansas Methodist, in a commendatory notice of Bishop Galloway, at the commencement of Galloway College, says "that the people of Searcy look to him as the father of the college that bears his honored name," and adds that "whether in pulpit or on platform, in England or America, Bishop Charles B. Galloway is the peer of the best."

Preachers and Hard Times.

MR. EDITOR: You can gain some idea of how rigid the times are in this country from the following statement of facts. On this work, one of the best in the Conference, I have received just twenty-four dollars and sixty cents per month for the past seven months. When you take into account the fact that out of this sum ten mouths are to be filled and ten backs to be clothed you have a problem of financial skill that would puzzle the brain of a Jay Gould or a Vanderbilt. It has come to pass now that merchants and grocery men are not willing to wait three months for their money, and not much wonder, for the money does not come at quarterly meeting. Even stewards are not willing to trust the church they represent; not willing to sell the goods and rnn the risk of collecting the money to pay themselves. The merchants are in close places themselves. They owe more money than they can pay. All this pnts the preacher in a close corner, especially where the preacher is wholly dependent on his receipts for a living as I am, and as most preachers are. The presiding elder tells me this charge is at the top in paying the preacher this year. It so happens that no preacher in the district, not even the presiding elder, has more than half as many to clothe and feed as I. This makes a big difference in the matter of living. As for clothes, we have quit thinking of that. The old clothes are patched and darned as long as there is anything to patch or darn. What little comes in must be saved to pay for meat and bread, wood and washing. All this taxes the mind and heart with a great load of care. Day by day the times steadily grow tighter. July and August will be so tight that one will not know what to do. Of course, I, and other preachers, expect to bear our share of the financial strain. We want to do so cheerfully and in the spirit of Christ. This we try to do. Some of the people, however, seem to think that becanse the preacher does not complain as they do, he is living on the fat of the land, and has money enough and to spare. If he should complain as they do, the people would set him down as a growler—one to be shunned and dreaded by all. Some of the people have no conscience about asking the preacher to do things for them—acts of personal accommodation—that costs him money in the way of expenses, and they never once think of returning the expense money. I love to aecommodate people, bnt these hard times I do hate to pay for the privilege of doing it. If it is in my regular work, along the line of my duty, and in my own charge, why I expect to serve at my own charges.

They say Paul preached for nothing but the love of it, and supported himself for the privilege of doing it. This statement is utterly false. He refused to take anything from the Corinthians, but other churches sent him money while he was preaching in Corinth. Paul told the Corinthians plainly that it was their duty to support the preacher. They supported heathen priests, school teachers and day laborers, and the support of the preacher stands on the same ground of common honesty. The government, the people, furnish money to feed, clothe, equip and to pay soldiers who go out to battle for the general good. The support of the preacher is a question of the same kind. It would be a cruel master that would muzzle the ox that trod out his corn, and thus keep him from licking up a wisp of the wheat now and then. God who cares for oxen calls men to be preachers. If the people partake of the spiritual things served by the preacher, they ought to minister to the preacher of their temporal things. Then, over and above all else, God has ordained that they that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel; shall be supported by those to whom they preach.

The church, or the individual, that fails to contribute to the support of the preacher is guilty of sin before God and is lacking in common moral honesty. This is the substance of the teaching of Paul, the apostle of preaching without pay, as claimed by some. He wrote this to the Corinthians after he had preached the gospel to them at the expense of other churches. He shamed them by this fact, and nrged them to do by others as others had done by them.

Some say Paul was an old batchelor, and that he remained so becanse it would not take much to support him. More likely he was a widower. Be that as it may, he took care to say that he had a right to have a wife and family and to have them supported by those for whom and to whom he preached. Peter, the great apostle of a batchelor clergy, had a wife and family. Paul said he had the same right to a wife and family that Peter and the other apostles had. God never ordained a batchelor clergy. That Paul did not marry at all, or did not marry again, was purely a matter of his own personal self-denial. It was not the order of God, nor intended as an example to the church. Those who say this invert the order of God, and twist his holy Word. Paul and Barnabas both labored with their own hands, occasionally, as the necessities of the case required; but Paul was very particular to say that they had a perfect right to cease working, and to look to the church for a support. The example of Paul in not marrying and in supporting himself occasionally had a bad effect on a stingy church and penurious souls then just as it has now. They made the same use of it then they do now. Perhaps, Paul did not foresee what the effect of his example would be, and hence he had to write a letter to correct the erroneous inferences drawn from his example. He had made it particularly hard on the married apostles of that day and time. So he hastened to say to the Corinthians what God had ordained in the matter of the marriage of preachers and of the obligation of the church to support them. His example of self-denial in working was intended by him to provoke a like spirit among the members of the church; but the members applied it to the preachers just as they do now.

If any reader qnestion the correctness of these statements, let him say so and name the particular statement he objects to, and the writer will give the book, chapter and verse for all herein contained. Most of it will be found in the ninth chapter of Paul's second letter to the Corinthians. This will all be backed up, if need be, by parallel passages from other parts of the Word of God.

The religious duty and obligation of supporting the ministry is so clearly and so plainly set forth in the Word of God that a wayfaring man, though he be a fool, need not err therein.

X.

We have a friend somewhat given to dogmatism, who claims that there are only two infallible men in the world: These are himself and the Pope, though of the Pope he declares that he is sometimes doubtful. Indeed, on the part of both it is a piece of harmless arrogance that fits our human nature so becomingly that we should hardly have the heart to protest if we were not a protestant.

The Difference.

A Western politician, in a stump speech, quotes Bishop McTyeire as authority for the following aneedote: The latter, as a young minister, was riding along a country road and passed a vociferous countryman driving a wagon drawn by two yoke of oxen, which he ever and anon, and with sundry flourishes of his whip, addressed as Campbellite, Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist. Stricken with curiosity, the traveller paused and inquired of the driver why he called a steer by such a name as Campbellite. "Do you see that are oxen, stranger," said the conntryman in reply, giving Campbellite a smart whack by way of punctuation; "that are the most eccentricist critter that I ever popped a whip over. If thar ar a mudhole anywhere in a hundred yards of this wagon, he is shore to find it, and to drag the whole team into it." "And why do you call that one Baptist?" said the young preacher, now thoroughly aroused and amused. "Why, stranger, I will tell you," said the garrulous driver, striking an attitude; "that are the selfishest ole ox you ever seed; he won't eat with the others, he jes horns them off, and tries to eat the whole bale of hay by his self." "And what reason have you for calling that one Presbyterian?" "That steer," said the teamster, glancing at Presbyterian with a commendatory look, "has one very pecooliar trait; wherever you see him he is leanin' agin the yoke; he pulls jes as hard over a good road as a bad one, and up hill as down hill; and carries on as if he was jes mortal shore that what is to be will be, and ef nobody else goes, he ar boun to git thar." "And why," said the young divine, emboldened by this compliment to Presbyterian, "do you call that one Methodist?" "That," said the driver, jerking his vibrant whip through the air with sundry loud concussions, "ar the mos ornery steer in this ere whole team; he can paw up more dirt, stick out his tongue further, bellow louder, and do less work than any critter I ever see. Git up thar, Methodist, git up thar," and, pending the lashings which fell in a perfect rain upon the back of the culprit, the only other Methodist in the company hastened to make his escape.

The age, prestige and location of the ADVOCATE give it commanding influence. In all other respects it shall be made worthy of your patronage. Invest two dollars and expect a large dividend.

Our brethren who send us News from the Work are respectfully asked to boil down their correspondence. What a newspaper contribution of any sort loses in bulk it gains in pith and sweetness. Send us marrow and tid-bits which in most cases could be expressed in a sentence or two and a modest row of figures. Of that sort we hope to construct one column that will be read with interest by everybody.

Let delinquent subscribers pay up promptly, as with a view to curtailing expenses we are preparing a long list for that stage known to office seekers under the present administration as "innocuous desuetude." A paid-up subscription list would give us ten thousand dollars of working capital for the Summer months. Bro. Johns is giving us valuable help in overhauling the books, ransacking their chronology, biology, etc., and getting the speechless culprits ready for decapitation. After awhile he may add to his duties of executive that of executioner.

Four things to ask about every difficult or doubtful undertaking: 1. Is it scriptural? 2. Is it right? 3. Is it reasonable? 4. Is it providential, or has the opening presented itself?

NOTES.

The train moves. Get aboard!

Let us be religious in essentials and prejudiced in non-essentials.

People are saved at the Rescue Mission every night. A tree is known by its fruits.

The Lord will sometimes go to a place where a bigot would not dare to put his foot.

Let us be careful in boycolling the camp meeting that we don't boycott souls. This is a love-lick.

A revival of religion, genuine, old-fashioned, phenomenal in every church, in every home, in every heart!

Whisky is mean on general principles, but mean whisky in a mean man makes a combination which the average politician loves to ecalacy.

Eulalia not only smokes and drinks but, according to the female correspondents, does both to excess. That may be gossip, or even gossamer, however.

Then are some people who cling to Christ in the hope of avoiding the cross, but surely they forget how near to that engine of death our Lord's body was placed. "Let us follow him without the gate bearing his reproach."

Men may know the catechism perfectly and not grow in grace. It is only by keeping in touch with the "Standards" that people grow in religion, but by keeping in touch with the living God. "I am the vine, ye are the branches."

The great American public, seated in its world chariot, scarce experiences a jolt as that sumptuous conveyance sweeps over the prone and bleeding body of the American Sabbath. The book of God declares "thou shalt not be partaker with them."

The World's Congress of Religions so broad that even the broadest grasp of independent newspaper is startled at the prospect. The man who has the weakest canse and swiftest vocabulary will get the floor, and the moderator be on his mettle.

Licensing the dram shops to counteract the drink habit has about as much sense in it as putting a municipal tag on a dog to keep him from going mad. The tag gives the dog the freedom of the streets even in dog-days, and the license does about the same for the saloon.

The World's Fair Exhibition is a fair exhibition of the world which the average Christian can afford to despise. Our Lord saw it all in the desert of Jericho, nearly two thousand years ago, and not only averted his eyes, but declined to receive it and all its millions as a precious gift.

The Times-Democrat publishes a dispatch from Waterproof, La., dated June 25, announcing an attack on the steamer Albert Lee, bound for the upper Tensas with provisions for overflow sufferers. Men loaded with Winchester rifles fired again and again into the retreating steamer, Capt. Neal Miller being severely wounded in his hip and leg. The boat succeeded in getting away.

The United Brethren, a branch of Methodism, through their recent General Conference, have done away with the pastoral time limit. Methodism moves.—N. O. Christian Advocate.

What! Does the NEW ORLEANS mean to endorse the destruction of the pastoral time limit? We hold our breath until the answer comes.—Texas Advocate.

What! Can't a man express his opinion as to the direction of a movement without endorsing that movement? As we see it, the movement is in the direction of "the destruction of the pastoral time limit."

God does not bestow his gifts that we may use them for selfish purposes. Every gift he bestows is in the nature of a trust, to be used for the good of others. St. Peter clears up the whole matter when he says: "As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another as good stewards of the manifold grace of God." And St. Paul shows the qualification to use the gift in these words: "For unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ." The capacity of the gift is the measure of the grace.

One afternoon recently two students were on a Northside car, and one hastily deciding to leave the car, called to his friend Mr. B. to come. "Wait a minute until I pay my fare," and he offered the conductor the five cents which he had overlooked. Glancing at him sharply, the conductor said, "I take you to be from the Moody Institute." "Why so?" "I don't often have men do that kind of work with me." A few days later a cable train was stopped by a parade and most of the passengers got off, leaving this student Mr. B. seated alone in the front of the grip-car. A slap on the shoulder startled him, and he looked up to find a conductor beside him, who said, "You don't know me, but I know you. You paid me your fare the other day when I didn't collect it. Come back with me to my car." The astonished Mr. B. went with him to the third car in the rear, and as they sat down together the conductor asked, "What is it that makes men do such things? I want to get it!" "I am a Christian," said Mr. B., "I love the Lord Jesus Christ and do these things out of love for him."—Exchange.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

The issue of the ADVOCATE last week was nearly seven thousand.

Send us in some new subscribers with the cash, and fear not.

No, education is not religion, though it is sometimes superstition.

Let us preach the truth in love without fear of giving offense—to the Lord.

Let this be our subject of generous emulation—"Who shall love the most?"

If you can love the man that hates you, there is divinity in your religion.

The ADVOCATE is about a half-century old, and will easily complete the century.

On June 20 there were distinct shocks of an earthquake in parts of Georgia and South Carolina.

Rev. John Stafford has been compelled by high water to leave his work, and will spend the Summer in the city.

It makes no difference which fork of the road High Steeple takes, the giraffes in long procession will follow after.

It may be well enough to turn out the rascals, but to turn out a good man is pathetic enough to make a politician weep.

Rev. H. P. Gibbs has brought us under obligation for $3 contributed to the relief of the flood sufferers of Louisiana.

The Opelousas District Conference is in session at Abbeville, La., presided over by that live preacher and worker, Rev. John A. Miller.

Bishop A. W. Wilson has been elected to deliver the first course of lectures on the E. W. Cole foundation before the theological students of Vanderbilt University.

The ADVOCATE is run at an expense of several hundred dollars less this month than last. In the financial line we are bound to succeed if our patrons will be kind.

Dr. C. F. Evans, who appeared in our columns as an interesting correspondent last week, is visiting friends in the city, and gave the ADVOCATE a pleasant call.

The Saloon vs. the Sabbath is a case that is creating a great popular interest. Every American and New Orleanian is on the jury and will be heard in the verdict.

Dear brother in the ministry, do not wait for a personal letter from a very busy man, but send us a list of subscribers right away, and forward the cash with it, if possible.

Our friend, Dr. J. W. Pearce, of the Tulane University, has been lecturing to the North Louisiana Chautauquans. It is needless to say that they were both profited and pleased.

Bro. F. D. Van Valkenburgh is attending the Opelousas District Conference, and will be absent from the city for a week or ten days. He will look after the ADVOCATE business.

Rev. B. F. Mills, the great evangelist, has been made a Doctor of Divinity by an Iowa College. Our Sam has dodged a thunderbolt or two of this description and is still popular.

Rev. F. N. Parker spends this week at Amite City, and that goodly town will obtain some rare service at his hands. We commend him and the ADVOCATE business in his hands to the brethren.

A distinguished speaker said recently on a great occasion that "art does not so much conserve the holiness of beauty as the beauty of holiness." That rounded the sentence and brought down the house.

Prof. John H. Kirkland, for years professor of Latin language and literature in Vanderbilt University, has been elected chancellor of that institution in place of the venerable L. C. Garland, who retires on account of age and infirmities.

Wilhelms Church, a beautiful house of worship in Claiborne parish, which our Congregational friends began to build and were not able to finish, and which was later purchased and completed by the Methodists, will be dedicated by Rev. J. M. Beard, Aug. 5.

We have a great deal concerning the paper in this issue, because it is a live issue and not a dead paper, and the people will want to know. For the same reason we have omitted an hundred and one other references to an equal number of live topics that sat upon our pen.

The Rescue Mission, at the intercession of Mrs. J. M. Beard, has been presented with a large quantity of valuable furniture and household utensils by the Ladies' Aid Society of Rayne Memorial Church. A good cause has been greatly helped, and all the parties are to be congratulated.

Our correspondent, Bro. H. P. Lewis, of Caseyville, Miss., is advised that the advertisement to which he refers as objectionable on the ground of offering much money for the investment of a little is misunderstood by him, the offer aforesaid referring to Confederate money. Perhaps the wording is obscure, but, read with this explanation, there is no hint at anything immoral.

Rev. John Hannon, D. D., of quondam New Orleans fame, and whom to know is to love, has been broken upon the wheel of matrimony, as was inevitable. Miss Lucy Hale, California, is the lady; her profession, educator; and the time, June 15. The ADVOCATE sends hearty greetings to the young couple.

Bro. H. S. Johns, the pastor of our church in Algiers, who knows how to appreciate some things that cost more than is paid for them, offers his services to the new publisher of the ADVOCATE for three hours daily free of charge. It is needless to say that his generous offer was accepted. Now, if somebody will contribute a little cash, we will breathe easier.

The congregation of Craps Street Church, were delighted on Sunday evening, June 25, by listening to an excellent sermon from the young licentiate of Carondelet Street Church, Rev. Henry Carre. It was the first sermon which the young brother has preached. Text: John vi, 35. Indeed, Christ only can fill the aching void within. A.

Rev. William Wimberly, of the Indian Mission Conference, and stationed at Guthrie, Oklahoma, has been paying a lengthy visit to old friends and parishioners in this city. Oklahoma and the wild West seem to have been tonic for him, and he preaches and prays with the vim and fire of a true Westerner. He says that he found the Salvation Army marching through the streets of Guthrie, and joined the procession. That was like him. Many friends would welcome him back, if he should decide to return to Louisiana.

A dispatch to the ADVOCATE last week announced the death of Rev. Benjamin Jones, on the superannuated list of the Mississipi Conference, and its oldest member. He was greatly loved and honored at Long Beach, Miss., where he had resided for some years, and was held in universal esteem throughout the Southwest as a minister of eloquence and learning. Bro. Jones' career as an educator began many years ago at Jackson, La., where he was the head of a flourishing female seminary, and closed only with the end of his long and useful life, for he was still engaged in his loved employ when as an octogenarian he was stricken by death. Much of his life, however, was passed as an itinerant, and as such there was no braver or more self-sacrificing soldier of the cross in the Mississippi ranks. We trust that some one who knew him better will prepare a suitable memoir for the columns of the ADVOCATE.

Meadville, Miss.

We held our second quarterly meeting, or Conference, on May 20 and 21. Every church on this charge was well represented by its officials. The stewards' reports were very gratifying to the presiding elder and pastor. We would say, God bless these faithful men who are laboring to sustain the church of Christ, spiritually and temporally. We enjoyed three soul-refreshing sermons from Bro. Little. His name is Little, but he is not a little preacher by any means. His sermons were strong, pointed and pithy; his themes Sunday were Ephraim's Idols, and Household Religion. They will long be remembered and felt on this charge. We would tell you how much we love our presiding elder if we were not afraid some brother would get jealous. Anyway, we don't think that any other man in the Mississippi Conference could suit us so well. We always realize his presence, but by his spirit of love and firmness. No one fears to see him come; none stay away on account of his presence, either official or non-official members. I think my charge is on rising grounds. One of my churches, Cool Springs, that by prophecy was dead, is alive and doing good work. We have five Sunday-schools, three prayer meetings; three accessions to the church, and more to follow. We are expecting revivals at each church on the charge. Lend us your prayers.

BIBLE CORNER.

Paul's weapon: The Word of God, quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

Paul's commandment: "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit."

Paul's exhortation: "Let us, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need."

Paul's example: "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend."

Paul's profession: "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift."

Paul's aim: "I press toward the mark for the prize of my high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Facts about the Salvation Army.

From a valuable article in Funk and Wagnalls' Encyclopedia of Missions we gather the following facts about the Salvation Army, which will be of interest to all students of modern religious movements.

It now occupies 34 countries and colonies, and its 4,000 corps are officered by some 10,000 men and women, to none of whom is any salary guaranteed, and none of whom receive any more than the supply of their actual wants. These officers speak 29 languages. The total number of meetings held weekly is estimated at 50,000.

The Army publishes in fifteen languages twenty-seven weekly and fifteen monthly journals, having a total annual circulation of 33,500,000 copies. The annual circulation of books and pamphlets is put at 4,000,000 more. The total sum raised annually by the Army is reckoned at $2,250,000. Balance-sheets are issued every year from all the headquarters in the different countries, and quarterly in all the corps or local bodies. The balance-sheets of the various headquarters are audited by independent accountants.

Speaking of the work done in the United States during the year 1890, the article says "that the labors of the Army here have not been without visible result is shown by the fact that during the last twelve months no fewer than 22,550 persons professed conversion at its penitent forms. During the month of October no fewer than 1,070,000 persons attended the indoor meetings of the Army in this country, and a careful calculation shows that its open-air meetings during the past year were attended by 4,000,000 persons. This total is the more remarkable, because the municipal authorities in not a few cities either forbid open-air work altogether or placed restrictions upon it either so numerous or of such character as to render it of little value compared with what the Army considers it might be. It is estimated, however, that, taking both forms of meeting together, no fewer than 12,000,000 persons have during the past year listened to religious truth from the Army."

The Army is at work in the following countries: Great Britain, the United States, Canada and New Foundland, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, France and Switzerland, India and Ceylon, Sweden and Norway, Denmark, Germany, Finland, Belgium, St. Helena, Argentine Republic.

Missionary Debt—Mississippi Conference.

WOODVILLE DISTRICT.

East Baton Rouge, W. L. Linfield, P. C. $4 50

MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Landerdale, W. T. Browning, P.C. $4 11

Dr. Lambuth writes that we "are good on a long pull and will pull out." But how much shorter the pull would have been if every preacher had led his people in the observance of a week of prayer and self-denial! If more of them had pulled instead of "hucking!"

JACKSON DISTRICT.

Pocahontas circuit, J. W. Tinnin, P. C. $2

MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Chunkey circuit, L. P. Meador, P. C. $1

And Chunkey circuit is the first pastoral charge in the Meridian district to meet its proportion of the missionary debt! And while it has not done much, yet by the observance of a week of prayer and self-denial it has done more than three stations and a dozen circuits in the western part of the Mississippi Conference! Brethren, the second quarter of this Conference year is rapidly closing. Remittances are not equal to those of the first quarter, and we need more than $1,000 to pay "our part" of the debt. It has been a "long pull," but not a "pull all together." Let us do better and clear the decks.

For Stewards.

MR. EDITOR: I have lately read with great interest a tractate of eleven pages by Dr. C. H. Jones, of Greenville, Miss., on "The Duties and Responsibilities of Stewards and Members of the Church." It is written in very direct and earnest style, putting it on the consciences of stewards to fulfill their duties faithfully, and on the members to heed the solemn vows they took in joining the church, to renounce worldliness and consecrate a due proportion of their substance to God's cause. Coming from such a layman, it will profit all who read. I suppose it can be had of the author cheap.

J. P. DRAKE.

Victor Hugo was a firm believer in immortality, and once gave expression to his faith in this rather curious declaration: "Yes, I feel that I shall be complete only up yonder! That which later I shall speak, now I only stammer. I shall continue my being in sublimating it. I am the tadpole of an archangel!"

Alas! Victor.

Dandruff forms when the glands of the skin are weakened, and, if neglected, baldness is sure to follow. Hall's Hair Renewer is the best preventive.

Important Purchase.

Prof. T. W. Dyer, the popular teacher of boys and young men, whose patronage has always exceeded his accommodation in the way of school room, has recently bought the valuable Louis Busch property, on the corner of Coliseum and St. Andrew streets, and will remove into it at the opening of the Fall session.

Prof. Dyer and the quarter of the city to which he goes are both to be congratulated upon this event, which is indeed one of interest to the whole community. Those who have boys to educate should not fail to make a note of it, as this move will greatly increase the facilities and stimulate the enterprise of this popular educator and the institution of which he is the head. The building and grounds are large, handsome and well adapted for the use, while the locality is exceedingly eligible. We predict that the increase in patronage will more than justify the removal and expenditure.

Notices.

Members of the Sunday-school Convention for the northern half of Meridian district will be met at Scooba, Wednesday morning, July 19, and conveyed to DeKalb free of charge.

Dear Brethren: You will take notice that Tuesday and Wednesday will be the eleventh and twelfth days of July, and not tenth and eleventh, as stated in the call. Let there be a full attendance at Quitman by the preachers and others south of Lauderdale county. Magnify the work and the occasion.

A ROYAL PROGRESS.

The Summer is a queen who proudly makes
A royal progress through the subject land;

TO RESIST THE ATTACK —of the germs of Consumption, Scrofula, Grip, Malaria, and many other diseases —means fight or die for all of us. These germs are everywhere in the air we breathe. The odds are in favor of the germs, if our liver is inactive and our blood impure.

What is needed most is an increase in our germ-fighting strength. To do this successfully you need to put on healthy flesh, rouse the liver to vigorous action, so it will throw off these germs, and purify the blood so that there will be no "weak spot," nor soil for germ-growth.

We claim for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, that it does all this in a way peculiar to itself. It is the development of generations of medical thought—it has stood the test of a quarter of a century of cures.

That is why the makers can guarantee it. In every trouble caused by torpid liver or impure blood, if the "Discovery" fails to benefit or cure, your money is refunded.

Pretty strong reasons for trying Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. $500 if you can't be cured

HOME CIRCLE.

"CREEDLESS."

BY ROBERT WHITAKER.

"I have no creed," with bitter sneer he said,
And yet his better life belied the word;
For he, like other men, was deeply stirred
By things religious: all his calmness fled,
When, by the side of his beloved dead,
The still small voice, from unseen hills he heard,
And faith, and hope, and love, though sadly blurred,
The unveiled eyes of watchful angels read
Written upon the tables of his heart.
And he himself had been surprised to know
How much he yet believed, and with what might;
For so it was that only when the right
Controlled the fountains of his thought below,
In word and deed he played the better part.

The Art of Keeping Well.

There are five great factors concerned in the preservation of health. First and foremost must be placed education, using the word in its widest sense to include physical development, moral training and mental culture. Too little attention has hitherto been paid to education from the point of view of health, but recently the importance of hygiene has been more fully recognised. A right system of education so trains the mind that it is eager to occupy itself with some pursuit at all times; and thus people are prevented from falling into idle habits which not only waste time, but give the imagination opportunity to conjure up all sorts of fanciful disorders. We all know the hysterical, nervous, delicate girl, who is so only because she has neither work nor occupation. Educated girls who lead useful lives do not suffer from hysterics, nor do workmen's wives, in general, because both these classes have their time fully and profitably occupied. An interesting point worthy of notice is that the criminal class, taken as a whole, is uneducated; and it has been shown that a distinct relation exists between ill health and crime. Hence the importance of the preservation of physical health for the preservation of moral health; and we thereby recognise that health itself has a distinct moral value.

The second factor in personal hygiene is the regulation of food and drink—the regulation not only of the quantity, but also of the quality. This last point is often neglected, but it is important, especially so in children. A common mistake is to force children to take food which is distasteful to them. It must not, therefore, be inferred that children are to have whatever they like best; but when a child shows a great distaste for, say, mutton fat, the best way is to make the fat into a suet pudding, which in all probability will be readily eaten. Violent prejudices which are conceived in early life, owing to want of thought on the part of parents or guardians, often remain fixed, and cause trouble and annoyance in after life. The quantity of food we take ought to depend greatly on our work. A man when he is resting needs about half as much food as when he is engaged in laborious work.

Thirdly, the functions of our different organs require to be exercised and encouraged. It is not necessary to do more than mention the value of mere cleanliness and care of the skin. A dirty skin means that more work is thrown upon delicate internal organs, especially the kidneys, and the working power of the whole body is thus lowered. In this connection the hygienic clothing of the body must be mentioned. Regularity of the action of the bowels must be secured; many dangerous illnesses arise from want of care in this respect. The importance of a suitable amount of sound sleep can not be exaggerated; for however important regular and sufficient exercise may be, ample time for rest and recuperation is equally important.

This brings us to the next point to be considered—exercise, the essential requirement of which is regularity. It is surprising to note how all our organs become accustomed to regular and habitual exercise and rest. Regularity in the time of going to bed conduces to sleep; regularity in meal times conduces to most efficient digestion; and regularity in the amount of exercise is attended with less fatigue and more benefit than exercise of varying amount taken irregularly.

Lastly, there is the question of occupation. Certain occupations are necessarily unhealthy; others are unhealthy because of the badly-ventilated rooms in which they are carried on. The delicacy of many shop girls is often rightly attributable to this cause, especially when the lungs are affected. Personal hygiene teaches the precautions which must be taken by those engaged in unhealthy occupations, the scrupulous cleanliness to be practiced by workers in lead, the outdoor life which, as far as can be, must be adopted by those who work in confined rooms and offices. It also teaches that want of occupation is unhealthy, and leads to premature death.—Cassell's Family Magazine.

Your Work.

Say not thet you have no influence, for the tiniest child has a power which no human arithmetic can reckon. Do not affirm that you have no resources, for if you can call God your own, you have the wealth and power and wisdom of the Infinite behind you. Forth, then, and begin your work. It is work which only you can accomplish. It is work which the world needs. It is work which the Savior calls. It is work which shall have results stretching into eternity. Wait not for some great opportunity; the golden year is now; the accepted time is to-day; the appointed sphere is where you are. Do not quarrel with your call as; Moses tried to do, or begin to make excuses about your weakness and inefficiency. Here is the answer to all your objections: "Certainly I will be with thee." Go, then, like Gideon, in this thy might, and the strongholds of Satan will fall before thee in a manner as unaccountable to the men of the world as was the crash of the walls of Jericho at the blast of the ram's horns.—William M. Taylor.

You, Yourself.

If you desire to be great and good and efficient in God's cause, or in any good work, make the most of the capital in hand. Develop and train and prune yourself. The glory of manhood is its royal kingship over the empire of self. If you can conquer that, then there is nothing you may not conquer. Make the kingdom of your own soul glorious, and real greatness will come to you. Every man whom God has made has that within him which, if properly developed, might make him a light in the darkness of the world, and a blessing to his fellow-men. It has been well said that the secret of genius is simply hard work. Few men who have risen to eminence in the world could repeat the experience of Lord Byron, who says of himself that he waked up one morning and found himself famous. Unremitting, tireless labor of hands and brains is the price that must be paid for true success in every sphere of life. The influence and assistance of kind friends may be helpful in the beginning of one's career, but ultimate results depend entirely upon you, yourself. It is your energy, your determination, your unwearied zeal that must win the victory if the victory is won. Take the capital that you have in hand and make the most of it. It is not always those who have the largest amount to start with who come out the best in the end. More than one young man who has left the paternal roof with a mere pittance in his pocket, and with few educational advantages, has outstripped in a brief time the envied heir of wealth and luxury.

One fruitful seed dropped in good soil is of more value than a hundred measures scattered on the barren ground. If there is any glory in this world that is worth having, it is that which comes to him who has triumphed over the circumstances of vicious parentage, and corrupt influences in early life, and risen up to the stature of a true and honest manhood. The world has many such heroes whose names are unwritten on the pages of history, and whom God alone honors. Selected.

Full Surrender.

Perhaps you have never given yourself entirely over to the mastership of the Lord Jesus. We are his by many free and rights. But too few of us recognize his lordship. We are willing enough to take him as Savior, we hesitate to make him king. We forget that God has exalted him to be prince as well as Savior. And the divine order is irreversible. Those who ignore the lordship of Jesus can not build up a strong or happy life.

Put the sun in its central throne, and all the motions of the planets assume a beautiful order. Put Jesus on the throne of life, and all things fall into harmony and peace. Seek first the kingdom of God, and all things are yours. Consecration is the indispensable condition of blessedness.

So shall light break on thy path, such as has not shone there for many days. Yea, "thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw herself; but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended."

The whole of Christian living, in my opinion, hinges on the way in which Christian people read the Bible for themselves. All sermons and addresses, all Bible readings and classes, all religious magazines and books, can never take the place of our own quiet study of God's precious Word. We may measure our growth in grace by the growth of our love for private Bible study. And we may be sure that there is something seriously wrong when we lose our appetite for the bread of life. Perhaps we have been eating too many sweets, or taking too little exercise, or breathing too briefly in the bracing air which sweeps over the uplands of spiritual communion with God.

There are a few simple rules which may help many more to acquire this holy art, and I venture to note them down. May the Holy Spirit himself own and use them!—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

A Lesson for Hard Times.

Some years ago, in a time of financial difficulty, a merchant in Philadelphia had a note of some six thousand dollars coming due, and the source on which he depended for the money failed him. He was in great distress of mind, and talked over the matter with his wife very despondently. She was a praying woman, and said, "If there is a power in prayer, I will get that money for you."

He had little faith that a miracle would be wrought for his help, and it seemed as if anything short of that could not serve him. The time was very near, and no money had yet come. Sitting at his place of business, a man came in against whom he held a mortgage, which had yet two years to run. The man came in to ask if he was willing to take the money then, and allow him to take up the mortgage. Very thankfully he accepted the offer and made the transfer. Still it was much short of the sum he needed. Then the man said he had some money to invest, and asked if he had a good mortgage he would like to sell him. He had, and now the sum was considerably increased, though not yet enough to pay his note. As he walked towards his home, with spirits considerably lightened, he met another man against whom he held a mortgage which had yet three years to run. He, too, wished to pay it up now, and this made more than enough for his pressing needs.

This account was received from the merchant's own lips, after a prayer meeting service, in which various answers to prayer were stated. He said he had frequently thought of writing it out for the encouragement of others, but had never done so. Perhaps it may encourage other business men to look to the Lord for supplies when in similar straits. If they do not come, it will be because he does not see it best.—American Messenger.

"We had mince pie at our Thanksgiving dinner," said Maudie.

"We had muffins," said Bobby.

"What kind of muffins?" asked Mandie.

"Ragamuffins," replied Bobby.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

THE BOY'S TEAM—FOR SOME BOYS I KNOW.

BY TARPLEY STARR.

Learn patience, boy, and self-control,
You own a team that's full of fire;
Two wayward steeds that draw your soul,
One called Self-will, and one Desire.

With quivering limbs, and tossing mane,
And flashing eyes, behold them stand,
Just ready now for you to rein,
They wait the touch of your young hand.

O guide them, boys, 'tis this they need,
They'll bear you on to life or death;
They're fierce as Arab's untrained steeds,
Or docile things as e'er drew breath.

Hold fast, dear lad, nor let them slip.
Feed well, groom well, nor overload;
Urge on; but use no reckless whip,
And always keep the plain, straight road.

Thus life may be one pleasant drive,
If thus you go at good sense rate,
Till at God's palace you arrive,
And hitch your team before the gate.

But reckless random - on slap-dash,
Wild as the winds - no guiding check—
Ah! soon or late there comes the crash,
And you go down amid the wreck.

More Blessed.

The first thing that Bella Brown saw, when she entered the dining-room one morning, was a delicious basket of fruit on the side table.

"O, mama!" she cried, "where did it come from?"

"Lucy Graham sent it over by her father this morning. The fruit, he said, was all raised on his farm."

"What a delicious peach!" Bella said. "Mama, did you acknowledge the gift?"

"I wrote Lucy a note of thanks in your name."

"Thank you, mama! But don't you think there is rather more than we shall need for our own use? I was just thinking that little Russel Dean, the minister's son, might relish some of these. You know he has been ailing all the Summer, and Mrs. Dean says he has no appetite."

Bella arranged a small basket of fruit—grapes, rosy-cheeked apples, peaches, pears, and apricots. "He can feast his eyes on them, at any rate," she said, as she sent Jacob to deliver the basket.

"Russel, dear, see what Bella Brown sent you," said Mrs. Dean, ten minutes later.

Russel raised his head from the pillow. "O, mema!" he cried, as he lifted a cluster of grapes from the basket, "are you sure she meant them for me?"

"Yes, dear; Jacob said, 'Miss Bella sent them to Master Russel.'"

"Mama," said Russel, as he feasted his eyes on the basket, "I was wishing I could send something of everything here to little Jimmy Thomas. I don't believe he ever had such a treat as this, and you know he is lame and can not get about."

"So you shall, Russel;" and mama stood beside him while he laid aside a portion of the fruit for Jimmy's use.

Jimmy sat by the window of his humble home, with his crutches standing beside him, watching the boys play across the street.

"They never look this way," he said bitterly. "I am only little Jimmy Thomas, and nobody cares for me. Come in," he added, as a knock sounded at the door.

"Here's a basket of fruit that the minister's little boy sent you."

"Sent me? Isn't there some mistake?"

"I guess not, for the minister's wife said to me, 'Take these around to little Jimmy Thomas, and tell him that Russel sent them to him.'"

Tears filled Jimmy's eyes. "O, mother!" he said, "and I was just complaining because nobody cared for me." He held a soft, pink-tinted peach against his cheek. "I'd like to pass the blessing on, mother. There is little Molly Price upstairs, alone all day, while her mother is out washing. I could easily spare something for her."

A few minutes later Molly heard footsteps at her door. "Mama," she said, but tears filled her eyes when she saw it was Mrs. Thomas.

"Molly, my Jimmy is thinking that you must be lonely, and as the minister's son has been sending him a gift, he wants you to share it with him," and she laid an apple and a cluster of grapes before Molly's wondering eyes.

The child gazed at the fruit in speechless joy, and Mrs. Thomas shut the door softly and returned to Jimmy. Morning Star.

Too Beautiful to Kill.

In the Pittsburg Post is this story of Fergus, a Scotch lad, fourteen years old: His father had given him a new rifle and a new canoe, and now in the Adirondacks, near Upper St. Regis Lake, he was expecting to shoot his first deer. On an August day he went from camp with Calvin, the guide, and was about to embark on the lake. It was so lovely that Fergus held his breath to look, till all at once he felt Calvin's hand on his shoulder. One look at the guide's face, and he knew that something was happening.

At first Fergus heard nothing but his own heart-beats. Then, as he recovered himself a little, he could hear a rustle and an occasional crackle, and presently, looking up the bank, he discerned the swaying of a bush. Something was moving there. Suddenly the bushes parted, and a head looked through! It was the head of which Fergus had lovingly and longingly dreamed—a beautiful antlered head held proudly up, the eyes alert, the nostrils wide apart. As the creature broke from cover his mouth was open; he was hot and thirsty and eager to get at the water.

"Does he see us?" whispered Calvin.

Fergus shook his head.

"Let him get well out of the bushes, then raise your rifle," whispered the guide.

Inch by inch Fergus had already lifted his rifle, and was now looking along it when the deer advanced, coming twenty feet nearer. Then, assuring himself that all was safe, he stood, his ears at a sharp angle, directly facing Fergus.

Fergus could see the beautiful, scared eyes of the deer.

"Fire!" said Calvin.

But instead Fergus dropped his rifle to his side. There was a sudden movment, a crashing of boughs, and the place was empty.

"Why, Fergus!" cried Calvin, disappointed and amazed; "why, Fergus!" . . .

He looked curiously into the boy's face and discovered that each bright eye had a tear in it, and that the under lip was quivering.

"Oh, Calvin!" cried Fergus, "I couldn't do it. I hadn't the heart to do it. I'd die myself before I'd kill anything so beautiful."

Sam, Tom and Jerry.

One day I found a toad waiting at my greenhouse door.

"Well," I said, "come in, if you want to; I guess you'll pay your way; at any rate, it won't cost much to board you." He seemed to understand my words, for he hopped, and rested on the walk to look about him. He must have sent some word by telephone to his friends of his discovery, for only two mornings afterward, at the very same door there sat another toad.

"Well," I said, "surely this is a committee on green-houses, and here is No. 2. Won't you walk in, too?" And, as I pushed open the door, in he went. The fourth morning, I let in No. 3, a monstrous toad. Once in the house, they showed no desire to get out, and in a few days I began to grow surprised to see what wise little creatures they were. They are just as unlike as three boys could be! Tom was rather shy, and kept by himself. Jerry was sociable, and soon followed me all around. Sam was too large and too old to hop very briskly, and would spend a full forenoon looking out of the window, or climbing along the rough stone wall that forms one side of the green-house.

I taught them to know me, by making a certain sound, and by calling them by name as I worked around the plants. Jerry was the first to make friends. Before long, wherever I might be busy, he quickly made his way toward me, and was at once rewarded with a worm or slug. And how cunningly he ate it! He would pretend at first that he did not see it! Suddenly he would turn around and, with head down, watch it, as a cat watches a mouse, each toe twitching. Then a sudden grab and the worm was in his mouth. He always had a hard time swallowing it; and when it was fairly down he would give one last gulp of delight. Pretty soon they would come when I put out my hand, and at last would climb into my hand to get their food. I often filled a tin dish with slugs and worms, and to see the three toads around it eating was very amusing.

One day in February Jerry acted strangely. He kept lifting his legs, and seemed uneasy. I noticed a thin skin rolled up about the middle of his back. He put up his right leg and drew it out of this skin as easy as papa takes off his overcoat, and then did the same with his left foot. He rolled up the skin, stuffed it down his throat and swallowed it; and there he was with a bright green coat on. He had taken off his winter coat and put on his spring suit. The gentle heat of the green-house had made him think that spring had come, for it was a little early for spring garments. Later, the other two toads did the same.

These toads are dainty little things. They utterly refused to eat a dead bug or worm. There is nothing vicious about them. Their little tongues are soft as silk. I never heard but one of them make the least sound, and that was the smallest kind of squeal, when greatly frightened.—Our Little Men and Women.

Hints for Money-Making Girls.

Hundreds of thousands of girls have a great desire to make a little money, and I don't know whether to call it a laudable one or not. I am not a believer in girls going out into the world to work unless it is absolutely necessary. But when it is then I want them to do it in the right way; I want them to think that every particle of work they do is done not only for their own sakes, not only for their employers—it must be right and honest in the sight of God. A very clever woman not very long ago wrote an article about working women, and in it she used this beautiful quotation of Ruskin's:—"Queens you always should be. Queens to your lovers, to your husbands, to your sons; queens of a higher mystery to the world beyond." But she did not put the rest of the quotation, and in that lies the story of the non-success of many girls. This is it—"But, alas! you are too often idle and careless queens, grasping at majesty in the least things, while you abdicate in the greatest."

With only the hope of making money your work will be worth little, and certainly not be worthy of consideration by noble minds or by the good God who watches over you day and night. You girls hurt yourselves, hurt your work, make it of less value and yourselves less respected because you so entirely draw the line at what you will and what you will not do. That which your hands find to do is the duty before you, and the woman who, employed in a counting-house, finds it but little trouble to keep her desk in order and, when she has time, to straighten up somebody else's who hasn't the time, is the woman whose work is going to be noted and counted as valuable. The woman who announcing that she must get work or starve, and who yet is not willing to be at her desk at eight o'clock in the morning, deserves to starve. The woman who knowing that for a certain number of hours she should in honor give her time to her employer, is but a poor worker when ten minutes after the hour finds her arriving, and five minutes before the hour to go away sees her getting her cloak ready and arranging for her out-door costume. The good workman doesn't drop the pen or the hammer at the stroke of the hour; he finishes first that which he is doing, for his heart is in his work, and that's the way it must be with you girls if you want to succeed and make even "a little money."—The Ladies' Home Journal.

Are You Safe?

Two little girls were playing with their dolls in a corner of the nursery, and singing as they played:

"Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe on his gentle breast,
There by his love o'ershaded
Sweetly my soul shall rest."

Mother was busy writing, only stopping now and then to listen to the little ones' talk, unobserved by them.

"Sister, how do you know you are safe?" said Nellie, the younger of the two.

"Because I am holding Jesus with both my hands—tight!" promptly replied sister.

"Ah, that's not safe," said the other child. "Suppose Satan came along and cut your two hands off!"

Little sister looked very troubled for a few moments, dropped poor dolly, and thought seriously. Suddenly her face shone with joy, and she cried out:

"Oh, I forgot! I forgot! Jesus is holding me with his two hands, and Satan can't cut his off; so I'm safe!" Day Spring.

There is indeed a mighty work to be done ere we die; that of resisting the desires and the habits of nature, till they are at least vanquished, if not exterminated; that of transmuting the character of earth, which we have at the first, into the character of heaven, which we must acquire afterwards, else heaven we never shall reach. The distance, great as it is between the two states, must be traversed on this side of death, or we shall never attain a state of blessedness on the other side of death. —Chalmers.

We may truly conceive of God, though we can not fully conceive of him. We may have right apprehensions of him, though not an exact comprehension of him.—Mason.

Dr. King's Royal Germetuer

Is a unique, peerless preparation, which embodies the best and latest fruits of medical research, and differs radically from ordinary medicines in a number of particulars. There are three of them:

1. It is as pleasant to take as lemonade.

3. IT CURES WHEN ALL ELSE FAILS.

REV. SAM P. JONES SAYS:

"My wife, who was an invalid from nervous sick headache, has been entirely cured by six weeks' use of Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. Her health is perfect. In three weeks two of my children were cured completely of catarrh. IT IS TRULY A GREAT REMEDY."

GENERAL LONGSTREET SAYS:

"I have suffered for months past from insomnia and indigestion, and failing of relief, was induced by a friend to try Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. I am now relieved, and feel permanently so."

TESTED AND PROVED FOR YEARS.

TARRY, Miss., April 21, 1890.

We have been using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer for several years in our family, and have recommended it to many others. It has in every case done what is claimed for it, as far as I know, and I regard it as the best medicine we have ever had in our family.

Mrs. J. J. HALSEY.

ALE—There is no richer field of religious raphy and obituary than that which re- s the experiences, in life and in death, of children of the church; hence it is with a e of privilege that I pay this brief tribute he memory of ALICA HALE, who departed with Jesus, Friday morning, May 5, 1893 was the youngest child of Dr. S. E. Hale the now sainted Mrs. Alice Hale, whose mory is precious to those who knew her as nd and benefactress.

Alice was in her thirteenth year at the e of her death just the period when the d-life was expanded in its mental and al resources. Already she had given prom- of a talented, symmetrical and useful nhood. Very like her mother, she seemed a projection of that mother's life. As it he has not lived in vain. The maturity of her ught in conversation elicited comment from who came in contact with her.

er religious life began in that atmosphere ich only a devout mother can supply. Here early learned the way to Jesus, and three rs ago, shortly after her mother's death, she ted with the church. She was a member of Rayne Memorial Sunday-school, and loved association. The Sunday before her death, ough feeble from some days of sickness, first request on waking was, "Can I go to day-school to-day?" She was a regular mmunicant. Several times this year it was privilege to administer to her the Supper he Lord. Little did I think, as she devoutly elt to receive it, that I should so soon meet dead body at the same altar for burial. r last hours were clouded with the coma of ase; but at the last the Savior triumphed death in her. Her testimony was one of e profoundest evidences of the supernatural ur holy religion. For hours she had been nscious, with every physical function sur- ed, practically dead; but toward the end began to speak, and the word was that elest came, "Jesus, Jesus," and it died on lips. He joined at Toccoo- a, in Toccopola circuit, Grenada district, th Mississippi Conference, and remained re until translated to the church triumph- t. He died with malarial fever. He was ional until death, and I don't think I ever anyone more willing to die than Bro. Fer- was. The first thing he said to me when I tered the room was, "I am ready to go." He d me he was warned of his death several nt's before this. He was not only willing to , but ready and anxious to go. Just a few ments before he died he said there was a d of holy angels around him. He died tri- phantly happy. He left a wife, one child and o sisters to mourn; but while they lose a band, father and brother, he gains eternal and a home in glory.

WATTS—MARY WATTS (nee West) was born in the year 1800, and departed this life April, 1893.

Aunt Mary, as she was familiarly known, was one of those who was waiting for her Lord. It is not known at what time she joined the church. It is supposed that she joined in early childhood. Until age and feebleness prevented, she was always present at church service, and nothing delighted her more than to attend these services. Not having any children, she had disposed of all her means before she was called home. Some years ago she gave to East Mississippi Female College $400, and to the church here she gave a parsonage. Many preachers will call her blessed.

For the last few years she has lived with her nephew, Dr. J. F. Watts, who, with his family, have done for her as kindly as it was possible for loving hands to do. When her mind was clear it was delightful to listen at her converse on the goodness of God. Her gentle spirit, touched by the sacred flame or divine love, seemed anxious to depart and be with Christ.

In her early years she was foremost in all things pertaining to church work, striving to advance the cause of Christ and to elevate the had and hold up the hands of those who were living in the cause of the Master. Modest, quiet and unostentatious, she walked circumspectly before her fellow-man, letting her light so shine that others, seeing he good works, glorified God. No eulogy is necessary upon her life. It was a living demonstration of the reality of the Christian religion

Aunt Mary is gone. She has crossed over the river, but her work and wise action will still go on and on, gathering fresh jewels for the crown the Master gives. HER PASTOR.

Newton, Miss.

PHILLIPS—JENNIA H. PHILLIPS daughter of S. F. and Sallie F. Phillips, was born in Hanover county, Va., Nov 3, 1877 and died in Washington county, Miss., May, 1893. While she was only two years of age her parents moved to the last mentioned county, in which they have lived ever since. She being the only daughter, her parents took special pains to prepare her for society and the church. From the time she could chatter till the day of her death she was the favorite of the community. She was loved by all who knew her.

She had been attending school for the past three years at Centenary Female College, Cleveland, Tenn., at which place, during last Christmas, she accidently fell down a stairway, hurting her spine, which caused her death. She was bright and very apt, always standing well in her classes. In November, 1891, while attending the above-named school, during a revival conducted by Evangelist Culpepper, of Georgia, she professed religion and joined the Methodist Church. Her religious life was above reproach. Why she was cut down in the morning of life is too profound a mystery for us to divine. Yet we believe that "all things work together for good to them that love God." So I would say to the parents: Submit to the will of the Lord, and by and by it will be understood. You mourn not as those who have no hope. May God help you and your son to live so as to meet her again around the throne of heaven, where sad parting will be no more.

J. C. MIMMS.

DAVIS—Mrs. E M. DAVIS, eldest daughter of S. T. and C. M. Lane, was born near Vicksburg, Miss., June 12, 1836. While quite young her parents moved to Black Hawk, Carroll county, Miss., and there at an early age she became a member of the M. E Church, South. She was married to Dr. J. J. Davis on June 21, 1853; the Rev. Jas. H. Avery officiating. She died at her home in Montgomery county, May 25, 1893, after an illness of a little over three weeks.

An earnest, zealous Christian, a fond, affectionate mother, a generous, sympathetic friend. Sister Davis will be greatly missed. But while we are sorrowful at her decease, and feel deeply our great loss, we bow submissively to the will of our divine Father, who is too good to wantonly afflict and too wise to err. May he, in his infinite goodness and mercy, comfort and sustain by his Spirit and grace the loved ones left behind!

A FRIEND.

Kilmichael, Miss.

KEMP—J. BEALIN KEMP, oldest son of Mr. James S and Mrs. Emily E. Kemp, was born Aug. 8 1876, and died June 5, 1893 Joined the M. E Church, South, under Rev. H. H. Ahrens, in Algiers, Nov. 4, 1888.

The death of this young man was very tragic. He was drowned in the Tinkfaw river, in Livingston parish, while working at a saw mill. Surely, in the midst of life we are in death!

A short time before his death he attended a revival meeting, and it is the sincere wish of all that he was revived and made ready for the day of his departure, which, alas! was so near.

May the grace of God be vouchsafed to the parents and to the brother and sister of the deceased which remain!

The religion of the Bible is not of human origin, for it refutes the tastes of men. Men might as well be supposed to invent pain or the storm, as to invent that system which at so many points conflicts with their preferences. The attempts to amend, modify, mitigate, and make religion easy, come from those who know not its power. They wish something to suit them. The gospel stands when human preferences are forgotten, enduring as history, firm as the earth itself.—Dr. R. S Storrs.

To Whom It May Concern.

Macon, Ga., March 18, 1893.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. Is is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

A careful estimate of the late Senator Stanford's property indicates that his valne is somewhat in the neighborhood of $35,000 000.

There is a prohability of a general strike of the miners in Birmingham, Ala., on July 1. The contracts between the miners and operators will expire on that date, and it is thought the miners will be asked to accept a rednction in wages.

A crevasse occnrred at Rescue Plantation, eleven miles above Donaldsonville, on June 23. The territory which will be covered with this water is estimated at twenty-five miles on the river and fifteen miles deep. The flooding of that country means a loss of $1,000,000 in crops.

The crevasse at Reserve Plantation, in Lonisiana, has been olosed at the expense of Mr. Godchaux, who owns the place. It is said that it has taken over a hundred thousand sacks to fill the crih line of the crevasse, and fully a hundred and fifty thousand feet of lnmber to erect the crih. Mr. Godchaux has been under a very heavy expense in olosing the crevasse.

The deficiencies in the ship channel of South Pass, where recently vessels have had trouble on account of shoals, have, according to an official announcement, heen entirely removed, and the contract depth of at least 26 feet in the pass has heen restored. It is seldom that there are any complaints, save during the flood season, when there is more mud in the river than it can hurry out.

The second crevasse that occurred on Black river, last week, at the depot of the Natchez, Red River and Texas railroad, has heen abandoned, as the material with which to close it could not be secured. It will do considerable damage. Black river is falling an inch a day. The rear levee at Frogmore has given way, as has also that on Los Calvit's place, which breaks will pnt several plantations under.

Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Grant met in Cranston's Hotel, West Point, N. Y., on June 24. Upon learning of Mrs. Davis' presence in the hotel, Mrs. Grant left her room and stepped out into the hall, met Mrs. Davis as the latter was leaving the elevator, grasped her hand and said with much feeling: "I am very glad to see you." The two ladies then went into Mrs. Davis' apartments and had a long talk.

It is said that among the passengers of the City of Pekin, which reached San Francisoo from China the other day, was a Chinese nobleman, Chen She Lum, who is a special agent sent over by the Chinese government for the purpose of ascertaining the exact state of pnblic opinion here with regard to the Chinese residents of this country and to get at the intentions of the government as to the enforoement of the Geary law.

The radical Sunday openers must have been greviously disappointed at the small number of people who visited the World's Fair on last Sunday. The total admissions, free and paid, was scarcely 40,000, and the winding paths and hroad thoroughfares of the White City had a deserted appearance. The fact that the United States government hnilding and all its exhibits, which form a most interesting part of the fair, are always closed Sunday, as well as those of Great Britain, and a part of the French exhibit, seems to have given the wage-workers the idea that they were not getting their money's worth. Then, too, the machinery is all stopped and many individnal exhibitors hang up their curtains on Snnday, so that a great deal of the exhibition is closed, notwithstanding the gates are open.

The progress of the German hy-elections appears to have supported the government's oalonlations that the rehalloting will give it sixty-nine seats. Taking the adherents of the army bill elected on the first hallot at 130, the government will thus have in the new Reioh-tag 199 votes out of 397. A hare majority of one vote is not much to rejoice over, yet the government organs express content with the result of the voting.

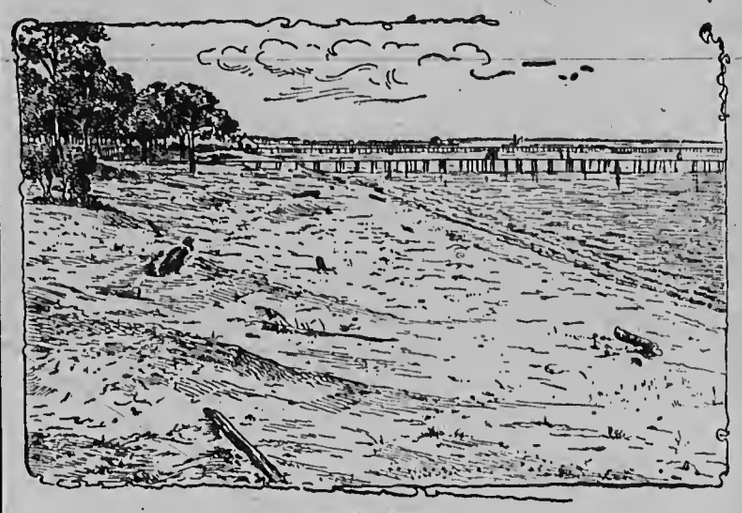
SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.



ON THE BEACH.

The twenty-second annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 12, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 5, and remain on the grounds until the twenty sixth. Holders of camp meeting railroad tickets desiring to attend the session of the Biblical Institute and Summer School for Christian Workers, which opens its first annual session on July 26, can get their railroad tickets extended until August 31. All trains stop at the grounds during the meeting. Express trains Nos. 5 and 6 will stop on signal from June 1 to Oct. 1.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade-trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the rush at the opening of the camp meeting should address communications to W. B. Thomson, chairman Tent and Cot Committee, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Cot Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution towards defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

WHITTIER'S LAST LINES.

I would not, if I could, repeat
A life which still is good and sweet;
I keep in age, as in my prime,
A not unheerful step with time,
And, grateful for all blessing sent,
I go the common way, content
To make no new experiment.
On easy terms with law and fate,
For what must be I calmly wait,
And trust the path I can not see—
That God is good sufficeth me.
And when at last upon life's play
The curtain falls, I only pray
That hope may lose itself in truth,
And age in Heaven's immortal youth,
And all our love and longings prove
The foretaste of diviner love!

Methodists and Babylonish Garments.

MR. EDITOR: Having heard a great deal of discussion recently regarding the question of Christians decorating themselves out in gold, pearls and costly apparel, I beg the privilege to say a few words and ask a few questions in your paper in regard to the subject.

I heard it stated not very long ago that there was no moral law that was binding on a woman that was not binding on a man, and vice versa; and that the passages of Scripture that taught the women to adorn themselves in modest and not in costly apparel, just meant simply to have a meek and quiet spirit, and nothing more.

Now, is it not a fact that the love of money is the besetting sin of men all over the world, and that decorating the person with costly apparel is the besetting sin of the women? Is it not a fact that human nature is the same in all ages? and did not St. Paul know and understand this? and was not this the reason he warned the men about the love of money, and the women about the putting on of gold, pearls, and costly apparel? St. Paul, in writing to Timothy about how the bishops and deacons should be qualified, one characteristic of them was that they should not be greedy of filthy lucre. The same apostle, in writing to Titus, says that a bishop should not be given to filthy lucre, and Peter said the same thing about the elders.

Now, is there any special charges in the Bible to women about being greedy of worldly gain? And is there any special charges in the Bible to the men about putting on costly apparel? Now, it does not follow that because there is no special charges that a woman should be greedy of worldly gain, or that a man has the privilege of putting on costly apparel; but the women are warned concerning gold, pearls, and costly apparel, and the men are warned concerning the love of money. And another thing: Where did Mr. Wesley get the authority to say that the putting on of gold and costly apparel was not for the glory of God? I heard a very prominent Methodist minister say recently that the sole reason, according to his opinion, the reason Mr. Wesley inserted that clause in the General Rules of the Methodist Societies, was that most of his members, when he first organized the Methodist Church, were poor people, and that when the Countess of Huntington and other people of wealth joined the Methodist Church, he found it necessary to insert that clause, so that the poor people would not become offended and be kept away from the churches on account of the gorgeous apparel of the wealthy members. If that was the sole reason, would not that show that Mr. Wesley went farther than the Bible gave him the authority to go? For who has the right to insert any article or clause in a church creed or rule that cannot be proven by Holy Scripture? Are there not poor people now just the same as there were in Mr. Wesley's time? There certainly are, and hundreds—yea, thousands—are kept away from our churches to-day on account of the gold and costly apparel of the members. But this very same minister, referred to above, said that there were more people lost on account of staying away from the churches than were lost by putting on gold and costly apparel. That may be so, but is not the putting on of gold and costly apparel by the members of the churches one of the reasons why they stay away? And, moreover, St. Paul says: "It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak."

Now, does not this, with equal truth, include the wearing of clothing? I think it does. And Mr. Wesley says of the General Rules: "These are the General Rules of our societies, all of which we are taught of God to observe, even in his written Word, which is the only rule, and the sufficient rule both of our faith and practice; and all these we know his Spirit writes on truly awakened hearts." (Italics mine.) And the people observed the Rules in the early days of Methodism. Why is it that most of the Methodist people have conformed to the world in dressing, and put on "Babylonish garments?" Is it right or wrong? The Bible is right, and, therefore, Mr. Wesley was certainly right. And why are not the people taught to observe all the Rules in these days? If we are not going to observe all the Rules, why are they still kept in the Discipline?

Yours truly, METHODIST.

Guarding the Door of the Church.

Brethren write about "guarding the door of the church," "raising the standard of church membership," etc., as if something is woefully lacking in our conditions of church membership. Some seem to think that the only condition of membership in our church is, "A desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from their sins." This mistake is due to their having an eye solely on the condition of membership in the societies organized by Mr. Wesley (Dis., page 28, par. 28); but if such brethren will look on pages 124, 267, 268, 269 and 273 of the Discipline, they will see that besides "a desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from their sins," we have, "That ye will renounce the devil and all his works, and constantly believe God's Holy Word, and obediently keep his commandments," and "willingness to keep the Rules of the church," as conditions also of membership in our church. The door into our church is well guarded if those who keep it would do their duty—their duty in letting persons through the door into the church, and their duty in enforcing discipline, as well as other things, after they are in the church. No person who has entered our church according to its conditions of membership but that is a better or worse person than he was before he joined. If he is worse, it argues that he is killing, or has killed his conscience, if it was not already dead when he joined. Such persons should be exhorted to repent and make amends, and if they are stubborn in their wicked course, then they should be expelled from the church after proper Christian forbearance has been exercised. "But," says one, "in some places we have not good members enough to turn the bad ones out." When such is the case, we think things are in a deplorable condition; but still Methodism allows a draw on other members of the same charge, and even members of other charges, for the needed help. A fine alternative, however, would be a reorganization. One of the greatest desiderata of our church is vital godliness and a righteous following of the old landmarks of our holy Methodism.

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

From Arcadia District.

MR. EDITOR: As you see from this letter head, I am here at Farmerville, domiciled with my young friend "of ye olden times," Dr. Charlie Jameson, whose heart is never happier than when entertaining the ministers of his Lord.

Last Sunday our excellent presiding elder, Bro. Sheppard, put in his third official visit to Homer, and, finding the pastor in a somewhat dilapidated condition from continuous work, pressed him into service, or, rather, pressed him out of service, for a two weeks' tramp on the district. Just think how refreshing to an ex-presiding elder it must be to spend two weeks among his former hearers, and play to the role of listener all that time!

As Jasper—not the sergeant—said of the sun, so it must be said of Methodism within the bounds of the Arcadia—the old Homer—district, "She do move."

In 1881-82 there were only twelve charges in the district. There was not a station in it, but there was plenty of missionary ground, and one mission. There was not a foot of railroad, and no suitable crossings on D'Arbonne, Corrice, Middle, nor L'Utre (later).

Now, after the lapse of eleven years, the V., S. and P. railway traverses the district from east to west, the L. and N. W. traverses the center of the district north and south, and the Minden railroad furnishes transportation on the western limits. These are not part of the church, it is true, but they are essential factors in its development. Now there are sixteen charges in the district, two stations, and I understood the presiding elder, the other day, to say that every foot of available territory was occupied by the circuits. However, it is plainly seen already that the material exhibits—viz: finances—will not be in proportion to this numerical advance.

Last year—and this also, up to date—too much rain has seriously injured the crops, and throughout a large portion of the district the late hail storms have destroyed the crops as completely as a February freeze would have done.

Beside these misfortunes, the general crisis—the want of money—has not "passed over" this section. Here, in the middle of the year, I guess not more than fifteen per cent. of the financial obligations have been met. I think, at the best, not twenty per cent. That this condition of things results from the absence of a sound financial policy for our country is true only in part; and yet there is no doubt but such is true in part. The gold has been sent out of the country, and the silver packed in the vaults at Washington, until the vast "reserve" required by our banking laws has just about absorbed the entire circulation of the country, and left our people practically without money.

Where is the remedy? Why, in fewer bonds to pay interest on, and more greenbacks to circulate. If "confidence" on the credit of the government will make bonds "good" to the amount of $1,000,000,000, the same "confidence" would make any other paper, properly stamped, equally good. But I have rambled away from my "text."

Notwithstanding so much high water and so many washing rains, I find the roads and crossings on our great bayous greatly improved during these eleven years last passed. While the growth of the church has greatly increased the amount of brain and tongue toll for the presiding elder, the material development has correspondingly decreased the peril of travel over the district.

I must not close this letter without paying my respects to Tom, Bro. Sheppard's fine horse—the best buggy horse in the Louisiana Conference. He is not strictly "orthodox," however. He seems to think that two presiding elders on a district is no worse than one. Yours truly, J. A. PARKER.

Commencement at Mansfield.

Rev. J. T. Sawyer, D D., occupied the pulpit on Sunday, and was greeted by a large audience. At night he preached again a forcible discourse on the "One Mighty to Save," making a decided impression for good on his audience.

The primary department, Monday, afforded a delightful evening with their kindergarten drills and songs, giving striking evidence of improvement. The elocution contest was close and interesting. Miss Alice McGowen, of Jeanerette, and Miss Rose Farmer, of New Iberia, were awarded the two medals for elocution, which were equally divided. Miss Margie Cunningham and Miss Gussie Faunt LeRoy were distinguished for their gracefulness and clear enunciation, while all deserved favorable mention. The Alumnæ celebration brought out a charming paper on "College Reminiscences," by Mrs. Holmes Jenkins, of Bastrop, Texas, and an able essay on "Education," by Mrs. Judge Sutherlin, of Mansfield. The singing of the Misses Trosper, of Bethany, and Miss Mamie Miller, of Lake Charles, was highly appreciated, as well as the exquisite piano playing of Miss Irma McVoy.

The recital of music, Tuesday night, showed such great proficiency that it is hard to distinguish the superior performer. Miss Minnie Jackson, of Mansfield, and Miss Hilma Miller, of Lake Charles, showed striking improvement in voice culture. The excellent singing and piano playing proved that the department has been in good, skilful hands, sustaining its former high reputation as a superior school of music. A distinguished artist and critic, on viewing the drawings and paintings on exhibition, remarked that never before had this college displayed better work or more genuine productions of art. It was a revelation to the visitors to see such high excellence achieved by young artists.

Wednesday was graduating day, and three young ladies received their diplomas: Miss Rose Farmer, of New Iberia; Miss Lizzie Fleniken, of DeSoto parish, and Miss Ida Florence Billingsley, of DeSoto parish. These young ladies read excellent essays, which were highly appreciated by the audience. President McVoy delivered a stirring baccalaureate, full of noble sentiment, good advice and encouraging words, as he bid his young graduates adieu.

The president of the Board of Managers, Rev. R. J. Harp, made a strong appeal for the college, announcing that President McVoy had been appointed financial agent, and hoping that the friends of the college everywhere will respond liberally to the appeals of the president. President McVoy then made a stirring rallying speech which was cheered to the echo.

Miss Gertrude Williams was announced as first honor pupil of the collegiate department, and Miss Roy Scales in the primary department.

Thus has passed another successful commencement occasion, impressing visitors and friends with the fact that good and honest work is done here; that the institution is meeting fully the high demands made upon it, with a superior faculty, in the healthiest and most beautiful locality of the State, where the best influences prevail for the development of character.

A. F. JACKSON,
Secretary of the Board.

Hiwassee College.

MR. EDITOR: At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of Hiwassee College, Prof. Sidney G. Gilbreath was unanimously elected its president.

As a former student of that institution and a classmate of Prof. Gilbreath—then a mere lad—I desire to say a few words.

The college is situated two miles from Madisonville, Monroe county, Tenn., about midway, I believe, between Chattanooga and Knoxville. In point of health I know of no superior location. The water is pure, the air invigorating, the scenery picturesque, lovely, grand. Ten or fifteen miles from the college the Alleghany range lift themselves heavenward, and inspire the very soul. 'Tis a quiet farming community, and a noble people inhabit that section. Even now I like to think of the pleasant days I spent there—about ten years ago.

Mr. Gilbreath is a Christian young man of high intellectual attainments, unimpeachable character, and of noble aspirations. As a young man, I rejoice at his success thus far in life, and feel that "old Hiwassee" will prosper with a young man at its head so full of vigor and push as is Prof. Gilbreath. He was born and reared within the sounding of the college bell, and educated within her walls; has served as county superintendent of education for some years, and is esteemed by his people for his true merit.

Parents who wish to send their sons to school where the climate is healthful, where a moral atmosphere prevails, and educational advantages excel, would do well to investigate the merits of Hiwassee College.

A Terrible Indictment.

AN AWFUL ARRAY OF CHARGES AGAINST THE DRAM SHOP.

Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., pastor of the Twenty-third Street Baptist Church, of New York City, on a recent Sunday preached a sermon on "The Modern Saloon." In the course of his sermon he claimed that the saloon swings open more gates to hell than any other power in the modern city. He is master of invective, and he closed his discourse with the most terrific indictment of the saloon that we remember ever to have seen. The most tragic feature of it is its entire truthfulness. There is no exaggeration; it is simply a graphic statement of awful facts.

The saloon cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength, and age in its weakness.

It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the mother, extinguishes natural affection, erases conjugal love, blots out filial attachments, and blasts parental hopes, and brings down mourning age in sorrow to the grave.

It produces weakness, not strength; sickness, not health; death, not life.

It makes wives, widows; children, orphans; fathers, fiends—and all of them paupers and beggars.

It feeds rheumatism, nurses gout, welcomes epidemics, invites cholera, imparts pestilence, and embraces consumption.

It covers the land with idleness, misery and crime.

It fills your jails, supplies your almshouses, and demands your asylums.

It engenders controversies, fosters quarrels, and cherishes riots.

It crowds your penitentiaries and furnishes victims to your scaffolds.

It is the life-blood of the gambler, the element of the burglar, the prop of the highwayman, and the support of the midnight incendiary.

It countenances the liar, respects the thief, esteems the blasphemer.

It violates obligations, reverences fraud, and honors infamy.

It defames benevolence, hates love, scorns virtue, and slanders innocence.

It incites the father to butcher his helpless offspring, helps the husband to massacre his wife, and the child to grind the parricidal ax.

It burns up men, consumes women, detests life, curses God, and despises heaven.

It suborns witnesses, nurses perjury, defiles the jury box, and stains the judicial ermine.

It degrades the citizen, debases the Legislature, dishonors the statesman, and disarms the patriot.

It brings shame, not honor; terror, not safety; despair, not hope; misery, not happiness, and with the malevolence of a fiend it calmly surveys its frightful desolation, and unsatisfied with its havoc, it kills peace, ruins morals, blights confidence, slays reputation, and wipes out national honor; then curses the world, and laughs at its ruin.

It does all that and more—it murders the soul.

It is the sum of all villainies, the father of all crimes, the mother of all abominations, the devil's best friend, and God's worst enemy.—Exchange.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Ben P. Jaco, Eureka Springs, Miss., June 26: "We organized an Epworth League at Pisgah yesterday, with twenty members to begin with. Let us have more Leagues—one at every church."

Rev. S. H. Whatley, Pleasant Hill, La., June 28: "We have just closed our second protracted meeting. The two meetings resulted in thirty-eight accessions to the church; eleven children baptized. During our meeting we had the assistance of Bros. L. F. Jackson, J. S. Sanders, W. Wimberly, Bishop C. B. Galloway, H. J. Boltz, and S. S Bogan. Pray for us."

Rev. Thos. J. Upton, Alexandria, La., June 29: "Our meeting of two weeks' duration closed on Sunday night. The net results were: (1) A general quickening of the members who attended, (2) several bright conversions, (3) and eleven accessions to the church. Brethren C. H. Ellis and F. S. Parker did all the preaching, and did it well. To God be all the glory."

Rev. A. D. Miller, Oak Ridge, Miss., June 26: "We had Children's Day at Bradley's Chapel last Sunday. Program well prepared, and all went off nicely. The children did splendidly. We had a large congregation, and an abundance of something good to eat. The ladies of Bradley's Chapel and community know just how to get up a good dinner, and they did. We got from the collection $7.55. Well done for Bradley! This makes $27.55 for Warren circuit."

Rev. Geo. W. Huff, P. C., North Wilkinson circuit, Woodville district, Mississippi Conference, June 6: "This is our third year on this charge. We are serving a good people. If a preacher will do anything like his duty, this people will support him; but if he gets around rather slow, and does not preach much, nor visit any, they will let him root hog, or die, or join the Baptists. We have several denominations in this part of Wilkinson county. Divers doctrines are being preached. Some say there is no Holy Ghost. I fail to find such teaching in the Word of God. That some men are preaching doctrine of devils, speaking lies in hypocrisy, is manifest. Some of them say the Bible is not a holy book, and that the Bible contains as black lies as were ever written in any book. Surely, when a man gets so low down as to talk so ridiculously about God's Word, the best thing for him to do would be to step down and out of the pulpit, and get behind the door of the church, or under it, and cut off the tail of his coat, and hunt another job—one that will fit him better than going around trying to preach."

Rev. A. T. Bell, P. C., Waynesboro circuit, Mississippi Conference, June 23: "I held the first protracted meeting on this circuit at Winchester, last week, commencing Sunday morning, the eleventh instant, and closing on Friday night. Our church at Winchester, and at several other points on the charge, has been steadily growing in spiritual religion for some months, and we were ripe for a gracious revival. Preaching by Bros. J. V. Penn, M. F. Bradford, and myself. Several brethren and sisters covenanted to spend Monday night, 'till the breaking of the day,' in earnest prayer to God for the baptism of the Holy Ghost, our motto being, 'We will not let thee go, except thou bless us,' and the Lord gave us the blessing we asked. The power of the Holy Spirit was manifested in every service after this all-night praying. Sister Penn presided at the organ most of the time, and rendered valuable help as well with her voice as by playing. Sister Bell also sang solos, and the singing was greatly blessed throughout the meeting. Wednesday night we had a fine, lively prayer meeting, when numbers, especially the sisters, had their lips unsealed, who had never before used their voices for the Master, but now prayed, and gave definite testimony to the goodness of God, and their assurance of salvation. The actual results, which can be reduced to writing, are five conversions, several under conviction of sin, two accessions, the spiritual state of the church greatly strengthened, and the Sunday-school in good condition, and full attendance. Bro. Wm. Norton's presence was highly appreciated. Cheerful hospitality was accorded all who attended the meeting. Brethren, pray for us, that the Lord may give us rich blessings in our other meetings."

NOTES FROM WILKINSON CIRCUIT.

Everything is moving along smoothly; no friction anywhere that we know of. The Summer campaign will soon be opened. We are sure enough going to have a camp meeting at Old Bethel Camp Grounds. The tabernacle will be completed by the time this is published. We will also have a hotel to accommodate those who desire such accommodations. All the itinerant preachers of the district, and those who will come from abroad, are cordially invited, and will be entertained free of charge. Either at Centreville or Woodville back accommodations can be had at reasonable rates.

J. J. SMYLIE, P. C.

Woodville, Miss., June 23, 1893.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix firmly believes that a good story is often the best means of illustrating a point in a speech and of conveying a clearer meaning than any phrase or sentence. He carried out this conviction in an address he recently delivered at the reception given to the college of Bishops at St. John's Church, St. Louis. He was encouraging the churches of that city in the effort they are making to raise a $200,000 church extension fund, and asserted that a firm resolve and resolute work, with an optimistic view of the future, would accomplish the purpose, and, to illustrate this, said that a milkman was once approaching a city with milk to sell. Crossing a brook, he began meditating, and came to the conclusion that his milk was too rich for city people, and dipped up a bucket of water and poured it into the can of milk. Two frogs were in the bucket of water. One was an optimist, the other a pessimist. They resolved to make an effort to stay on top and keep from drowning. The pessimist soon gave it up, saying it was no use to try to keep up, it could not be done, and sank to the bottom and died. The optimistic frog said: "Well, I will just keep kicking," and so with a firm resolve and a resolute kick he kept on top, and when the grocer to whom the milkman sold his stock went to move it from the can, he found, not only a can of milk, but in it a large pat of butter, and sitting on top of it the triumphant optimistic frog! He had succeeded by firm resolve and resolute work.—Republic.

MAXIMUS.

BY ADELAIDE ANNE PROCTOR.

I hold him great who, for love's sake,
Can give with generous, earnest will;
Yet he who takes for love's sweet sake
A thing I hold more generous still.

I bow before the noble mind
That freely some great wrong forgives;
Yet nobler is the one forgiven
Who bears the burden well and lives.

It may be hard to gain, and still
To keep a lowly, steadfast heart;
Yet he who loses has to fill
A harder and a truer part.

Glorious it is to wear the crown
Of a deserved and pure success;
He who knows how to fail has won
A crown whose luster is not less.

Great may be he who can command
And rule with just and tender sway;
Yet is diviner wisdom taught
Better by him who can obey.

Blessed are they who die for God,
And earn the martyr's crown of light;
Yet he who lives for God may be
A greater conqueror in his sight.

Labor and Capital.

"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground."

This is the law which an offended God pronounced on sinful man and his posterity to the remotest generation. Yet, while this is true, the law was not declared of the individual man, but of the race. The individual man may be in the pernancy of the profits of a large landed estate and enjoying the issues and revenues from bonds and stocks, yet the law holds good; these lands and these bonds and stocks were purchased at the price of the sweat and toil of some ancestor of the possessor. And thus it is that there are gradations in the possession of property and of all those incidental circumstances concomitant of wealth. And this, too, is grounded in that divine as well as human law; a law around which, as an axis, society revolves, and which regulates the business relations of man with his fellow; and this law is, that the laborer is worthy of his hire. And those who revile the present social status would unwittingly tear down that very righteous principle which secures to the laborer the fruit of his honest toil. And the good and well-being of society can no more tolerate a deprivation or division of the possessions of the rich than it could tolerate the withholding from the laborer the wages of his labor.

The conditions of life have vastly changed. Those accidental circumstances which separated man from his fellow have been, to a great extent removed. Through the instrumentality of cheap education the people have become educated. By the drawing power of the press, railroads, telegraphies, and the like, men have been drawn closer together—they have been placed nearer on an equality—so that to-day there remains only this circumstance of the possession of wealth which makes the social condition of one man differ from that of another. This being the case, by a law inherent in man, he rebels against this restraint. And many, driven on by an inordinate ambition, and with a disregard of all laws, human and divine, they would at once remove this remaining difference. The poor man, when he looks on the possessions and prosperity of his wealthy neighbor, not stopping to reflect that this wealth either represents the toil, labor and thrifty saving of some ancestor of the possessor, or is the product of successful trade, or is the natural outcome of the superior business sense and management of the possessor; and to deprive him of them or in anyway to curtail the enjoyment of the same is not only to outrage the law of God and man, but is at once to strike down and destroy the title to all honest possessions, and to disorganize the fabric of society. And a sane and just man could scarcely believe that such doctrines could find supporters, did not his observation demonstrate the fact.

We have only to take a short retrospective view to see how vastly the condition of the laboring man has been improved from that in which he heretofore lived.

In England—a nation that has always been jealous of its liberties and of the rights of man—there has existed, and that, too, since the tenth century, slavery, white slavery, pure and simple. The laborer who there then held his land by villenage tenure, the villein in gross could be bought and sold like any other chattel. He was a slave, ignorant and uneducated. "He was compelled to do whatever was commanded him and always bound to to an uncertain service." I speak of pure villenage and not of villein socage, though the only difference between pure villenage and villein socage was that in the former case the services were uncertain and the tenant was to do whatever was commanded him; whereas, in the latter case the services were certain, and the tenant was not to do whatever was commanded him, but that only which was expressed in the tenure. The villein in gross could not hold any property; whatever he acquired became the property of his lord. His lord could chastise him, and that, too, whenever he saw fit, the only limitation of this right of chastisement possessed by the lord being that he must not take the tenant's life. There were two kinds of these villein tenants—the one called villein regardant, annexed to the land, and passed with the land on a sale of the same; the other called villein in gross, and annexed to the person of the lord. And yet whilst this villenage tenure was a badge of slavery, and the tenants were deprived of all civil rights, they seemed happier than the laborer at the present day. They did not claim that their lord should step down and out or admit them within the halls of the manor as his equal; they did not strike except when they struck the anvil. He was not a member of any labor union; the only form of unionism he claimed was that of being a loyal subject of the United Kingdom.

By the Statute of 12 Car., II., C. 24. these villenage tenures, as formerly existing, along with the military tenures, were abolished, and since the passage of this statute the laborer's condition has rapidly improved, so that to-day we find him possessing all the advantages of education, religion and law possessed by the rich; and only laboring ten hours a day, and that under restrictions and conditions for the benefit of the laborer, and receiving for his monthly labor more than would have been received by a laborer in twelve months at the time of the passage of the statute above referred to, and even this ten hours' labor stands a chance of being reduced to eight. Now, I submit, that this advancement has about reached its maximum, and that there is a strong tendency in some sections to abandon an honest effort to ameliorate the condition of the poorer classes, and to strike at once for a division of property. It was seen that the vast benefits of education, increased wages and decreased work, instead of producing quiet, peace and contentment, have, in many instances, blossomed out into socialism and other wild and wicked vagaries. And what effect must this produce in the halls of legislation? With what truth can the legislator say to the laborer: "I have given you education; I have increased your wages; I have reduced the period of your labor; I have provided for your sick and aged infirmaries and houses of refuge, and instead of this making you grateful, you flaunt in my face the red flag and cry, 'Anarchy.'" Oh, that cry of anarchy, bred in the pestiferous rum resorts and dark alleys of vice! It is enough to make the pillars of government quake. And mark it well, this is the natural outcome of unreasonable agitation of the labor question.

The possession of wealth is the reward of a life-time of self-denial and hard labor. Not only this—a man may labor hard and deny himself, yet, if he hasn't got this special capacity for money-making, he will never be a rich man. I have observed men a good deal, and I verily believe that this thing of accumulating money is as much a talent as the talent for mathematics, or any other special talent. I have seen men who had scarcely any other kind of sense. If this be true, the masses must ever remain poor, because it is said that there is only one man in a hundred who has a special talent.

In this country there are no gradations in rank. In England a man may be ever so rich; but his riches do not give him a right to a seat in the peerage. There they have many gradations in the social scale, and hence it is that the contrast of poverty and wealth is not so sharp. But with us it is otherwise, and the contemplation by the poor of the wealth of the rich leads to social and may lead to political disturbance. It may be true that many, at times, have undue right in legislative halls, but, considering the great power of money, the only wonder is that it does not have more. Our laws are impartial. They always offer the job to the "lowest and best bidder;" and in this country every man has a free and fair chance in life, so far as the laws are concerned. I say, with all others, that poverty is not desirable, and that possibly it would be best to see the masses rich instead of poor; but this never has and never will be. And, further, to see a man with a large family, by hard labor barely supporting his family, and to see his employer drive by in his coach and four, presents a great contrast. But it must be remembered that it takes exceedingly high wages for one man to feed four or five children and a wife, and also pay house rent; and the fact that he does this, and, in addition, pays his incidental expenses, such as taxes and lodge dues, is proof positive that he is getting exceedingly good wages; and for an agitator to take this man's case as a text, and, by misrepresentation and demagoguery, to stir up the masses against the rich and the government, such agitator then becomes a pestiferous nuisance, and the sooner he is bridled the better.

Let our masses hold fast the sober honesty and patriotism of their fathers, and let each man with conscientious labor perform his allotted task, and leading his children, as they grow, along these same righteous paths—then, in truth, will this nation fulfill the grand destiny on which she has been launched, and be, in truth and fact, a home for the oppressed of all nations. LAYMAN OR SEXTUS.

Good Men Appeal to Conscience.

BY BISHOP HAYGOOD.

Paul "appealed to Cæsar" in a case involving his rights as a Roman citizen. He did not appeal to Cæsar to settle, by an imperial decree, any question of doctrine or morals.

A great question has been pending for some weeks before high courts on the question of "Sunday opening" of the World's Fair in Chicago. The first decision was, as it seemed, favorable to Sabbath observance. The telegrams of the week tell us that the Court of Appeals, Chief-Justice Fuller presiding, "has decided unanimously in favor of Sunday opening." This sort of statement is misleading, and framed in the interests of the Philistines. The Associated Press is given to this kind of devilry. The Court of Appeals did not say it favored Sunday opening; it really delivered no opinion, whatever, upon the Sabbath question. The court simply affirmed that, under the law, it had no authority to close the gates on the Sabbath day. The court interpreted the law; it decided no question concerning religion or morals.

As it seems to this writer, to denounce Chief-Justice Fuller, or the United States Court, would be a silly thing. The court is under oath to interpret the law of the land, and not the Word of God. It would be very unfair to say that the court sets itself against the Christian Sabbath, when it simply affirmed that it had no authority, under the law, to close the gates of the big show upon the Sabbath day. It is true that the Philistines will take comfort from this decision, but it should be remembered that the court interpreted the law; it makes no constitution to the anti-Sabbath argument.

It is not the business of a court to make law; its function is the interpretation of law. If the people do not like their laws, they have this remedy: they can change them.

But it is well worth considering whether the Christian doctrine concerning the Lord's day can be set up and maintained by civil law or the secular courts. I offer no opinion as to the right of government to pass laws concerning the Sabbath, and make no argument on that subject. In most of the States of the Union, Cæsar has decreed abstention from ordinary labor on the Sabbath day.

In some States the laws concerning the Sabbath day are stringent. But, at bottom, the State enters into the Sabbath question for reasons other than those that control the consciences of Christian men. Just as the State guarantees the right of worship, and punishes those who interfere with it, on civil, and not on religious grounds. The State has nothing to do with religion except as it protects the citizen in his rights. The State can forbid a man who does not believe in the sanctity of the Sabbath from interfering with the rights of those who do believe in its sanctity; but it can not force him to keep the Sabbath, according to his neighbor's view of it, any more than it can compel the acceptance of any theory of the atonement, or of any other Christian doctrine.

It may be that we have trusted overmuch in the law of the land to secure moral results, and not enough in the power of the truth of God. That alone makes free the soul of man.

Possibly, if we had expended as much force in teaching the truth of the Bible on the Sabbath question as we have exerted in seeking decrees from the civil courts, we might have had, by this time, more Sabbath observance. In the long run, nothing secures conformity to the laws of God except teaching the people the laws of God. Moral reforms always move upon the lines of moral teaching. The principle applies to many other than the Sabbath question.

As to the Chicago show and Sunday opening, the church has an appeal to a court not bound by statute law, or by the Constitution of the United States. In the cases just determined the church, to all intents and purposes, was the plaintiff; but for the church, the case would not have been made, or heard. No doubt, the Chief-Justice and those sitting with him have given us an honest interpretation of law. Before this court the church failed; it had not the necessary jurisdiction. But Christian conscience has ample jurisdiction.

What can the church do? Stay away from the Fair?

Is managers have acted dishonorably to the last degree. They appealed to the nation, as represented in Congress, for a large gift of money. The grant was made with the distinct understanding that the gates of the big show were to be closed upon the Sabbath. But for that understanding the directors, as well as everybody else, knew that the money would not have been granted. The directors are in disgrace before the nation. They have pilloried themselves, and deserve for their dishonesty and effrontery the contempt they receive. Their specious plea for the laboring man is hypocrisy, pure and simple. These men have not concerned themselves about the poor, nor are they concerned now. They seek "gate receipts" in their audacious and vulgar defiance of the Christian sentiment of the American people. They and their kind are socially "shoddy" and morally depraved.

The Christian Sabbath is not going down under the feet of these Chicago directors, who in morals, if not in law, have obtained from the people money "under false pretenses." The Sabbath is intrenched in the physical, mental and moral needs of man. These Chicago deceivers, lying to Congress and defying the Christian convictions of the American people, can no more change the constitution of man, or repeal the law of God, than did French infidels and anarchists who tried it near the close of the last century.

This is a good time to make an argument for the Sabbath. There are millions who can make the argument without the expense or delay of law processes. Let those who really believe in the Sabbath stay away from Chicago. The money saved may bless the poor who can not look upon "works of art" on Sunday afternoons in the White-black City. If those who know what is right, do right, the Sunday receipts will be a very small money-harvest for this gross violation of good faith, compared to the vast sum lost to the directory by its defiance of the Christian convictions and sentiments of the people.

Precious place and precious time for "The World's Congress of Religion!"

To one suggesting, "Oh, they won't care if you don't go," the answer is: "True; but I care. It is a question between God and I." Let the appeal be made to the highest earthly court—to Christian conscience!

Northfield Bible Conference.

Dear Friends and Fellow-Laborers:

"By the good hand of our God upon us," we are enabled to issue our call for another General Bible Conference, to be held at Northfield, Mass., from Aug. 1 to 13, 1893. The ten Conferences past have been so manifestly marked by the divine favor, and have so richly abounded blessings to multitudes of grateful hearts, that we can not doubt our privilege and duty to go forward another step on the same line of service.

It is to me a great joy to issue this year's call with the prospect and expectation of being myself permitted to share the services and the blessings of the Conference with my friends. I have returned to my own dear native land, from fourteen months' labor in the Old World, with an ever-growing conviction that nothing but the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ proclaimed with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, and exemplified in the holy lives and devoted service of Christian disciples, can ever meet the needs of this lost world, and prevail against the powers of evil. And I rejoice to see, that at home and abroad, the Lord is raising up increasing numbers of consecrated workers who are not ashamed of this old gospel, and who glory only in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ.

It shall be our highest aim, at the coming Conference, as heretofore, to advance the interests of the kingdom of God, seeking a closer union of Christian hearts in faith, hope and love, that we may have "fellowship one with another," and may "know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge," and be "filled with all the fullness of God."

Let us then come together, as fellow-laborers in Christ, "all with one accord in one place," "with a true heart, in full assurance of faith," to wait upon the Lord, and to "consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works, exhorting one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching," for "the night is far spent, the day is at hand."

Among the speakers who will be present are: Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D., of Boston; Rev. A. C. Dixon, Brooklyn; Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman, Albany; Merrill E. Gates, Ph.D. LL.D., president of Amherst College; Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence; Maj. D. W. Whittle, Northfield, Mass. We also confidently expect many of the Christian workers, including several from foreign lands who are now assisting us in the Chicago "World's Fair" campaign, to be present and take part at various times. In addition we hope to have with us: Rev. B. Fay Mills, of Providence; Prof. W. W. Moore, University of Virginia; Prof. Robert Thompson, Lake Forest University; Hon. R. Morton, Hamilton, Ontario; Rev. John McNeill, Scotland, and others whose names will be announced later. The singing will be under the direction of Messrs. Ira D. Sankey and Geo. C. Stebbins.

Accommodations may be obtained at the Seminary buildings during the time of the meetings for one dollar and fifty cents per day. The Betsey Moody Cottage will be open, as last year, for the accommodation of any who may desire more quiet and retirement than is possible in the larger buildings; rates will be two dollars and fifty cents per day for room alone, or two dollars per day in room with another person. Parties wishing to tent can have a suitable place on the Seminary grounds free of charge, and, if desired, board may be had for seventy-five cents per day. "The Northfield," a beautiful, quiet hotel, furnishes first-class board to those desiring.

All communications in regard to accommodations at Seminary buildings, as well as at "The Northfield," should be addressed to the manager, Mr. Ambert G. Moody, East Northfield, Mass.

Northfield is on the New London Northern railroad, which connects with the Fitchburg railroad at Millers Falls, the Central Massachusetts Division of the Boston and Maine railroad at Belchertown, the Boston and Albany railroad at Palmer, the New York and New England railroad at Willimantic, and the steamers of the Norwich and New York Transportation Company at New London. It is about two miles from South Vernon on the Connecticut River Division of the Boston and Maine railroad which connects with the Fitchburg railroad at Greenfield, the Northampton Division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroads at Northampton, and the Boston and Albany, and New York, New Haven and Hartford railroads at Springfield. Stages are run during the meetings from South Vernon to Northfield. Reduced railway rates will probably be obtained as heretofore, and definite instructions in regard to the same will be sent later.

Yours in his service,

D. L. MOODY.

Commencement at Vanderbilt.

On Wednesday, last, another successful session's work was closed at Vanderbilt. The outcome of the past year's endeavor as exhibited by the exercises of the day was highly gratifying and well calculated to arouse more than ever the sympathies of Southern Methodists in behalf of their great university. The graduating speeches of the several representatives of the various departments—academic, biblical and law—were sufficient to prove that the ideal of education at Vanderbilt is very high, and also that it is very closely approximated. Men that leave with her seal upon them are well fitted to cope with the great questions that stir the world of to-day.

In the theory that dominates the minds of teachers here, the past is studied partly, of course, through reverence and a desire for knowledge, but chiefly as a key to unlock the mysteries of the present. To open the eyes of students to see the best things; to stir their minds to appreciate the best things; to incite their zeal and train their facilities to create the best things—this is the province of true education. To fill this office to our Southland is assuredly the mission of Vanderbilt. The marked increase in interest during the past year that she has excited fully shows that this goal is being realized more and more.

Nine masters' and thirty-two bachelors' degrees were conferred; besides these there were nine graduates in pharmacy, who will receive their degrees when they shall have completed a three years' course of practice in a drug store. Of the bachelors' degrees, six were conferred upon graduates of the biblical department, all of whom enter our several Conferences next Fall, except one, Rev. Sam E. Hager, who leaves in July for mission work in Japan. In the English theological course a certificate of graduation was granted Rev. Tokichi Masas, from our work in Japan.

One of the most effecting scenes ever witnessed at Vanderbilt was the retirement of Dr. Garland from the chancellorship and the installation of his newly elected successor, Dr. James H. Kirkland. For two years the Board of Trust had had before it the resignation of the venerable chancellor, but had delayed in order to find the proper man to place at the head of Vanderbilt. After this long period of careful inquiry and observation, they at length settled upon a member of the faculty as the fittest man to place in this responsible position. In their choice, they have, without doubt, been wise. Dr. Kirkland is known throughout the country as an accomplished scholar; a man of rare personal attraction, and as a whole-souled Christian educator.

The few words that the retiring chancellor spoke, as he laid aside the cares and burdens of eighteen years of arduous service, touched the hearts of all present, and there were few eyes that remained unmoistened, when, in his charge to his successor, the ripe Christian of over four-score years closed with a testimony to the love and favor which God had thrown about him in all his labors—a testimony whose eloquence was tears, and whose beauty consisted in that it was the true expression of a noble Christian character. Dr. Garland will, by the provision of the Board, still retain his professor's chair, and, furthermore, bear the title and honor of chancellor emeritus.

The outlook for the future is bright, and great things are expected from Vanderbilt. Movements will be set on foot to increase the endowment, which is pitifully small for the work that is to be done. Now is the time for the Southern Methodist Church to take advantage of her opportunity. If she will, through the avenue that Vanderbilt University offers, she can set in motion influences that will eventually prove the molding power of our whole Southern civilization. It is for our men of means to say whether they will despise this golden privilege of blessing an entire section of our great country.

While the University, as a whole, lays claim to the help and sympathy of our entire connection, still Southern Methodism is possibly more intimately concerned with the interests of the biblical department. Here are accommodations for over a hundred theological students. The course is very thorough; the professors are competent scholars and consecrated Christians; the associations are the best; the expense is not great; the men turned out are found all over our church doing earnest, self-denying, Christ-like labor. In view of the record that the department has made, why should the church be afraid of or antagonize any longer the efforts that are being put forth here to increase the efficiency of the men to whom we are looking for service in the future? To say the least, when we look at the small number of young preachers who are in attendance here and contrast the great number of our young preachers who ought to be here, it seems as if our church is grossly careless of her God-given opportunity, and pursuing a course which, if not suicidal, is extremely detrimental to all her best interests.

May the past years of combating the fears of timid friends and prejudices of hostile critics have sufficed, and may the next session open with the largest enrollment that our department has yet seen!

Any young preacher who is at all interested, would do well to address the dean, Dr. W. F. Tillett, Nashville, Tenn. TEACHER.

Opelousas District Conference.

The twenty-fifth session of the Opelousas District Conference convened on June 22, and included the twenty-fifth, which was Sunday. It was pleasantly and hospitably entertained at the ancient town of Abbeville, on the beautiful Vermilion Bayou. A good representation of the laymen were present, and only two of the pastors were absent. Rev. Jno. A. Miller, P. E., was in the chair throughout the session, and called forth close reports from all the charges. Nearly all the pastors reported increase in membership and improvement in the spiritual condition of the church, and only one or two had to report of part of their charges, "The less said, the better." Several powerful revivals were reported. During a discussion of "discipline" some disorders were brought to light, and the general sense of the Conference was in favor of their removal by stricter execution of the law. Special notice was given to the habits of Sabbath breaking and drinking spirituous liquors; and, by resolution, the pastors were requested to preach special sermons on the Bible doctrine of temperance. The interests of church literature were practically discussed by Bro. Van Valkenburgh and members of the Conference. The Sunday-school work came in for a special discussion, and its importance was stressed. The finances were generally without system, which implies that they were behind the ability of the people. A preacher may thus be starved amidst plenty. About one-third of pastors' salaries were reported paid.

The delegates to the Annual Conference are: W. T. Blackshear, H. C. Dutcher, Dr. W. D. White, and Capt. Jno. T. White.

The Conference heartily and unanimously voted a vacation of a month to our faithful presiding elder, who, in a ministry of over forty years, has never taken such an outing.

The most encouraging sign of the times was the observance of the disciplinary regulation as to the special prominence of religious services.

The preaching by Revs. C. M. Lyons, H. Armstrong, H. W. May, C. R. Seward, C. R. Montgomery, J. B. Cassity, W. W. Drake and Jno. A. Miller was attended by the power of the Holy Spirit, and a number were converted at the altar.

The meeting would not close on Sunday night, so some of the brethren remained to carry on the good work. You will, doubtless, hear more from it. This idea of the Holy Spirit at a District Conference—not a new one—will solve some problems about giving the Conference enough to do, and keeping delegates over Sunday.

INTRODUCTORY.

Our last lesson left Paul and his co-laborers the inmates of Lydia's hospitable home, into which love for her new-found Lord, and gratitude to these, his servants and representatives, had "constrained" them to go, and from which they could go, free from cost and care, to their work of preaching Christ. As they passed to and from the place of labor they frequently met a poor slave girl possessed with a "spirit of divination," a demoniac, who cried after them: "These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto you the way of salvation." This she continued to do until Paul, wearied with her crying and moved with compassion for the poor sufferer, commanded the evil spirit to come out of her. The effect of his words was immediate, and the demoniac was restored. This act of mercy aroused the anger of the multitude, and subjected the apostles to their first experience of a heathen persecution. We need not stop to discuss the mysterious possession under which the slave was held but content ourselves with simply accepting the statement of the inspired historian, which can be as easily explained as disproved, and much more easily believed than denied. Many days had passed in pleasant and successful prosecution of their work—now imprisonment and stripes awaited them; but though the conditions were changed, the results were the same. God's blessings were upon them, and success rewarded their labors. The way of duty is always the way of safety, but not always the way of ease and comfort.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—THE PERSECUTION OF PAUL AND SILAS.

Ver. 19. When the owners of the evil-eyed girl saw that by the curing of her malady her peculiar value had been destroyed, they became enraged, and violently laying hands on Paul and Silas, the two most prominent members of the missionary band, they hurriedly dragged them into the market-place—the Greek "agora," the chief place of concourse—in this case also the "forum," in which the Roman magistrates held court.

Ver. 20. The "magistrates" spoken of in this verse may, or may not, have been the same as the "rulers" of the preceding verse. If not there were in prætore, the superior officers, to whom the prisoners were sent by the inferior court. The charges preferred against the prisoners were: 1. That they were Jews. This was enough to prejudice their case, as the Jews were hated and despised by the Romans, and a recent edict had banished them from the city of Rome; and 2 "that they exceedingly trouble our city." This was false, as the apostles were quiet and orderly, and the only "trouble" made was by the angry mob, which had been aroused by the owners of the slave girl. It is true that these were "troubled," for their "hope of gain was gone."

Ver. 21. The latter part of this second charge was true, for it was against the law to introduce innovations in religion. The innocence of the apostles must be found in their obedience to a higher law—the law of God—even at the cost of violating a lower law—the law of the land. When God's law contravenes human law, we must obey the former, even though we suffer the penalty of the violation of the latter.

Ver. 22. No sooner were the charges made than the infuriated mob arose howling against them, and the honorable and dignified prætors yielding to the influence, with their own hands tore the clothes from the backs of the helpless prisoners, and commanded the lictors to beat them with rods.

Ver. 23 The punishment the apostles received was the first of three Roman scourgings that Paul received. It was with "many stripes," and not limited to forty stripes, as by the merciful provision of the Jewish law. When the scourging had been administered they were thrust into prison, with the instruction to the jailer to keep them securely.

Ver. 24. The jailer manifested a willing—at least, a very faithful—obedience to the instructions given, for he not only looked them up, but thrust them into the inner or lower dungeon, and, as if to add to their torture, fastened their feet into the heavy beam, which compelled them to lie upon their wounded and bleeding backs upon the hard dungeon floor.

II.—THE EARTHQUAKE.

Ver. 25. It is not wonderful that Paul and Silas prayed, for prayer is the channel through which the burdened and afflicted heart often pours itself out; but that they "sang praises to God" is wonderful, and gives striking witness to the fortitude and zeal that inspired them, and to the all-sufficiency of Christ, who dwelt within them. No wonder that their fellow-prisoners listened attentively to them, for those moldy walls were more accustomed to groans than songs at midnight. They prayed for their deliverance, possibly, but certainly for the coming of God's kingdom, and rejoiced that they were counted worthy to suffer for Christ's sake.

Ver. 26. The earthquake was the Lord's answer to their prayer. The Deliverer was with them, and this mighty manifestation of his favor was the guarantee of their success. The loosing of the band showed the miraculous nature of the event. The foundations shaken, the doors broken from their fastenings and the staples torn from the wall, might have indicated the presence of an earthquake, without implying a connection with the events of the preceding day; but that "everyone's bands were loosed" showed that God was in the earthquake.

Ver. 27. The jailer was answerable for the safety of the prisoners with his own life, and he preferred suicide to disgrace. Many eminent heathen writers commend suicide, and in heathen countries the act is and has ever been of frequent occurrence.

Ver. 28. The spirit that afterward, upon the sinking ship, naturally assumed control, here rises by its very inherent superiority into the position of command. The purpose of the jailer and the actuating motive were seen at a glance, and Paul, in a loud tone, assured him that none of his prisoners had escaped. Paul's action excited no surprise. It was what we expected him to do, and yet what no ordinary prisoner would have done.

Ver. 29. Their holy zeal, their unmoved patience, their songs in the night, their miraculous deliverance, and their calm self-possession so impressed the jailer that, calling for lights, he leaped into the dungeon, and, trembling with awe and fear, prostrated himself a captive at the feet of his prisoners.

III.—THE CONVERSION OF THE JAILER.

Ver. 30. This jailer may have heard the apostles preach; he may have heard the strange cry of the slave girl; he may have witnessed the expulsion of the spirit; he may have been one of the infuriated mob. His conviction may have been more enlightened than is generally supposed—at any rate, it was genuine, and he asked the most momentous question that a man ever asked or God ever answered. His case was desperate; he must be saved, and saved then, and he was ready to do anything to accomplish his desire. Such a man always gets an answer.

Ver. 31. Paul knew but one thing that would help him; nobody knows more than one; there is but one. Belief in Jesus Christ, a trustful submission to his law, a willing acceptance of him as prophet, priest and king—that is all.

Ver. 32. Forgetting weariness and wounds, the apostles spoke to him and to those who gathered about him the Word of the Lord, the way of salvation.

Ver. 33. In this verse we see the evidences of a changed heart. The hard-hearted keeper has become the friend, the host, the nurse. The experience was the same in Lydia's case; the grateful heart is glad to give something where it receives so much. This is the scriptural method and the divine law. They have received spiritual things; it is but right that they should give temporal things. "He washed and was washed; they from stripes, himself from sins." (Chrysostom.) The verse reads as if his children also received the ordinance of baptism. In this connection refer to verse 15 concerning Lydia and her household.

Ver. 34. They had probably not eaten anything for nearly twenty-four hours. They now break their long fast at the table of their grateful host, while he with all his house rejoices in the Lord. There is much in the jailer's case that renders it peculiarly interesting; but in its essential elements it is identical with the experience of every child of God, viz: A deep conviction, a willing submission, a simple faith, and an abounding joy.

Commissioner of Education for the Colored People.

At the recent annual meeting of the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the following action was taken:

In response to the communication from Rev. Geo. W. Walker, respecting the Commissioner of Education for the Colored People, we advise against the election of a commissioner before the next General Conference, and take occasion to commend most heartily the work being done, urge the collection of the assessment for that cause, and hope the assessment for another year will be accepted by all the Annual Conferences. We suggest, also, that a statement of the work and other facts needed be furnished the Bishops, to be used in their several Conference sessions.

Pride That Puffeth Up.

Were I called on to name one of the most powerful weapons of warfare employed by Satan in carrying on his work of destroying human souls, I would unhesitatingly say: Pride—that kind of pride which we are warned against in the Scripture, that makes us "think more highly of ourselves than we ought to think." The pride that causes us to seek the esteem and confidence of our fellow-beings, by building for ourselves good character and moral standing, is commendable; but the pride that "puffeth up" is ruinous and detestable.

When the devil can influence a man or woman in such a way as to get them up to that degree of vanity which tells them, for instance, that it is humiliating to kneel in church when prayer is being offered, he has them just where he wants them. The same kind of pride keeps thousands of our young men and women away from the altar, where they would otherwise go, to ask an interest in the prayers of the Christian people.

To mention the various hinderances to the spread of Christianity caused by this species of pride would consume more space than I feel justified in asking for. In the First Epistle general of Peter (v, 6) we find these words: "Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." Humility is one of the Christian graces that Christ loved to dwell upon in his teachings while on earth. The call of the widow of Nain was as much to him as that of the richest nobleman. Nowhere does he excuse himself on the ground of improper surroundings or associations, but enters the hovel of the peasant as willingly as though it were the palace of a king. There is no attitude too humble for us to assume for the sake of him who took upon himself our likeness, that we might inherit the right to enter into a blissful eternity.

To Whom it May Concern.

Macon, Ga., March 18, 1893.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. Is is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

The genius of infidelity leaves me, and the genius of Christianity comes to my side. She, too, takes me by the hand, and I go with her through the same earth, past the same flowers, the same rocks and forests and hills; takes me over the seats of the nations of the earth and teaches me the same languages; takes me through the domain of the sciences and adds one more, the science of salvation; teaches me the languages of earth and adds one more, the language of heaven. She mounts with me to the skies; I drink in light from the same sun, pass to the same fixed stars, resolve the same nebulæ and away out again unto the last star where my former guide left me. And I gaze into the face of the genius of Christianity and ask, "Is this all?" What a look of pity and love she casts upon me as she says: "Is this all? This is but the portico; it is but the threshold, it is the entrance to the Father's house." And she puts the glass of faith in my hand, and I look through it, and away beyond the stars, away beyond the multiplied systems, I see the great centre, the throne of God, about which all things move—the great central point of the universe. And as I look there is One upon the throne; he is my brother; and I look again, and my name is written on his hands; and I cry out with ecstasy:

"Before the throne my surety stands,
My name is written on his hands."

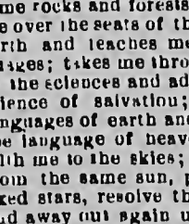
The following is from Mrs. J. W. Tillbrook, wife of the Mayor of McKeesport, Penn.:



Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 6 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

He has never been very robust, but now seems healthy and daily growing stronger."

HOOD'S PILLS do not purge, pain or gripe, but act promptly, easily and efficiently. 25c.

THE WORLD'S FAIR
And American Railways.

THE QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE, widely known as the road running the "Finest Trains in the South," is in the field to carry everybody from the South to the World's Fair at Chicago. No part of the Southern country is left uncared for by this great railway and its connections. The Through Car System is an admirable exposition of the wonderful capabilities of American railroading. From New Orleans Through Sleeping Cars run daily, morning and evening, carrying its passengers via Cincinnati or Louisville, as they may select.

From Shreveport, Vicksburg and Jackson another Through Sleeping Car Line comes to join and become a part of the magnificent Vestibuled Through Trains, which passing through Birmingham and the famous Wills Valley of Alabama, is joined at Chattanooga by the train from Jacksonville, Fla., Brunswick, and Atlanta, Ga., over the E. T. V. & Ga. Ry., and proceeds north over the beautiful Cincinnati Southern, through the grandest natural scenery and most attractive historical country in the world, to Oakdale, where another magnificent Pullman car is received, coming from the Richmond & Danville System from Charleston, S. C., through Columbia, S. C., the beautiful French Broad country, and Asheville, N. C., and Knoxville, Tenn.

The time to Chicago is made so as to afford the most convenient hour for departures from the principal cities, and arrivals in Chicago.

Passengers can purchase tickets good over one line north of the River, and returning via another if they desire a variable route without extra charge. Or they can go via Cincinnati, returning via Louisville, or vice versa.

Round-trip tickets on sale at reduced rates. Agents of the Chicago line will on request assist in looking up rooms or accommodations for visitors to the Fair.

Extraordinary Offer.

In another column occurs a ringing article from the pen of Bro. L. Carley, of the Mississippi Conference. This is in line with numerous articles of a similar tenor that have come to us from various sources, and sets forth in ample form the convictions of the present publisher of the ADVOCATE, long held and often expressed as to the proper policy of its publication. And while we do not feel fully prepared to commit the paper to such a change of financial base at this time, there can be no peril to any interest involved by subjecting this view of the publisher and these advices of many brethren to a practical test. The situation of the paper as to its finances, the stress of the season, calendar and business, demand moreover that something out of the usual should be done both to retrieve its credit and to extend its influence. We, therefore, offer the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to new subscribers until Jan. 1, 1894, for fifty cents, when sent in clubs of ten, and accompanied by the cash.

Judge Moise, of the Criminal District Court, of this city, deserves the especial thanks of the New Orleans public and the commendation of good people everywhere for his prompt action in dismissing a petit jury for a flagrant misapplication of justice in freeing a notorious criminal on trial for a confessed crime. If the greatest curse of any land is a corrupt judiciary, according to the most distinguished jurist which the Anglo-Saxon race has produced, the greatest blessing must be an incorrupt one. Judges Moise and Ferguson in a difficult field are making records for courage, probity and devotion to the people's interests to which their fellow-citizens will point with pride for all time.

Public opinion is often not the opinion of the public. Political knaves know how to water it or, worse still, to convert it into a weather gauge. What is called public opinion was manifestly against our Lord and his teaching, as it has condemned his most faithful disciples in all subsequent ages. Public opinion was against Wesley and Luther, and it may be quoted in advance as the determined opponent of every man and measure that is devoted to the public weal. It was against Sam Jones in New Orleans, and in Chicago it is against the American Sabbath as strong as the winds that blow from its great lake. The voice of the people is the voice of God only when we conceive of the people as one. But even the whole people sometimes err, as does the Pope and his numerous advisers.

If we should publish all the notices commendatory of the new management of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE that come into this office, we should have no room for other personals. Our friends are very kind, but we fear that the new editor is hardly subject of congratulation until the weather or the work abates.

Preachers of the Word.

It makes not much difference whether preachers are in the apostolical succession or not, if they can manage to be in the Christly succession. Paul, the great apostle, rejoiced not that he was an apostle of men, but that he was an epistle of Christ. I, quoth the apostle, am crucified, nailed to death on the Roman timbers, but he, the Crucified, has come to life, and is glorified in me. Paul's ministry was more than seraphic, it was Christly. He knew nothing but Christ. He gloried in nothing but Christ. And that Pauline Christ was not the sentimental, popular, and even fashionable Jesus of the modern drawing-room; not the Jesus of Bethlehem, or Nazareth, or even Bethabara, but the Jesus of Calvary. That reproachful Christ of curse who bled without the gate, and whom even the elements anathematized in his woful taking off, was the Christ of his glorying in every sermon and under every sky. "I preach Christ crucified"—dost thou, indeed, brave apostle?—"to the Jew a stumble block and to the Greek foolishness." He would not be satisfied with a scholastic Christ when there was a Christ whose touch would heal lepers, and whose voice would still tempests and whose glance would quell demons. Christ is not dead, he would have said; why pronounce funeral orations over him? Christ is not without a sceptre; why consign him crownless and dominionless to realms of philosophy? While the bent body of the Damascus convert lived, at least; Christ, the miracle worker, doing greater miracles than any he wrought with unseared palms in the Galilean days, lived and preached and shook the world. What though of contemptible speech and despicable person, did not kings shut their mouths at the little Jew, and did not Jerusalem mobs forget their rage to dwell on his sentences! Small as he was, the world rocked under his tread; contemptible as he was, it sometimes turned upside down when he stepped across the equator. If Christ was the incarnated Word, the eternal wisdom turned to flesh, and speaking as man never spake, so was Paul, for Christ died to perpetuate himself in an era of Pauls. "I, the weak formula," said Christ, "the bare expression, the mere psychical grafted on the physical as an object lesson am standing between you and the power of godliness. I must go away and come again." The body of limitations must retire that the Spirit of all grace may come in. Not without design the genealogy of soul-saving reads, "God begat the Word and the Word begat the Holy Ghost and the Holy Ghost begat the apostles and the apostles begat the ends of the earth." It was not enough to have the Christ image, the Christ power was indispensable. Ye have a great commission and a great theme, and a great field glistening with the portents of harvest, but "wait at Jernsalem till ye shall be endued with power from on high." That power is the resurrection of Christ in apostolic ministries. It is the death of death to the ends of the earth, and of time.

To be a successful advocate for another, forensic annals declare, one must become that other. Paul reduplicated his Lord. He was full of his subject and, therefore, he was the ideal preacher.

But he was also, we repeat, full of faith and the Holy Ghost. Indeed, it may be worth somebody's while to investigate and account for the coincidence of the Second and Third Persons of the Holy Trinity in one man's ministry to the extent that both were prominent without either being pre-eminent. It is curious certainly, and even more instructive, for when our individuality, more pretentious than his, shall be swallowed up in the blended glories of Christ and the Paraclete we, too, shall be great preachers; we, too, shall have a ministry to wake the dead.

Hearers of the Word.

That which upon all occasions and in all circumstances may be asserted of the ordinary hearer of the Word in the age in which we live, is dullness and decorum. He sits up straight and looks abstracted, not to say owlish, and measures things while refusing himself to be measured. His profundity is something awful, and for ordinary eloquence there is no escape from drowning in that deep sea. Sphinxes in the pew make a great deal of the perspiration and vociferation, against which the well-bred hearer loudly declaims on the street corner and by the fireside.

"That is a refrigerator," said a brother preacher, as we passed under the shadow of a high steeple, promenading; and he explained by saying that it was a place where pulpit orthodoxy was preserved on the ice of fashionable devotion to dogma. Yes, a refrigerator, we assented, with a sigh.

Choired singing and hired preaching may have much to do with freezing congregations, but we are persuaded that such influence of the minor upon the major is merely reflex and trivial in comparison with the execution done upon the former by the latter at equally short range. We would not account for the coldness of the Arctic country by the presence of icebergs there nor for the heat of Africa by the simooms of great Sahara. Rather we know that Arctic cold piled with icy fingers those mountains of the sea, and that that devouring wind of the desert was exhaled from the lungs of the tropics. The prophet did not write, like priest like people, but with deeper insight, "like people like priest." "Take heed how ye hear," said the Savior whose marvelous utterances of simple though startling truth fell upon dull ears. Judas was a martyr to covetousness; Ananias to lying and deceit, and Eutychus, otherwise a most excellent person, to the spirit of slumber. The death sentence was executed upon all three.

But, looking at the subject from its humanly side, Demosthenes had a roaring crowd and made a roaring success. Patrick Henry was enthused to eloquence and great fame, exhorting people to take up arms who were burning for freedom. It is just about proverbial now that the occasion makes the man, and that orators come from the popular mould like bullets from the hot receptacle where molten ore is poured.

Pulpit eloquence is less dependent upon environment, it is true, but it rarely blooms in an atmosphere of Winter. We once knew a sermon kindled to strains almost divine by the rapture of an eye, and we are not sure that we have not known many to reach the period of bloom in the sunlight of a smile. Many of the early preachers were shouted into fame by the early class leaders and the impassioned rank and file who "took up the fervid strain and shouted the echo back again." "Whom we preach," said Paul, "which is Christ in you the hope of glory." Unemotional religion is religion that is dead, while it lives. Our Lord had nobody to say Amen for him and no converts to speak of. Later the apostles went in fervid groups, and the fire kindled, and there was a great burning throughout the world.

First, we pity the preacher who has not been himself baptized with fire from on high, and, second, the preacher who preaches to a congregation who have not heard whether there be any Holy Ghost, and who in their religious life have sacrificed the spiritual to the super-intellectual. It is, perhaps, not saying too much to declare that this is the last state of the preacher.

That There May Be Equality.

No two preachers can be just alike from the human side, and every two preachers ought to be just alike from the divine side. The fullness of him that filleth all in all, while it may not disturb distinctions, will obliterate differences and declare the balance between gifts and graces. The most useful ministers are not the most gifted. The most pious not the most popular. And we can not account for the former by differing circumstances any more than we can account for the latter by differing tastes. Yet we may account for both if our antithesis is not too involved, by the fact that God values earthly ministries for their element of utility and man for their quality of ornamentation. God would have goodness to be our excelling trait; man, the more doubtful faculty of greatness.

On the day of Pentecost they were all filled, and every man the equal of his neighbor. They had all things common—gifts, graces and possessions. Peter was spokesman only by virtue of seniority and sanguinous temperament. In the pentecostal age, as men were more or less filled, their ministries prevailed more or less. Stephen and Philip were not only from the ranks, but from the rear ranks; yet Jerusalem could not withstand the spirit and wisdom with which they spoke.

All this is instructive, even to the wise. When as a divinely called ministry we revert to the divine standard of attainments, we will find that many things that trouble us now will adjust themselves without legislation. Among these the equalization of ministerial rank and pay will not be the least or last. If not paid out of a common fund, the brother of high degree will sometimes be consigned to the privations of Post Oak, and the brother of low degree occasionally regale himself with the splendors of High Steeple. It may even happen that a giraffe and a rough-coated Texas steer will be yoked to the same burden, and strain contentedly up the same heights of moral achievement.

An Open Letter to the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

DEAR BRETHREN: Recent occurrences in connection with the ADVOCATE have saddened many hearts. The publisher failed, and the editor, after working most of this year for nothing, resigned. Fortunately, one was found who was induced to bear the burdens of both publisher and editor. He seems hopeful as to the future, and I would rejoice to see the outlook grow brighter every day. But will it do so? I believe the time has come for an advance movement without which the ADVOCATE will continue to drag heavily in the future as it has done in the past.

Pardon me for saying the ADVOCATE is not doing the work to which, in the providence of God, it has been called. It has not been a success. Let me explain. To be a success it must be on a solid financial basis, and it must reach the people for whose benefit it was established. Has there ever been a time when this was the case? Whatever answer may be given as to the past, we know what the answer must be as to the present. The failure of the publisher and the resignation of the editor show the financial condition to be anything but solid and safe. The extent of its circulation is seen in a statement made by the editor in the last number: "The issue of the ADVOCATE last week was nearly seven thousand." Does that look like it is reaching the people? There ought to be sent out every week, into the three patronizing Conferences, at least, five or six times seven thousand copies. No smaller number than this will begin to reach the great mass of people for whom the ADVOCATE is designed. If I am right in my estimate of success, then it is not even approximating success. Who will venture to say that it is?

Can the ADVOCATE be made a success? I believe it can. How? By putting the subscription price down to one dollar a year. Then it will be within reach of a vast multitude who will subscribe for it at that price, but will not do so at two dollars a year. So long as the people can get weekly secular papers as large as the ADVOCATE for fifty cents and one dollar, they will not give two dollars for the ADVOCATE.

I know, and the people know, the arguments against a reduction in the price, but they are not satisfactory. Reduce the subscription price to one dollar, and then the number of subscribers will increase to such an extent, and the advertising space will be worth so much more, that its financial success will be assured at once and the people will be reached by its enlightening and elevating influence. Let me quote here an editorial paragraph from the ADVOCATE, of June 1:

> A pointer for our House. The Baptist Advance Quarterly is issued at nine cents a year and has a circulation of one-half million copies each quarter. Our Senior Quarterly is issued at twenty-five cents a year, and has a circulation of—how many?

Is this not an equally good "pointer" for our ADVOCATE? I think it is. You need not be afraid that the preachers will not work for the ADVOCATE without a commission. If there is a preacher who will not do this, simply for the good it will do his people, he ought to locate at once. How much do the preachers make in the way of commission anyway? Occasionally one gets a subscriber at two dollars with more labor than would be necessary to get a half-dozen at one dollar. If I were able to do so, I would supply every family in my charge with the ADVOCATE at my own expense rather than have them remain without its wholesome influence, and I do not think there are many preachers who would not be willing to do the same. However, if the paper must be kept at two dollars a year, the preachers will be entitled to all the commission they can get, for their labors will be hard. Like Dr. Carter, I have worked for the ADVOCATE most of this year for nothing.

I have in my charge over five hundred and fifty members. There are about thirty ADVOCATES taken. Less than half my stewards read it. I have tried to induce them to take it, but have failed so far. I may not be a good agent. The most serious hindrance in my way is the price. The two-dollar men are already subscribers. At two dollars a year I have no good reason to hope to get another subscriber. But if you will put the paper at one dollar a year, I promise to send you, at least, fifty subscribers within the next two months. The ADVOCATE, at one dollar a year, would revolutionize this circuit. My people perish for lack of knowledge which the ADVOCATE could supply. I need its help in various ways. I have received less than one hundred and fifty dollars this year for my support. I believe the ADVOCATE could greatly relieve the hard times at the parsonage, and the amount of good the people would receive would make the angels rejoice.

I believe every enterprise of the church would be immensely stimulated by a reduction in the subscription price of our papers. The people need information and they are not getting it. They ask for bread and we give them—nothing. This is an age of cheap secular literature; why not of religious literature as well? Will the Savior's saying, "The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light," always be true? Has not the time come when our great need, as Dr. Beard says, "is not more truth in the abstract, but more sense in the concrete"?

Respectfully,

L. CARLEY.

NOTES.

New subscribers are coming in every day.

A covetous church makes a grasping ministry.

The Christian's motto, "Holiness to the Lord."

They were all "called to be saints" in the apostles' time.

Man's infidelity to God makes countless thousands perish.

The Christian science that makes no use of the cross of Christ is pestilential.

Get ready for the camp meeting on your knees—and not packing Saratoga trunks.

The present is an era of building in New Orleans, and that means solid prosperity.

Sunday is a dull day to the average sinner, even with the World's Fair thrown in.

Mississippi's heart is in the right place, and she is rallying to the paper in its distress.

Let us get back to the religion of Wesley, and forward to the days of world-conquest.

The trouble with the World's Fair is, that it is too big for the size of the people that will see it.

Heaven will be a great opportunity for the people who have missed some of the big sights down here.

A man with his feathers turned the wrong way will find a frizzled chicken in every man and woman that he meets.

The preaching of sanctification, by a strange metonomy, is fruitful of more conversions than the preaching of justification.

Our Bishops are men of great talent and moral worth, and should not be subjected to anonymous attacks by the scribleram tribe.

There is nothing so tolerant as the Methodist Church, and the man who can't live in it in peace, must be seditious, or a great heretic.

When a friend comes to us, as several have done the past week, with congratulations and a cash subscription, we appreciate the congratulations.

> "Jesus, I fain would find

> Thy burning charity.

> So shall the fervor of my zeal
> Be the pure flame of love."

The annual Summer secession from the city has not only begun, but is already far advanced. We trust that it will be without loss of spirituality to churches or people.

We are glad to note the success of the W. C. T. U. Lunch House and Restaurant, on Gravier street, between Camp and St. Charles. ADVOCATE readers from the country and city, too, can get a good and economical meal there.

An aged German, who is a member in good standing of a New York City Methodist Church, is in New Orleans hunting up data that will enable him to enter the Soldiers' Home as a disabled Confederate soldier. He came to this city as an emigrant from Germany in the beginning of 1862, was pressed into service on a Confederate ship, and during the fight at Fort Jackson was disabled, and in an explosion thrown ashore where he was found apparently dead and kindly treated by a German family with whom he remained until the close of the war. He never completely recovered from his injuries, but after 1865 wandered about the cities of the country obtaining a precarious living. A loss of memory resulting from injuries about the head prevents on his part anything like a distinct recollection of the occurrence. On the ship where he served he was known as Long John and Dutch John. Anyone who has any recollection of him at this time and any of his countrymen or others who will help him in distress, will confer a great favor upon him by addressing him in care of the ADVOCATE. His name is Hans Jarvislowski.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

The ADVOCATE in clubs of ten from now until Jan. 1, 1894, at fifty cents. Cash must accompany names.

The Rescue Mission rescues. "Help those women."

Sooner or later whisky will push a man, a neighborhood, a nation to the wall.

Prof. John L. Scales paid us an appreciated call last week, journeying homeward to Mansfield.

We have a friend who has turned his home into a rescue mission. May he increase to a multitude!

Never took a gift man, woman or calf in the mouth. Forsaken by the world, they are the Lord's own.

During one day of last week the ADVOCATE received more than twenty subscribers. And the good work goes on.

Anyone who will scan our columns with care will discover at once that only prosperous people advertise in them.

If you do not want to subscribe, send us an advertisement. The ADVOCATE and its seven thousand readers will not forget you.

Many friends to whom we owe correspondence will appreciate the situation and consider this edition of the ADVOCATE a love letter.

Our young friend, Rev. Marcy Lyons, and associate are publishing a live prohibition paper at Morgan City. Nothing prohibits that we have ever seen tried but prohibition.

Mrs. Lou L. Collins is in the city introducing an excellent book of poems written by her late husband, Prof. J. S. Collins, who was for a while professor in Mississippi College, Clinton, Miss.

Concerning ministerial zeal, it was said of Richard Baxter's manner in the pulpit, in comparison with ordinary preachers, that he would set the world on fire while another was lighting a match.

Rev. John H. Keener has had the degree of Doctoris Divinitatis conferred upon him by his alma mater, the Southern University at Greensboro, Ala. This is not a bit premature, and the well-won distruction will be well worn.

The Methodist people of Jonesville, La., in the overflowed district, appeal to the Methodist public for help to discharge a debt of $35 against the lot on which their church is building. Money sent for this purpose to the ADVOCATE will be acknowledged and forwarded to them.

The ADVOCATE agent, Capt. Geo. R. Lawrence, is a gentleman of worth and piety, whose family resides in the bounds of Bro. Roy's work. Capt. Lawrence merits the confidence and esteem of the public, who will be invited by him in fulfilling his engagements with the paper.

The work, "Some Rebel Relics from the Seat of War," favorably noticed in these columns some weeks ago, sells at one dollar, and not one dollar and fifty cents, as per former notice. The work, by Rev. A. T. Goodloe, has been highly commended, and may be had of Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn.

The many friends of Dr. R. L. Schroeder will be glad to learn that he has been appointed assayer of the mint under the Cleveland administration. A worthier gentleman could not have been selected for the place. While conferring deserved honor, the government secures credit to itself by such appointments.

Rev. R. B. Downer, pastor of the church in Pearlington, Miss., and one of the most useful ministers of his conference, paid the ADVOCATE a pleasant call on last Tuesday. He believes in and practices the diamond rule, which reads, "Do unto the Lord as you would have him do unto you." His handshake was tonic to the new editor.

We feel constrained to say again that it seems morally certain that the present editor and publisher of the ADVOCATE will get nothing but thanks for his services for several months to come. This may be sauce for those who envy him his job. In the meantime all the other employees of the office will be regularly paid—that is, if the cash holds out.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens has been, under God, the instrumentality in the conversion of Gus Albers, the murderer who expiated, on Friday last, the death sentence for the killing of Mrs. Lyman, two years ago. Albers, from being the most hardened of criminals, gave every indication of being a changed man. Bro. Ahrens, whom he had known in infancy, devoted much time in laboring with him, passing the day and night preceding the execution in his cell. Albers was a man of great courage, and died as he had lived—without fear.

In a divided church we see the energy which was meant to subdue the world preying upon itself.—J. H. Newman.

Rev. J. T. Nicholson.

Knowing that the brethren and friends of Bro. Nicholson would like to hear occasionally from him, and more especially since the assassination of his brother, I, therefore, will, by your permission, Mr. Editor, avail myself of a short space in the ADVOCATE to communicate the desired information.

Bro. Nicholson and his wife spent part of a day with us a few days past. We were not only delighted to meet them again, and to have them with us at the parsonage, but also to see them in excellent health. Bro. Nicholson was looking fresh and well. He not only looked like himself again, but looked healthier than usual. He has preached some, and that, too, with great liberty. By the continuance of God's blessings on him, we feel confident that he will be in a better condition for itinerant work every way by Conference than he has been for some time. We praise God for his recovery!

Brethren, let us continue to pray for him and his precious family.

P. and H. M. Conference Society.

During the Meridian District Conference, which convened in East End Church, Meridian, May 25, we perfected the organization of the Parsonage and Home Mission Conference Society.

It was through the influence and kindness of Rev. T. L. Mellen, Friday, May 26, was set apart for the women, and at the request of Conference secretary he took the chair and presided to our perfect satisfaction. The following officers were unanimously elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. L. N. Chatfield, Meridian, Miss.; first vice-president, Mrs. E. P. Mellen, Meridian, Miss.; second vice-president, Mrs. M. E. Brogan, Vossburg, Miss.; treasurer, Mrs. T. B. Holloman, Wesson, Miss.; recording secretary, Mrs. Mary F. Lewis, Meridian, Miss.; Conference secretary, Mrs. Clara H. Cope, Paulding, Miss.; district secretaries—Mrs. R. Kennedy, Meridian district; Mrs. S. J. Johnson, Seashore district; Mrs. B. F. Jones, Vicksburg district; Mrs. P. A. Johnston, Woodville district.

It is hoped that Jackson, Brandon, and Brookhaven districts will soon be supplied with district secretaries, and the secretaries will labor earnestly and diligently for success, that every charge in the Mississippi Conference may own a home for its pastor.

The success of our work depends largely upon the co-operation of our preachers. It is in our Discipline, and I can not see how they can wilfully neglect it. None should realize the importance of the work more than they.

We shall not soon forget the kindness and hospitality shown us by the good people of East End. Still we give God the praise.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the Executive Committee.

Bishop Haygood had assured us that he could assist us in the work, but failed to reach the Conference on account of sickness.

JUNE.

BY ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

Strong June, superb, serene, elate,
With conscience of thy sovereign state,
Untouched of thunder, though the storm
Scathe here and there thy shuddering skies,
And bid its lightning cross thine eyes
With fire, thy golden hours inform
Earth and the souls of men with life,
That brings forth peace from shining strife.

BIBLE CORNER.

Mr. Moody says that the Bible should be studied topically. Take a subject, as Love, or Trust, or Obedience, and run out the references.

John the Evangelist's Gospel begins with a sublime account of the divinity of Christ; his Epistle with an equally majestic postulant setting forth his humanity.

What continency of truth in the Scriptures: The Beloved Apostle became the apostle of love. Paul, the chief of sinners, became the apostle to sinners. Peter, the typical Jew, the apostle to the Hebrews in all lands.

The word "charity," in I. Cor. xiii, is adapted by our translators from Wycliff's version. All other of the early English versions, including Matthew, Coverdale and Tyndall, and nearly all modern translators, render the same word "love." The Greek word thus rendered is agapæ, and the Saxon form of the translation is leben, whose generic meaning is life.

Of John the Baptist it was said by competent witnesses that he was "a bright and shining light." That "all the people counted him for a prophet." That "all Jerusalem and the country round about were baptized of him in the Jordan." That "a greater than he hath not risen among men." That the Messiah came, "demanding to be baptized of him." That "he was greater than a prophet." Such tribute as has never been paid to any other of the sons of men.

Missionary Debt—Mississippi Conference.

The following Annual Conferences have paid their apportionment of missionary debt: Montana, Southwest Missouri, Texas, Virginia, West Texas, Western, East Texas—seven. The following have paid a larger per cent. of their apportionment than the Mississippi Conference: Florida, German, Louisiana, Memphis, Missouri, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Western Virginia, West North Carolina—ten. So that seventeen Conferences are ahead of us! Brethren, shall the Lord send more tornadoes or an earthquake or two? "Awake, thou that sleepest!"

A Correction.

In my last report for Indian Mission I reported $27 for mission for Woodville District Conference, which was a mistake. Woodville district paid at their Conference $24 50, and Bro. W. W. Simmons, of Gloster, $2.50, which was sent by Bro. Johnston, altogether, and that caused the mistake.

MRS. T. P. FULLILOVE,
Pres. W. M. S. of La.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record for the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Pleasant excitement it must have been to these fishers for men when they felt many grasping and drawing.—Arnot.

Southern Female College, Petersburg, Virginia.

Even the casual visitor to Petersburg, just before he reaches the beautiful Central Park, must notice the handsome, massive buildings of this well-known college. Its dark brick walls and square lofty towers sustain well the dignity of an honorable name acquired by thirty years of earnest, successful work. In going through the college one is impressed with the spacious parlors and sitting-rooms, the large, well-fitted chapel, the handsome library and the comfortable home-like air of this old Virginia institution. After seeing the ample accommodations and learning the personnel of the faculty, it is not a surprise to find that graduates that have gone out from these halls have filled the most responsible positions in many of the leading female colleges of the country. This is easy to understand in view of the fact that its teachers are of the highest rank, and it is indeed gratifying to see a female college carrying out so thorough and extended a course of study and drawing its teachers not only from the best colleges of this country, but also from such institutions as the University of Berlin, Germany, and famous old Trinity College in Ireland.

THE HERO.

BY JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

Nay, never falter; no great deed is done
By falterers who ask for certainty.
No good is certain but the steadiest mind,
The undivided will to seek the good;
'Tis that compels the elements and wrings
A human music from the indifferent air.
The greatest gift the hero leaves his race
Is to have been a hero. Say we fail!
We shed the high tradition of the world,
And leave our spirit in our children's breasts.

Troublesome Treasures.

It was Harriet Beecher Stowe who said in reference to children: "Between the worry of their living and the fear of their dying, we (mothers) die daily." There are few mothers who would deny the statement, for, from the moment the wee bit of humanity is laid in the mother's arms, the worry and fear—one or both—are constantly with the mother. The wee one may grow to manhood, and go hundreds of miles from home, but the mother thinks anxiously of him as when a child, though she may not, in these later years, be worried with his living.

But it is in the days of childhood, that the mother is most weighed down with the bairns. The ignorant young mother fancies that her babe is dying at every attack of colic, but he survives to frighten her again times without number, during the various stages of teething, whooping cough and measles, and other childish inevitables. Then how soon, how very soon, these little ones show an inclination to assert themselves in opposition to their elders. A conscientious mother will find herself sorely puzzled many times to know what course to pursue. Often she feels that she is not equal to the task given her, but the task is hers, and she can not shirk it. True, she is not equal to it, but he who commissioned her to care for and instruct the little ones will also strengthen and assist her.

And is there no reward for those days and nights of anxious watching over the sick child, and the hours of anxiety lest he go astray? Yes, great is the reward. What more can she ask than that her child attain a perfect manhood or perfect womanhood? And when the child, grown to manhood, lovingly kisses the mother and says, "All that I am I owe to your care, your instruction and example"—for this, I say, there is not a mother in the land but would rejoice that she was privileged to "die daily."—*F. The Telephonometer—An Instrument to Measure Talk.

A new and ingenious contrivance has been put on the market in Berlin and London. For some time Dr. Strecker, Chief Inspector of the German Government Telephone Department, has advocated the measuring of the telephonic conversation carried on by each individual subscriber, thus enabling the telephone companies to check the misuse by non-subscribers on the one hand, and to divide the burden of payment on the part of the subscriber commensurately to the number and length of conversations indulged in.

It is obvious that such a system, which asks a subscriber to pay only for services actually rendered by the telephone company, is far more reasonable than that which charges indiscriminately a yearly rental, no matter whether the subscriber be a busy stockholder, merchant, or fashionable tradesman, who is constantly ringing up the exchange, or a retired farmer, who occasionally unhooks his receiver.

Dr. Strecker suggested the construction of an instrument which would register the time of each conversation from the time of ringing up the exchange to the ringing-off signal. He showed that the principle of charging for telephonic conversation according to the time, which has been successfully introduced and practiced on long distance lines, could and would be made universal if a simple, reliable, and accurate meter could be devised.

The German Telephone Department thereupon issued a program inviting the construction of a telephone meter that would enable the yearly rental to be abolished and the substitution of a fixed rate according to the duration of the conversation. This invitation has been taken up by a leading firm of telephone engineers, who have patented an approved form of telephone meter.

The object of the instrument is announced as being to control the duration of the telephonic conversations and to total up the same. It is intended to connect it to the telephone station, and it consists mainly of a watch or clock movement having a starting and stopping arrangement which is operated by unhooking the receiver from and replacing the same to the automatic switch. It is intended to increase the efficiency of the meter by an arrangement which will permit the telephone to be used only when the clock is wound up, and will show when the clock is running down.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Sound of a Sunbeam.

One of the most wonderful discoveries in science that has been made within the last year or two is the fact that a beam of light produces sound. A beam of sunlight is thrown through a lens on a glass vessel that contains lamp-black, colored silk or worsted, or other substances. A disk, having slits or openings cut in it, is made to revolve swiftly in this beam of light, so as to cut it up, thus making alternate flashes of light and shadow. On putting the ear to the glass vessel strange sounds are heard so long as the flashing beam is falling on the vessel. Recently a more wonderful discovery has been made. A beam of sunlight is caused to pass through a prism, so as to produce what is called the solar spectrum, or rainbow. The disk is turned, and the colored light of the rainbow is made to break through it. Now place the ear to the vessel containing the silk, wool or other material. As the colored lights of the spectrum fall upon it sounds will be given by different parts of the spectrum, and there will be silence in other parts. For instance, if the vessel contains red worsted, and the green light flashes upon it, loud sounds will be given. Only feeble sounds will be heard if the red and blue parts of the rainbow fall upon the vessel, and the other colors make no sound at all. Green silk gives sound best in a red light. Every kind of material gives more or less sound in different colors, and utters no sound in others.—The Watchman.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

HER WINGS.

BY HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.

What made any of us love her, who can say?
Just a piece of winsome mischief all the day,
Flittering, fluttering, like a rose-leaf, here and there.
Ready voice, and tangled sunshine in her hair.

One day, when her sins were many—of their kind—
Clambering down the well, fairyland to find,
Tossing, for a lesson, puss into the briar,
Mocking the sweet mocking-bird, an octave higher.

On her dimpled shoulder then I laid a hand,
"Angels up in heaven have wings, you understand;
But," I said, "we have to start them here, you know;
Isn't it quite time that your wings began to grow?

"They grow best when we live as the angels do,
Loving duty, loving everybody, too;
You're so tall now - yes, indeed if you had wings,
They would start just here, I think, the lovely things!"

Then I took that hand of hers and passed it down
Where the little shoulder-blade escaped the gown.
"Let me see—why, what is this? Now you don't believe,
Can a wing have started just behind your sleeve?"

Stretching back and feeling with many a grimace—
What a gladsome wonder settled on her face!
"Will they be like real angel's wings?" she said,
"Reaching to my feet and up above my head?"

"Real angel wings, when grown, will your wings be!"
Circling as a bird does, full of whistling glee,
"Oh! my wings are growing!" she sang, as off she flew;
"I will love the neighbors just as I love you."

But how often after that I had to say
If those shoulder-blades were doing the right way.
"Really," said I, "don't you think they've grown, yourself?"
"Oh, I've tried to be so good!" replied the elf.

Then we questioned of their color when complete,
Those great plumes that stretched along from head to feet:
Should they be the tint of violet's purple grain
Where the sunshine through them takes a royal stain?

Should they be a yellow, like the primrose bloom
Opening with the evening star, in twilight gloom?
Azure, like the baby's eyes in morning glow?
"Oh, the sky is so blue," she said, "they wouldn't show!"

"Mine," said I, at last, "shall be a flush of rose Burning at the very end to dazzling snows."
"Mine shall be," she said, "when in heaven I wake,
Just the color that it pleases God to make."

What a heart-break haunts remembrance of that day!
Ah, what idle words those colors and that play!
Silver gray as doves, or white beyond the moon,
I had not dreamed that she would wear those wings so soon.

Strange Companionships.

The hermit crab perpetually carries about on the shell it inhabits a species of sea anemone. The crab feeds the anemone, and when he changes his shell for a larger abode, the anemone is detached from the old habitation and carefully placed on the new one. The anemone gets not only food, but also change of air and scene, cheaply and without effort, and the crab gets protection from the anemone. Fishes do not relish anemones as diet, and the presence of the polyp on the shell will deter them from an approach to seize its inmate. There are other crabs which carry an anemone on each of their nipping claws, and change their burdens to the new shell after the old one has been slipped off.

There is a species of fish known habitually to live inside a big sea anemone, and to swim in and out of the body of its host at will. A pea crab is found living inside the large horse mussel, and other molluscs possess crustacean tenants of allied species.

The shark has a companion—the pilot fish. They are ever upon his fins, his head, or his back, and feed on the scraps left after the shark has fed. They are in form of a trout, and streaked like a mackerel, but the streaks are white and black, and there is more black than white. Probably this fish removes parasites from the skin of his larger neighbor.

The crocodile has a companion, the spurwinged plover. The crocodile opens its mouth, the bird goes in, and the mouth is closed. In a minute are two the mouth of the reptile opens, the bird comes out, goes to the river, as to drink, returns to the crocodile, enters its mouth, and again comes out and goes to the river as before. It is supposed that the bird removes food from between the reptile's teeth that would breed worms. Two birds that were seen going through this performance were shot, but their crops were not examined, as they ought to have been, to determine their contents.—London Illustrated News.

Buz-Fiz.

This is an amplification of a game which has long been played under the name Buz. In Buz, the game consists in counting up from one, each player given a number in turn, but whenever the number seven appears, or any of its multiples, the word "buz" must be substituted. Anyone who fails in doing this is dropped from the game. A few keep on long enough to reach the seventies, which must be gone through with "buz-one," "buz-two," and so on till seventy-seven is reached as "buz buz."

In Buz fiz the game is far more complicated. "Buz" is still required whenever seven shall appear, but at every recurrence of three or its multiple, the word "quack" must be substituted, and for five and its multiple, "fiz" must be used. Fifteen would be "quack-fiz;" twenty-one would "quack-buz." But besides all these complications, at every return of eleven or its multiple, instead of eleven, "cock-a-doodle doo," is required. The game becomes very animated; there are few who survive the first twenty, and only one or two are apt to struggle on for "quack-fiz" at thirty, and the line of thirties, all beginning with "quack." Of course, if anyone omits any one of the multiples of a number which requires a changed number, he fails, and is dropped. When fifty is reached, each number must begin with "fiz." The game begins in counting in this way, each person in turn giving a number—one, two, quack, four, fiz, quack, buz, eight, quack, fiz, cock-a-doodle-doo, and so on, quack coming in again for twelve, as well as for thirteen, as it contains the figure three; fourteen is buz; and fifteen quack-fiz, the smaller number always coming first.—Good Housekeeping.

Good Advice.

The native aversion to hard work, and the absence of a proper pride in high achievement, are the two stumbling blocks to success in life. There is little hope for boy or man in figuring out the least amount of work which will escape the swift judgment of an employer; and an inerrant indication of the commonplace which never succeeds, is that of regarding one's employment simply as a source of income. If there is one word above all others for a youth who means to do something well in this world it is, "Put your whole soul into any work given you to do. Abhor the beggarly spirit which enters so largely into what is known as 'time' work, and let a genuine enthusiasm temper everything." Working by the hour-dial may insure a living, but it has nothing in it of the spirit which makes the best workman. A gentleman went to Edison with his young son, who was about to begin work as office-boy in a well known business house. The father asked the great electrician for a motto which the boy might take to heart in his struggle for promotion and success. After a moment's pause, Edison said laconically, "Never look at the clock!"

I believe the first test of a truly great man is his humility. I do not mean by humility doubt of his own power, or hesitation in speaking his opinions, but a right understanding of the relation between what he can do and say and the rest of the world's doings and sayings. All great men not only know their own business, but usually know that they know it, and are not only right in their main opinions, but usually know that they are, only they do not think much of themselves on that account. They do not expect their fellowmen to fall down and worship them; they have a curious undersense of powerlessness, feeling that the greatness is not in them, but through them; that they could not do or be anything else than God made them. And they see something divine and God-made in every other man they meet, and are endlessly, foolishly, incredibly merciful. They do their work, feeling that they can not well help it; the story must be told, the effect put down; if people like it, well and good; and if not, the world will not be much the worse.—Ruskin.

In many cases it is very hard to fix the bounds of good and evil, because these part, as day and night, which are separated by twilight.—Whichcot.

DAVISON—Sister F. E. Davison, daughter of Tilley and Eliza Davison, was born in Itawamba county, Miss., July 26, 1836, and lived with her parents until the day of her death, May 28, 1893.

She quietly passed from this world to one above, where she joined her sainted father and the sister that had gone before her. She left to mourn a mother, four brothers and three sisters, two of whom are in Texas.

She was a Christian woman, loved by all who knew her. She was a good worker in the church and Sunday-school.

The church will miss her. There is a vacant seat that can not be filled by any in the community. There is a voice stilled in death; but, alas! there is a home desolate and sad, where hearts are bleeding for one that is gone from earth to heaven! Should we mourn? No, not for one so good as she.

She was a good neighbor, a kind friend, and a dutiful Christian; but we are to remember that our loss is her gain. The lamp of life has gone out on earth, but will continue to burn on the other shore.

O God! help us pray for thy will to be done on earth as it is done in heaven! Eighteen years spent in preparing for a crown to wear through the ages of eternity!

J. W. RAPER, Pastor.

CROW—MARY HOLLY was born in Chesterfield district, S. C., Dec. 1, 1825. She became a member of M. E Church at an early age; married Bryant Good Crow, Feb. 20 1845; moved to Claiborne La., in 1851. Here the light of a Christian soul was shed for forty-two years. She died June 12, 1893, at Celesti, Hunt county, Texas.

Five sons and two daughters survive her, her husband and one daughter having preceded her to that beautiful home of the soul. We can offer no comfort to the bereaved ones greater than that which they derive from the knowledge that she died just outside the pearly gates of that celestial city. Composed and placable in disposition, she drew around herself an innumerable host of trusting, loving friends. As a neighbor and friend, she was thoughtful, considerate, and charitable. With a beautiful character, loving heart and gentle manner she won and never repelled those with whom she came in contact.

For a number of years she was our most intimate friend. Aunt Mary was always the one to participate in our joys and sorrows. Now our congratulating and consoling words are no more, for she has gone to make that angelic band more complete, more heavenly, more sublime, and that voice to make the chorus more sweet. MANNIE.

KEMP—JAMES BERLIN KEMP was born Aug 8, [illegible], and died June 5, 1893, making him sixteen years ten months and twenty-seven days old. He met with his death by falling overboard in the Ticklaw river, while arranging a log for the log way at Glasscock's Saw Mill, to which he was an employee. He sustained a very heavy blow about the temple as he fell, which disabled him so far as swimming was concerned. I had only been acquainted with Berdie (as we all called him) about five weeks, when I was sent for to preach his funeral. His parents live in Algiers. The occasion of his being out here: he was on a visit to his grandfather's, Bro. Adolphus Rousseaux.

He joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Bro. Ahrens, in 1888. In regard to religious life, I am not much acquainted. So far as I knew, he always conducted himself becometh a gentleman. He was very nicely dressed at all places I ever saw him. He has loved parents, sisters, brothers and a host of relatives to mourn his loss. May they lean on God for comfort and tranquility of soul, for no other can relieve in such an hour!

W. T. WOODWARD, P. C.

GERALD—EMMA ELLA, second daughter of Jerry B. and Lavinia Gerald, was born in East Baton Rouge parish, Nov. 28, 1879, and died of heart failure, June 4, 1893.

Emma joined the M. E Church, South, at Pine Grove, St. Helena parish, under the preaching of Rev. E. T. Denson, in August, 1892, and, although she made no outward demonstration, yet she was a good child and loved the Lord. Her great delight was in getting her Sunday-school lesson whenever she had opportunity to go. She was obedient to her parents and did all her strength would allow to help them.

Her last illness was of short duration, and, though she had been an invalid so long, yet the end was not soon expected. She suddenly and quietly fell asleep in Christ on the night of June 4, 1893, and now awaits papa and Willie on the shining shore. May they meet us there! A. J. FLEMING.

LEWIS—Rev. JOSEPH E. LEWIS departed this life Feb. 21, 1893, at the age of seventy-three. He joined the M. E. Church in his sixteenth year, and lived a devoted life until his death. He served as a preacher for thirty-eight years of his life. He was a liberal contributor to all calls of church, and a friend to the widow and orphans. He was a kind husband, a devoted father. He said for us not to weep for him, he was going to rest. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss. We do not mourn as those who have no hope, for we will meet him in the sweet by-and-by, where parting is no more. HIS DAUGHTER.

PALMER—HUMPRY—LEE PALMER and LENA HUMPRY died at their home, Morehouse parish, La., this week; the former aged six months and the latter four years.

How few like little ones will be missed at home; but Jesus loved them best, and took them to reign with him. Weep not, dear mother, but be faithful to God, and we can meet Willie and Lennie where there will be no more pain and death. We committed their little bodies to the ground in the Bon Idee Cemetery on the eighteenth of June. Farewell, little ones, until we meet again.

AUNT IDA WHITAKER.

HERNANDEZ.—MAY HERNANDEZ died June 18, 1893. She was an invalid from infancy. Her mother died with dropsy shortly after little May's birth. She never saw a well day during her seven years of her life. God sent his messenger in the night of the third instant, and took little May to dwell with him forevermore.

W. T. WOODWARD, P. C.

KELLY—Mrs. JANE KELLY was born in Rankin county, Miss., Feb. 19, 1851, and died at her home in Simpson county, Miss., April 26, 1893.

Sister Kelly was baptized in infancy, and joined the Methodist Church at the age of fifteen years. She was a devoted Christian, and faithful to her church. Her pastor always met with a hearty welcome at her home.

She was married to Richard Kelly, Jan. 20, 1876, and leaves her husband and eight children to mourn for her. She was devotedly attached to her husband and children; made her home happy and cheerful. She lived mainly for her children, and one week before she died she admonished them to meet her in heaven. She has passed through the pearly gates into her heavenly home, where she awaits her loved ones, relatives and many friends.

God bless and comfort the bereaved ones, and brighten the home that has been made sad and desolate! JAS. F. ROBINSON.

Knee Work.

The famous evangelist, Caughey, was once asked the secret of a revival. His quaint answer was knee work, KNEE WORK, KNEE WORK. This is the secret of every great outpouring of the Spirit of God in the work of revival. It is not in the power and eloquence of the preacher; nor in the season or the place; nor in the songs or exhortation but it is the united and prevailing prayer of God's people. A revival is not to be worked up; it is to be called down. Whenever a church or community feels the need of a revival, and this need drives the people of God to their knees in prayer, the revival has begun. The extent and depth of the work will be in proportion, not so much to the activity and zeal in songs and exhortations, as to their earnestness and constancy at the mercy seat. This is the abiding plane of the church's power to reclaim the backslider and save the lost.

Our preachers are hoping for great revivals. Many devoted men and women sympathize with the pastor in this earnest desire. Let pastors and people unite in importunate prayer for the outpouring of the Spirit. If they wrestle, as did Jacob at Peniel, with a supreme, all-conquering purpose to be blest, the revival will be sure to come, and it will begin where it must begin if it is to save many—in the hearts of the preachers themselves, and of their working and praying members. Great religious awakenings work, like the blood-flow, from the heart outwards. It must begin in the quickening of the spiritual life of the pastor and of the leaders of Israel. The revival is not worth the name which works from the circumference toward the centre, from the followers to the leaders in the church. An unrevived pastor is one of the greatest hinderances to the work of revival.—Southern Christian Advocate.

Beware How Ye Walk.

Every man's thinking machine necessarily makes him walk close to great intellectual perils. It is a sad thing not to think. It is more awful to think Emerson says: "Beware when God lets a thinker loose among men." I walked with a friend lately among electrical dynamos. One had to walk carefully. Beware how you touch this hand or that wheel. It is death-charged. These dynamos were lighting the city. But walking among the wheels was to be in deadly jeopardy.

Thinking lights the world. And yet the thinking machine deals out equally light and death. Use the machine rightly, it will flood your path with light; use it wrongly, it is a thunderbolt to smite you; it will strike you stone blind. When I see the skeptics sneering at a future life, I say to myself, "Poor fellows, God gave them dynamos to generate light to pierce through the grave. They have used them to make thunderbolts for their own destruction."—Rev. C. L. Thompson, D. D.

The Court of Appeals has decided for Sunday opening. There is no attempt to defend the dishonesty of the Directory nor its violation of law. The court simply reinses the method of injunction to compel the enforcement of the act of Congress. The President can, if he chooses now, enforce the law by executive action, the same as other laws are enforced.

"It will take $5,000,000 of receipts from the Fair." This was the exclamation of a New England gentleman on hearing of the final decision of the Court of Appeals to open the World's Fair on Sunday. The speaker is no enthusiast, nor is he a radical "Sabbatarian," as that word goes. He is a New England gentleman of conservative views, who was born in Ohio, has lived many years in Iowa, but has gone lately to reside in Boston. The remark was not made so much to express his own sentiment or sympathy as to indicate his candid judgment of the financial results of opening the Fair on Sunday. He says thousands upon thousands who had intended to come to the Fair, from all parts of the East and interior, including Ohio, will not now come. They have lost all interest in the Fair. It is so important a thing to them to save our American Sabbath—to maintain for the hard-working man and woman a rest day once in seven—so vital to the welfare of their country and so much a matter of conscience, as well as of humanity and patriotism, that they simply are disheartened and disgusted. Some will stay away because they think it a plain duty—a refuse to dishonesty and disregard of law, both divine and human. Farm, Field and Fireside.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Rev. Dr. Daniel Steele uttered some ringing words in a recent address: "I wish I had the power to reach every Methodist on the round earth. I would say, cease living on the heroism of your fathers, quit glorying in numbers, sacrificing to statistics and burning incense of the General Minutes; down upon your knees and seek and find for yourselves the secret of the power of the fathers, a clean heart and the endowment of power from on high; then arise and unfurl the banner of salvation free and full, and a common sense theology, the beauty of which Joseph Cook says 'is that it can be preached.' Then in double quick time charge upon the hosts of sins and conquer the world for Christ." - Christian Standard.

Sympathy for the Distressed.

Our lives are all music if we but touch the chords rightly, so says one of our poets, and we all know there is a golden thread entering into the warp and woof of every-day life that is touched by sympathy for the distressed and suffering. At such a time what a boon to have on hand Dicks' Mul-eu-ol to offer as a relief for cuts, burns, bruises, sprains and colic, it is soothing and cooling. Large bottles 50 cents.

No mineral water will produce the beneficial results that follow taking ONE or more of "BEECHAM'S PILLS" with a glass of water immediately upon arising in the morning.

Painless. Effectual. Covered with a tasteless, soluble coating.
"Worth a guinea a box."—Price only 25 cents.
Of all druggists, or a box will be mailed on receipt of 25cts. in stamps by B. F. Allen Co., 365 Canal St., New York.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The first week's exercises of the Louisiana State Chautauqua closed on June 30, with an immense audience in attendance to listen to John Temple Graves lecture on "The Reign of the Demagogue."

The Chinese consul at San Francisco has received and posted an address from the Emperor of China to his subjects in this country. He urges them to obey the laws of the land and to give no further cause for prejudice.

Georgia has paid $181,225 to crippled veterans of the Confederacy last year. There has been great mortality among these old soldiers during the last ten years. In 1883 the number of pensioners on the Georgia rolls was 1,000, while now there are only 773.

Treasury officials are deep in the mysteries of figures, closing up the vast money accounts of the government for the fiscal year 1892-93. The figures show in round numbers that the total receipts for the year have aggregated $385,000,000, while the expenditures will foot up $383,000,000, leaving a surplus of receipts above expenditures of $2,000,000.

The officers of the Bimetallic Silver Mine, one of the richest producers of silver in Montana, have ordered the closing of that mine until the silver situation warrants working it again. The Combination Mine was ordered closed also and the Granite Mountain Mine will follow suit in a few days. All three are owned by the same parties. Four thousand men will be thrown out of work in these properties.

The State law requiring foreign insurance companies carrying risks in Tennessee to pay the same tax as domestic corporations was discussed at a meeting of representatives of fully one-half of the foreign companies doing business in the State. A number of companies have withdrawn during the past week, and it is anticipated that many others will withdraw. Seventeen gave notice of withdrawal since the meeting.

The labors of the Parish Superintendents' Convention in Lake Charles, La., were concluded on June 30. The session was begun by an invocation by Rev. C. W. Lyman. Prof. Brumbaugh, "the great angel of education," as he is styled by the convention, gave the superintendents a practical talk, after which the resolutions were offered and adopted, and the seventh Annual Convention of the parish superintendents of public education adjourned sine die.

Superintendent Stump, of the Bureau of Immigration, has declined to give permit in advance for the landing of 2,300 Hebrews from abroad. The request was preferred by S. J. Klein, who represents a syndicate engaged in colonization of 200,000 acres of land in Utah. If they come they would be subject to all the requirements of inspection provided by law, and those rejected, if any, would be returned to Europe at the expense of the steamship line transporting them.

The great International Conference of the Epworth League, in Cleveland, O., closed on July 2. On July 2, at sunrise, prayer meeting was held at Music Hall. At 9:30 there was a love-feast and reunion of the founders at Epworth Memorial Church, and services at all the other Methodist Churches at 10:30. There were mass meetings in the afternoon at Music Hall and Epworth Memorial Church, and again in the evening at Music Hall and Franklin Avenue Church.

At the very last moment, apparently, before the meeting of the Cabinet, President Cleveland yielded to the popular demand for an extra session of Congress. He wrote his proclamation convening Congress on Aug. 7, and laid it before the Cabinet. While there was general acquiescence in the President's views and no objections advanced to the calling of the extra session, the sentiment was not entirely unanimous that it was strictly necessary. A few members of the Cabinet have held the opinion that the circumstances did not justify an extra session earlier than September.

FOREIGN.

Queen Victoria has contributed £100 to the fund for the benefit of the families of the Victoria victims. The Queen rarely raises the £100 limit for charity.

It is said that United States legations in Europe have been instructed to study and report on existing systems of taxation, in order that the Washington government may select the least oppressive and offensive to cover the deficit which will result from the reform of the tariff.

The Indian government is discussing the claims of the various banks which have £1,500,000 in silver now on passage to India, and who want compensation for the depreciation in the value of the metal arising from the action of the government in stopping the free coinage of silver. It is said that the government is inclined to secure the banks against loss.

Although no two estimates of the ultimate composition of the Reichstag may exactly agree, all reliable reckonings show a divergence of only five members in the estimates of those who will support the army bill, the calculators placing the number favoring the measure at between 205 and 210. As there are 397 members of the Reichstag, these calculations show a sufficiently strong majority to pass the bill. It is estimated that the opponents of the government in the next House will number from 187 to 192.

A dispatch from Mecca states that 650 deaths from cholera have occurred in that city on June 25

Summer Weakness, that tired feeling, loss of appetite and nervous prostration are driven away by Hood's Sarsaparilla, like mist before the morning sun. To realize the benefit of this great medicine, give it a trial.

Sure, efficient, easy—Hood's Pills.

At 12 o'clock, June 30, the people of the Palmetto State began upon the new dispensation, and the government takes charge of all the whisky business. From the official returns it appears that the State will open dispensaries in nineteen out of the thirty-four counties in the State. In at least six of these the State bar rooms were established and the cocktail dispensers appointed by the county Boards of Control, in open violation of the law, which requires the indorsement of a majority of the freehold voters of a community for the establishment of a dispensary. In these counties the courts will be appealed to for injunctions to prevent the opening of State bar rooms.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

ON THE BEACH.

The twenty-second annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 12, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 5, and remain on the ground until the twenty sixth. Holders of camp meeting railroad tickets desiring to attend the session of the Biblical Institute and Summer School for Christian Workers, which opens its first annual session on July 26, can get their railroad tickets extended until August 31. All trains stop at the grounds during the meeting. Express trains Nos. 5 and 6 will stop on signal from June 1 to Oct. 1.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing Districts Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the rush at the opening of the camp meeting should address communications to W. B. Thomson, chairman Tent and Cot Committee, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Cot Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution towards defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

OUR COUNTRY.

BY WILLIAM JEWETT PABODIE.

Our country!—'tis a glorious land!
With broad arms stretched from shore to shore,
The proud Pacific chafes her strand,
She hears the dark Atlantic roar;
And, nurtured on her ample breast,
How many a goodly prospect lies
In Nature's wildest grandeur dreat,
Enamell'd with her loveliest dyes.

Rich prairies, deck'd with flowers of old,
Like sunlit oceans roll afar;
Broad lakes her azure heavens behold,
Reflecting clear each trembling star,
And mighty rivers, mountain-born,
Go sweeping onward, dark and deep,
Through forests where the bounding fawn
Beneath their sheltering branches leap.

And, cradled 'mid her clustering hills,
Sweet vales in dream-like beauty hide,
Where love the air with music fills:
And calm content and peace abide;
For plenty here her influence pours
In rich profusion o'er the land,
And, sent to seize her generous store,
There prowls no tyrant's hireling band.

Great God! we thank thee for this home—
This bounteous birthland of the free;
Where wanderers from afar may come,
And breathe the air of liberty!
Still may her flowers untrampled spring,
Her harvests wave, her cities rise;
And yet, till Time shall fold his wing,
Remain earth's loveliest paradise!

Jesus and the Bible.

It may be wise for any who are disposed to make Christ the scapegoat of a rejected Bible to consider what the attitude of Christ himself was toward that blessed Book.

He was familiar with it. He had learned it memoriter when a lad; and he never received it as his infallible rule of faith and practice. He so received it without any "ifs" or "buts," any turning or twisting of language, any mental reservation or qualification. He was honest and cordial in so receiving it. In time of trial it was his court of last appeal. "It is written," was enough for him; and "It is written," ought to be enough for us.

Not only so, he distinctly committed himself to the truth of the Scriptures. He called them "truth." He did not say they "contain," but they are the infallible Word of God.

He affixed his seal to the record of the Deluge, saying: "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall the coming of the Son of man be." He believed in the story of the destruction of the cities of the plain by fire and brimstone from heaven; in the healing efficacy of the brazen serpent; in turning of Lot's wife into a pillar of salt; and in Jonah in the whale's belly. He was probably as well advised as most biblical experts respecting the question of inerrancy, God, knowing all, he did not hesitate to indorse these "unbelievable wonder tales."

Nor must we overlook his eloquent silence as to those alleged errors and discrepancies which so vex the souls of our learned folk. Did he know that these infelicities were in Holy Writ? How is it that he found no fault with the Mosaic cosmogony? How is it that he uttered no word against those dreadful psalms, some of which can not be read in our modern pulpits? And how shall we account for the fact that in his reference to the fulfillment of prophecy, even to its last jot and tittle, he made no reference whatever to those prophecies concerning himself which "have never been fulfilled and never can be because their time has gone by."

Surely it is not too much to suppose that Jesus was an honest man. He seems in all other relations to have been perfectly frank, ingenuous, outspoken. He was a fervent hater of shams and impositions, of lying frontlets and false traditions, and deceptions of every sort. Why, then, had he either to say as to these "errors" of Scripture? Was he not a biblical expert? was his moral sensitiveness defective? We are in a dilemma. The question is, in its last reduction—assuming the correctness of recent conclusions as to "scriptural errors"—is this whether Jesus Christ was unscrupulous, or merely ignorant. In either case it goes without saying, we could not receive him as our spiritual guide. He might still be a Savior of biblical experts, but he could not be a Savior for the average thoughtful man.

It would be profitable to go further, and show how Christ adventured his entire work on the verification of the Scripture; how at the very outset of his ministry he opened the scroll at the place where it is written: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me," and at the close went walking with certain disciples of his disciples along the way to Emmaus, "opening unto them the Scriptures concerning himself;" how he always and everywhere planted himself on the absolute truth of Holy Writ, and hypothecated his whole mediatorial work and conquest upon it; how he placed a search warrant in the hand of the humblest believer, giving him to understand that it would be perfectly safe for him to follow this chart over the unknown seas, saying, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me." But the limitations of this paper forbid. Our purpose has been to deprecate the use of the word "Christocentric" as a foil for the rejection of the Scriptures. As to the importance of making Christ supreme in creeds and ethics, in the inward experience and the outward form of godliness, I deem it unnecessary to make any profession beyond what is set forth in the concensus of all who are called after his adorable name. The Christ of the Bible—and there is no other—"is made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption." If we are Christians in truth, and not mere masqueraders, it should go without the need of special protestation that Christ—the Christ of the Bible, with every word of his teaching as to himself, his atoning work, retribution, the truth of Scripture, and all else whatsoever, with every precept that he enjoined upon his people—is made unto us now and henceforth and forever, "first, last, midst, and in all."—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

The World's Great Mistake.

Man is a dual being. He is a spirit of boundless capabilities, supplied with a common animal to subserve its purposes during a brief sojourn on earth. The spirit is destined to live forever, but the animal to die after a short-lived existence. That part of "man formed of the dust of the ground" can not become but little above the worms that crawl upon the earth; but that part which "became a living soul" may become but little lower than the angels that rejoice around the throne of God. Therefore, to give as much attention to the animal as to the spirit is extremely absurd. But to bestow more attention, time and labor to pamper the animal (that will revel and riot to-day, but must die to-morrow), than to perfect the spirit (which must be prepared during its short stay on earth to enjoy the bliss of heaven, or it must suffer the torments of hell), is the utmost extreme of folly. But that is just what the world is doing. Most of people live as though they were to stay here always, and must prepare for that! They don't live as though they had souls to be saved while here, or they will be lost forever; and thus they live, notwithstanding they are warned to "work out their own salvation with fear and trembling." But, what is the first thought that enters the minds of most people when they awake in the morning? Is it not about secular business instead of the welfare of their souls? And what occupies their thoughts and affections, and engages their time and efforts during the live-long day, until they sleep at night, every day and every year they live? Is it not one thing and another—all pertaining to the animal part of their make-up (which was supplied simply for the use of their spiritual being, just as the beasts of burden they use for their secular purposes), instead of preparing their spiritual capacities to enjoy happiness while in this life and bliss in heaven forever? The Lord has given us the Bible, full of directions how to live, that it may be well with us here and hereafter. But how many read the Bible and commune with God in prayer, as they must do so to be happy in this life or the next? Most people live without any reference to God—"God is not in all their thoughts"—and they must die without any claim on heaven. Were they to devote no more thought and effort to business than they do to God and their souls, they could have no success, and would starve to death. They are free agents to choose what they will do, but they must abide the consequences of their choice.

The Savior said: "The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully: and he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have nowhere to bestow my fruits? And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, 'Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.' But God said unto him, 'Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?' So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God."

Now, who will not agree with the Savior that the "rich man" was a "fool" to think his "soul" could "eat" fruits, "drink" wine, and even "be merry" and at "ease" on material things? For the spirit to eat and drink, like an animal, would be as unnatural as for a fish to live out of water, or a man to live in it. Nevertheless, are not most of people as much deluded now as the "rich man" was then? Do they not act like they think now as he did then, that the "soul, having much goods laid up for many years, can take its ease, eat, drink, and be merry"? Why do they strive and toil to add more to what they have, if it be already enough to render them comfortable? If a man has a competency, he can enjoy it better than if he had more. If he adds land to land, house to house, stock to stock, and money to money, he encumbers himself, and lessens, instead of increases, his enjoyments, because he imposes upon himself the additional trouble required to take care of the needless property added. And that is not all, nor the worst of it. While toiling for more than he needs, and then worrying to take care of it, he loses sight of "the one thing needful," and the only thing that can render him happy, and that is the welfare of his soul! In his chase after the shadow he misses the substance, and unhappy disappointment is the result of his great mistake. And he finds that "there is an aching void which the world can not fill." And though "earth has no sorrow heaven can not heal," the misfortune is, but few find it out before "it is too late"! The Savior says, "But few will be saved!" Too many neglect their souls for miscalled pleasure or gain. "For what shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" He would gladly give all, everything he possesses, at the last moment, if he could save his soul then. But he finds out then that property is the merest trash, and has no exchange value in his direst need, when life on earth is ending in darkness, and eternity is opening up in dread reality before the soul unprepared for the change! If the Savior found the "rich man" was a "fool" for making such an egregious mistake, will he not also pronounce all "fools" who now commit the same absurd follies? And if the soul of that deluded "rich man" was required of him that very night, may not the souls of all thus deluded be required of them this night? Everybody had better quit all such dangerous folly, and "become wise unto salvation," and be always ready to die, and then they will be happy while living, but can't be otherwise. While there are pleasures in sin, they are short-lived, and leave the sting of death behind them. But the enjoyments of religion are more real and lasting. Then why not everybody study the Bible, and commune with God in prayer every day, to learn how to be happy? D. W. FOSTER.

Plaisance, La.

Children's Day at Franklinton, La.

On June 4 we celebrated "Children's Day" at Centenary M. E. Church, South, in the town of Franklinton, La. The day commenced very threateningly of rain, heavy clouds giving every indication of a very wet day; but, fortunately, the morning proved only showery, and it faired off toward the afternoon. Notwithstanding the weather, the attendance was quite large, showing the great interest manifested in this exercise. The programme was faithfully adhered to, and proved attractive enough without any additions, the children rendering their parts very well, highly pleased that the day was especially theirs, and proud to be able, in their own small way, to help the cause of the Lord, the latter being a great incentive for the putting forth of the best efforts to make the day an enjoyable one. Their innocence and sweet simplicity, their perfect faith, which believes all and questions nothing, had its effect on some of the older and more callous of the congregation.

Mr. Wm. M. Sullivan, our pastor, addressed the little people, setting forth the object of the celebration in his usual eloquent and entertaining way, holding their attention throughout as he impressively explained to them the duty they owed to their less fortunate and benighted little brethren, to do their utmost in spreading the gospel among them, and, by their little contributions, help in establishing Sunday-schools for them. The readiness with which they responded to this appeal was testified by the cheerful willingness with which they parted with their little savings. The collection, though not very large, was given ungrudgingly and heartily, each one contributing according to his means.

After the morning exercises dinner was served on the grounds, and greatly enjoyed. The tables were loaded with the best of everything, testifying to the liberality and culinary skill of the ladies of Franklinton and suburbs.

After an intermission of an hour and a half, the people repaired to the church to hear, as the closing exercise of the day, an eloquent and able talk on "Intemperance" by our venerable and much-beloved ex-superintendent. The subject was a very appropriate one, as the future men and women were well represented, and our benevolent friend spoke with such fervor as to greatly impress them with his talk, which was full of many touching incidents, showing what a fiend drink can make of a human being. The breathless attention with which he was listened to showed how deep his good words were sinking and taking root, let us hope, in their little hearts. Mr. Babington possesses the knack of holding the attention of his listeners, his talks being filled with some of the most forcible and striking incidents, illustrating his points, thus making it as entertaining and plain to the little children as to the older ones. Through his efforts and devotion to the cause of Christ, the Sunday-school here is at present in a very flourishing condition, the enrollment being above sixty. Nothing that can in any way awaken an interest in the Sunday-school work is considered too arduous by our aged friend, whose only pleasure and aim is the good of those around him.

The membership of the church, since Mr. Sullivan has been among us, has increased to nearly double to what it was before he came among us, proving him no small worker, and his return to this work for another year gave great satisfaction to all in this place. This year Mr. Sullivan is ably assisted by Mr. Benton, a very promising young minister, who puts into his work an earnestness and zeal which can not fail to bear good fruit.

In conclusion, I will say that the celebration of "Children's Day" is a great means of increasing the attendance and interest in Sunday-schools, and hope it is observed and encouraged in all communities. H. L.

Special Prayers.

"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." (St. John xv, 7.)

Who can tell what the Lord will do for us when we measure up to these conditions and stand with an unshaken faith upon this promise? Ever since I was converted I have believed that if we would ask God aright, he would verify his promises. But not until my father led me into the experience of entire sanctification did I know how precious these promises were. Oh, when we abide in him and his Word, and himself abides in us, then when we go to him in prayer, how we can trust him, and how he honors our faith!

Since I've got over into Canaan, and the Lord just abides with me continually, how I do love to spend an hour, "sweet hour of prayer," with him! And as I do, oh, how many things come up that I want to talk to the Father about! Special objects come up, one thing adds to another, till it keeps me much on my knees; but, glory to God, how he blesses me! It is just wonderful how the Lord has answered my prayers. I began at least a month ahead praying the Father for a revival at a certain church on my work, and for a certain family at that church, feeling that if the Lord would bring them into his kingdom, they would be very useful. He wonderfully answered my prayers. The meeting began, deep and glorious results followed, the church thoroughly revived, old men praised God that never did before; two grown young men in this particular family gave their hearts to God, joined the church, went to work, and organized large Sunday-school; one became assistant superintendent.

When we just give up all for Christ, and get that holiness without which we can't see the Lord, and be every whit God's men, get on the altar and stay there, and just trust him, and put every minute of our lives into his service, it is wonderful how he blesses us. I pray the Father to lead our brethren, specially the preachers, into the realm of perfect love, and increase the fruits of their labors in proportion!

A. C. BURT.

Indian Mission.

MR. EDITOR: We want to buy some land for the Choctaw Indians in Mississippi. They are scattered about over several counties, and hence very hard to reach, or to get enough in one community to get up a good church or school; and, as a general thing, they have no homes, and are very anxious for us to help them to settle where they can live in a colony and have church and school. So we want to buy some land and settle them in communities, and there is a tract of land nicely located right where we want it, that can be bought very low now, and we already have a church right near it, and had a school taught by Bro. Cammack last Spring, which was a success.

Now, we are very anxious to purchase the land at once. They will be satisfied with from fifteen to twenty-five acres per family, according to size, and so, with two or three hundred acres, we can settle several families convenient to church and school. Surely we ought to be willing and anxious to do this for them, as this country once belonged to them, but we took it, or bought it from them, and now they are poor and homeless heathen, and have been greatly neglected.

Now, I want to ask all the Methodists, and others, in Mississippi and elsewhere, but especially in Mississippi, to observe the week preceding and embracing the second Sunday in August as a week of prayer and self-denial for the Indian Mission in Mississippi, amount realized to be divided equally, one-half to go toward paying missionaries, and the other to help buy the land needed. We need, at least, one thousand dollars, and surely the eighty thousand Methodists of the two Mississippi Conferences can easily save that much in one week, and then we will make the mission a success.

Brethren and sisters, we ought not to have to write another article on this subject. The whole amount ought to be raised at once. So I will ask the preachers of the two Conferences to please announce to all their congregations to please observe the time appointed, and deny themselves of some of the luxuries and, if need be, the necessaries of life for this important work, and then please get it together and send to me at Oak Ridge, Warren county, Miss. Send check or money order on Vicksburg or Jackson. The ladies can sell chickens, eggs and butter, and the brethren can deny themselves of cigars and some other things, and the whole amount needed can be raised.

At our last session of the Mississippi Conference, Dr. J. M. Weems moved, and there was a subscription of nearly four hundred dollars raised, to send Simpson J. Tubby to Millsaps College. I thought at the time, and think yet, that he was not ready for college yet, and that we could not very well spare him from the mission work just at this time. I also think that he could learn about as much for the present in a good country school, and, at the same time, do a great deal of missionary work, and then the amount that it would take to send him to college will educate him, and help many others up where they live.

Now, what say you, Dr. Weems and brethren that subscribed for that purpose? Do you not think it will do more good to buy land and get them together where Bro. Cammack, or some one else, may teach all of them that will attend free of charge? It may be that other young men among them are anxious to get an education, and some of them would soon be preaching.

Brethren, it seems to me this is the best thing to do. I would like to hear from Dr. Weems and others on the subject.

And now, in conclusion, let me beg you to remember the week of prayer and self-denial, and in the meantime continue to send on any amount you can. We are much behind on salary of missionaries. Please send it on.

And now let me report the following amounts received since the last report for salary of missionaries: Rev. P. A. Johnston and Woodville District Conference, $27; Matthew Howes, $1; Lizzie Howes, $1; Anna Howes, $1; Mrs. Oldham, $3; Rev. W. W. Hopper and wife, $2.50.

To help buy land: Children of Logtown Sunday-school, by Rev. R. B. Dowrer, $8.

Now, who will be the next? I wait patiently. Yours in good earnest for the salvation of the Indians,

A. D. MILLER.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. C. T. Munholland, Athens, La., July 5: "Please announce through the columns of the ADVOCATE that a subscriber and reader of the ADVOCATE sent me two dollars to aid the people or my work who suffered from the hail storm of May 29. It was given to the widow of a local preacher, who received it with many thanks and tears, and a prayer for the giver."

Rev. W. T. Currie, P. C., Ponchatoula, La., July 1: "I have just closed another meeting at Killian Chapel. Results: Church revived, ten accessions, and quite a number professed full salvation. On Wednesday night fifty voices were heard thanking God for what he had done for them. Bros. Woodward, Boyer, Ransaw helped us. To God be all the praise."

Rev. H. P. Lewis, P. C., Caseyville, Miss., July 7: "Our District Conference was a success in more respects than one. We all regretted the absence of our beloved presiding elder, Bro. Woodward, who was at home sick. Terry, where our Conference was held, is a beautiful and growing town. The good people know how to entertain a District Conference. Bro. Griffin is in favor with his people. He is doing a good work. He has built a house for the Lord in Terry—the first church-house ever built in the place. Bro. Griffin has a good wife, daughter of a Methodist preacher, who helps him in his work. God bless them and their charge. My charge, Caseyville circuit, is moving on quietly. Our people, most of them, are kind to the preacher and his family. God bless them, and give us a gracious revival."

Miss Nettie Coker, Marion charge, June 27: "Although Coker's Chapel has never asked a space in your valuable paper, we believe we have something now worthy of publication. Our 'Children's Day' was a grand success. The 'welcome' by the infant class was good. The 'Little Lights' of the programme shone forth in much splendor in the persons of Lida Coker, Virgie Coker, and Cynthia Maggard. 'Speak Gently' was well rendered by Miss Zula Maggard. Miss Octavia Coker won fresh laurels in reciting 'The Angel in the Stone.' The curse of 'Empty Hands' was rendered impressively by Miss Minnie Coker. Miss Rosa Raney held the audience spellbound while she recited 'The Master Calls for Thee.' 'Over the River' was well rendered by Miss Jenoie McInnis. The exercises were interspersed with excellent music under the able management of Mrs. Dr. Brewster and Miss Nettie Coker. But the crowning event of the occasion was the Bible presentation by Miss Villa Coker in fitting words, and a beautiful book-mark made by Miss Nettie Coker, bearing the inscription, 'Presented to Rev. Geo. Bancroft (our pastor) by Coker's Chapel Sunday-school.' His response will not soon be forgotten."

Treasures in the Bible.

A whole Bible makes a whole Christian. I have never met with a vigorous, healthy Christian among those who are all the time doubting passages here and there in the Bible. There are Christians who are good in spots, because they are living on a few passages in the Bible and neglecting the rest.

There is yet a good deal of unexplored country in the Bible. The great American desert in the United States was thought to be, for many years, a worthless tract of country. But there were untold treasures there; hundreds of million of dollars' worth of silver lying under its surface all the while. Just so with some portions of Scripture.

Twelve months spent in searching the Bible, with regard to twelve leading doctrines, one month to each doctrine, would be well spent.

The right place for a ship is in the water; but it is a bad lookout if the water gets into the ship. So the right place for the disciple is in the world, but it is a bad thing when the world gets into the disciple. There is no power without separation. Billy Bray was once asked "how the world was getting on." He replied that he did not know, as he had not been in it for twelve years. If you want a joyful life, you must be out-and-out.—Moody.

A BALLAD OF TREES AND THE MASTER.

BY SIDNEY LANIER.

Into the woods my Master went,
Clean forspent, forspent,
Into the woods my Master came,
Forspent with love and shame.
But the olives they were not blind to him;
The little gray leaves were kind to him,
The thorn tree had a mind to him
When into the woods he came.

Out of the woods my Master went,
And he was well content.
Out of the woods my Master came,
Content with death and shame.
When Death and Shame would woo him—last
From under the trees they drew him fast;
'Twas on a tree they slew him—last
When out of the woods he came.

Vicksburg District Conference.

The Vicksburg District Conference convened in the little village of Hermanville, Miss., June 22, 1893; Rev. D. A. Little, P. E., in the chair. Each session of the Conference was opened with either an experience meeting or a prayer service, lasting fifteen minutes. Preaching each day at eleven A. M. and 8:15 P. M. Much interest was manifested in these services, and the pastor, hopeful that they would result in a revival, secured the assistance of two of the brethren to continue the meeting after the adjournment of Conference.

An immense crowd assembled Sunday to hear the preaching of the Word. Bro. Little conducted the service at eleven A. M., and his sermon was pronounced one of the most able discourses he was ever known to deliver. One person professed conversion at this service, and, no doubt, many others were pricked to the heart. Bro. Little understands the use of the sword of the Spirit, and is loved and honored by all the preachers on his district.

The first evening of the Conference was devoted to Sunday-school work, and according to previous arrangement the following subjects were discussed:

First. "Music in the Sunday-school." Rev. H. M. Ellis opened the discussion. He urged the importance of good singing and favored the use of Sunday-school song books in preference to our standard hymn book. A number of the brethren took issue with him on this point, advocating the use of the Methodist hymn book on the ground that pure Methodist doctrine is found in our book, while such is not the case with other song books, and then it familiarizes the children with Methodist hymns, thus facilitating their singing in the regular church service.

Second. "The hope of the church in the Sunday-school, based on the responsibility of the church; including Christian officers and teachers, the holding of the boys and young men, and doctrinal teaching." W. A. Gunning opened the discussion. He and all others who spoke urged the necessity of having none but Christian teachers in the Sunday-school. It was also suggested that the best way to hold the boys and young men in the Sabbath-school is to get them converted before they are old enough to want to quit, and then they will have no desire to leave.

Third. "The Bible in the Sunday-school." Rev. I. B. Robertson opened the discussion. It was urged that each pupil should have their own Bible, and the present opportunity afforded by the Sunday-school Board to supply the Bible was referred to.

Rev. D. A. Little, the presiding elder, made pertinent and forceful remarks at the close of these discussions, which were much enjoyed by the Conference. By order of the Conference the report on education is sent for publication.

Your Committee on Education submit the following as their report:

Port Gibson Female College is the only institution of learning within the bounds of this district, under the supervision of the Methodist Church. We have heard with pleasure of the success it has enjoyed during the session just closed, under the presidency of Rev. B. F. Jones.

This college is located in the town of Port Gibson, Miss. It is an established institution, with an honorable record, and richly deserves the undivided support of this entire district. As it is the property of the M. E. Church, South, it is but natural that it should look to the Methodists for substantial aid in the way of patronage. The existence of this institution in our territory is not accidental. We owe it to ourselves to perpetuate it and its elevating influence for the weal of our church in this part of our Conference territory. The trustees do not propose any backward movement. Under the blessing of God and with the hearty co-operation of the Methodists in the Vicksburg district, they propose to furnish the best facilities for the education of the daughters in this part of our beloved State. The next session opens in September.

We note with pleasure the presence and helpful influence of Rev. Jno. W. Chambers, agent of Millsaps College.

C. A. POWELL,
Chairman of Committee.

The Conference adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we have heard with regret that the publisher of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE has been compelled to retire from the paper on account of the failure of subscribers to pay their accounts.

Resolved, That, recognizing the necessity of a Conference organ, we will rally to the Publishing Committee in their effort to put the paper on a better financial basis.

W. B. LEWIS.
C. A. POWELL.

Resolved, That we, as a District Conference, extend our sympathy and prayers to Sister Benj. Jones in her deep bereavement, and that we send her a copy of this resolution.

C. A. POWELL,
P. H. HOWSE.

A few visiting brethren honored us with their presence and added much to the interest of the Conference—namely: Rev. Jno. W. Chambers, agent Millsaps College; Rev. P. A. Johnston, presiding elder of the Woodville district; Rev. J. W. McLaurin, agent American Bible Society; Rev. W. D. Dominick, Conference colporter.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: W. A. Gunning, T. A. Holloman, C. W. Campbell, T. W. Sullivan. Alternates: W. O. Watkins, I. O. Lloyd.

Harriston will entertain the Conference next year.

W. H. LEWIS, Secretary.

An Evil under the Sun.

It must be apparent to every lover of the church that this is not the time for giving expression to carping criticism, but for a calm and intelligent discussion of those things that more directly relate to the life and the effectiveness of the body of Christ. We are now passing through a period of distrust and of unrest in both Church and State. And it is the most dangerous period of history because it is the period most favorable for small men and for smaller enterprises. For the most part, the formative period is a comparatively safe one; for in such times there is a breadth of apprehension and a depth of devotion that more than compensates for the mistakes made. But it is when we reach the narrows, where the current seems swift and deep, with projecting dangers on either side and rising from beneath, that cool heads and consecrated hearts are needed. As Bishop Galloway so aptly put it in discussing another line of thought at the dedication of Millsaps College: The need of the church is followers, not leaders; followers, not of men, but of principles. In such times the man with a grievance in his heart or a bee in his bonnet are alike to be distrusted; for the revenge of the one is not more patent in forming opinions and in directing his conduct than is the ambition of the other. And in each case it is always the individual good sought at the expense of the multitude.

Let us, therefore, spend much time in prayer, with the fullest faith in these words of our blessed Lord: "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come." As these words were spoken for the church at a time when our Lord had said her trials would be great, so are they for us at this time, when we feel that a mistake will hurt us for many a day to come. Will we not accept the offered help?

Then, too, we must bring the body of the church into closer and less expensive contact with the great heart-throb of her life—I mean her literature. As the matter now stands none but the rich, or, at the least, the well-to-do can afford the expense necessary to keep posted and to work intelligently with the church. Do you know what it costs to bring up a family in the Southern Methodist Church, posted in, and, therefore, loyal to the administration of the church, in periodical literature alone? Just $9.90! This does not include any but connectional literature save the Conference organ, and does not include the expense of remittance, etc., which will sum the expense up to about $11 per annum.

Is it wise—aye, is it just—to put the cost of living and knowing, and intelligent doing, so high as to be out of the reach of nineteen-twentieths of our people? To assume that it is, is also to affirm that either the conditions that make the necessity are wrong, or else that the mission of the church to by far the largest number of those worshiping at her altars is at an end. And yet each year witnesses an increase of the number of these periodicals, or in the price of those already in existence. Where, and when, and how will it end? This fact has well nigh driven the sale of books out of the experience of the pastor, and, at the same time, has placed a burden upon him greater than he can bear. Let our next General Conference put an end to these things, and give the men who are called to the ministry some time to preach the gospel and to devote to private prayer and the study of the Word.

Mansfield College Appeal.

It having become a matter of absolute necessity to raise funds to purchase and enlarge the equipment of this college, the Board of Managers, with the consent of the Bishop of the Conference, appointed the president of the college to secure the much needed funds.

Under the present management the college has been prospering and fulfilling the great mission for which it was founded; but during the last year the financial condition of the country has been so greatly depressed that it becomes necessary to change the arrangement, to purchase the equipment in order to carry on the affairs of the institution more successfully. In this age more extensive appliances, apparatus and conveniences are needed than formerly to carry an institution to its highest success. Then to place this institution in the highest rank to compete fully with rival and State institutions, the church to which it belongs ought to show larger liberality toward it and advance with all needed aid its great interest.

No institution that belongs to the Methodist Church ought to suffer. This college is exceedingly valuable to the Conference. It is situated in the healthiest portion of the State and has a location unsurpassed for beauty and adaptation for its work. It needs the aid and fostering care of the Conference and the help and sympathy of every Methodist in the State. All that is necessary is to arouse a widespread interest and attract attention to the work done here, of which none need be ashamed if only the high excellence attained could be extensively known. Although a portion of the State has been devastated by the flood, still the greater part is intact, and with the promise of returning prosperity, much can be done, and this institution can be handsomely sustained.

Whatever you contribute here will be safely invested and secured to the institution. Let every reader of this article make an immediate contribution, as he or she loves the church and desires to see her institutions prosper. If any of the preachers will allow a personal appeal to his congregation, the writer will greatly appreciate it. A new auditorium is in contemplation, and contributions for the same will be gladly received. This is the first appeal that has been made for this college in years; therefore, on account of the great necessity, it ought to be gladly responded to. The fathers built the institution, let us sustain it.

Any contribution sent to A. F. Jackson, secretary of the Board, or to the undersigned will be promptly acknowledged.

The Ultimate Test of Faith.

There are many false standards by which the faith of a disciple is tested. Some prove their faith only by their professions; but this has been compared by Christ to one who built his house on the sand, and the spiritual storm made a great ruin—it collapsed. The states of joy, of peace, of calm contentment, of rapturous love—each have been quoted as the tests, each has its advocates, and all are the states which are the accompaniment of strong faith wielded by a true Christian. But faith that is subjective in its states must be also objective in its end. It centers upon a person, it is the highest devotion to a person, it is the grasp upon another; so it must manifest itself in other forms than a mere subjectivity that begins and ends in self, and every state. All emotions end in this subjectivity. So Christ puts the ultimate test of faith not in love that begins and ends in a single heart, or peace that is imbedded in a single conscience, or joy that thrills one lone heart, but in that faithfulness that goes forth to minister love, peace, joy to the neighbor's heart. Faithfulness is the test of our faith. He that is to be blessed is not to be blest in hearing, nor believing the Word of Life; but James says to be blest in the doing the Word. The highest belief is in doing the Word. Faith that seizes the atonement in its power is full of the single purpose of serving him by faithfulness day by day. "He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much." Where Christ makes the test of the faithful use of riches a test of the higher riches—joy, peace, love, forgiveness—so in the avenues of life the final test is how faithful are you in the ten thousand services—small, insignificant, it may seem, but all pointing to that faith in Jesus by which your soul lives. In what consists devotion to a person? Why, in the acts of love more than the words or praises of their nobility, their magnificent character. Then faith which comprises the highest trust is only to be fully evinced by this unseen fidelity to one absent; one not seen, but loved; one adored and honored above all other persons in the universe. What has he committed to thee? His love, joy, peace. Let them be known by the man you meet, by a daily life of devotion to him. What have you done to prove your love to him? Where have you sought to let your adoration be seen? Only in the days of worship; only on the set days before men. Let it be seen in the daily toils. Faithful to him in the marts of commerce, in the lonely field, in the commotion of the whirling train, in all the avenues of life. He is the man of faith who thus proves himself by his faithfulness in every grade of experience. The most genuine shout ever heard was from a servant of God who stopped at the end of a row, and, while resting on the plow alone in the hot corn field, sung a stanza of a blessed hymn, then shouted praises to God. Soon brushing the tears from his eyes, he turned into the alternate row, and went on plowing. Here was the combination of faith and faithfulness. He plowed to the glory of God, praising and toiling. Faith is to see Jesus as a personal Savior, and then it is to see him throughout the universe as the object to whom we are to be ever faithful. The states are blessed in so far as they make us more faithful to him. There is to be blessed experience of being "becalmed in peace," for that will produce stagnation. There is no lofty plane of holy atmosphere where love reigns supreme, where the tests to fidelity and usefulness have passed. There is no wide expanse when God brings out into a large place, and we are to live in perpetual flow of joy uninterrupted, where faithfulness is no longer the rule. It is the test here, the basis of reward hereafter. "Because thou hast been faithful in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities."

LYSIAS.

From Our Missionary to Japan.

Will you please give the following few lines to your readers? Many of them I know and love, and many of them feel a deep interest in my welfare and my work. "Thus far the Lord hath led me on; thus far his power prolongs my days," and every day gives some additional evidence of his care for me.

During the last six weeks I have seen much, and, oh! how I would like to tell the young people of many things in particular, but must content myself with mention of a few. I have seen young life—fresh, vigorous, buoyant—stimulated by hope and sustained by grace through faith.

Those whom I have seen of the Salvation Army are courageous and energetic. They use many Scripture quotations, sing and play spiritual songs to lively tunes calculated to arouse the feelings and inspire with the spirit of aggression.

I heard Mr. Moody and John McNeil. They preach the gospel without addition or varnish, and it tells. That thousands attend their preaching is evidence that the people want the gospel of Jesus Christ. On June 11, at Chicago, not less than ten thousand in one congregation listened to the sweet story of Jesus seeking the lost.

Oh, dear young people, let me beseech you, in the name of Jesus, "Fear God and keep his commandments!" Do not try to explain them away as if they meant nothing, but do them. The Lord will help you. If you have tried, try again. If you have failed a thousand times, Jesus knows it, but he loves you still. And it is written: "If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous; and he is the propitiation for our sins." He hath made me "free," and given me the happy privilege of going with his precious Word to the dying sons and daughters of men. Some of you had the offer, and wisely accepted it as a privilege to send the good Book to those in darkness.

The time for the ship to sail is now up, and in a few moments, "if the Lord will," I shall be on the wide ocean steaming toward a land of idols, to give them the revelation of the true God. Many whose names are on the register of subscribers to this Japanese Bible work will read this. Remember, much depends upon your fervent special prayers, that the Holy Ghost may guide and help me in placing the books, and help those who receive them into their hands to receive the words into their hearts, and become useful Christians. The number of subscribers is now 927, with money to pay for nearly 2,000 copies of the Scriptures. Names and money were sent to Belle Buckle, Nashville, and Vancouver. From the city of New Orleans the Rayne Memorial Sunday-school, by the kindness of Miss Susie May, sends twenty-three subscriptions with the money, received not more than two hours since away here in Vancouver. See what can be done when one tries.

But I fear this letter is already so long that the good Doctor will shake his head, and poke it in the waste-basket. I hear bells ringing and pulleys rolling, as if they were loosing the vessel from her anchorage. God be with you!

BENJAMIN S. RAYNER.

A Chicago contemporary complains that $60 000 was spent on a recent New York wedding, "and it lasted only fifteen minutes." But Chicago's local experience is not safely applicable to events in New York. Weddings are always expected to last much longer here than in Chicago, and, indeed, a single one has often been known to serve for a whole lifetime.—Life.

A Reminiscence of Rev Benj. Jones by a Former Pupil.

How true that "to the sentinel that hour is regal when he mounts on guard!"

On June 30, 1859, the spacious Odd Fellows' Hall in Port Gibson, Miss., was garlanded, was fragrant, was occupied to the utmost extent by the beauty and chivalry of aristocratic Claiborne county, and presented a scene of loveliness which was indelibly impressed upon the minds of the six young girls who read their graduating essays and received their degree that night. Thirty-four years ago to-night! What we have experienced, what changes have been wrought, can never be fully told. The muttering thunder of war was then heard in the distance by gray-haired patriots; yet they felt no fear concerning the result. They rather hailed the oncoming contest with pleasure, feeling confident that the struggle would be short, that vexed questions would be decided, and our lovely Southland would make for herself a glorious place among the nations. We heard nothing but strains of sweetest music, felt nothing but poetry. If our faces could have been photographed, and our feelings and aspirations phonographed that night, how startling the contrast would appear between the then and the now! Five of "the girls" are actively engaged in the battle of life, at times some of us being consoled only by the thought that "we'll soon be at home over there," where the peerless one went to meet her reward in 1878.

Rev. Benjamin Jones, who, three years before, had succeeded the gifted, genial Dr. Thomas H. Capers, was our honored president. He and his cultured wife, Raphaella Wisnor Bangs, daughter of the distinguished Dr. Bangs, of Brooklyn, N. Y., after ten years of faithful school work at Jackson, La., had infused new life into the "Port Gibson Collegiate Academy."

Mr. Jones' faith was strong, his language chaste, his life pure. The telegram from Long Beach on June 20, "To-day Rev. Benjamin Jones sweetly fell on sleep," describes the beautiful departure of one of God's noble workmen.

May the seed sown by his faithful hand yield an abundant harvest, and may the stars in his crown of rejoicing be many!

ONE OF THE SIX.

Commencement at East Mississippi Female College.

As I have seen no mention of our commencement, Mr. Editor, and as competent judges have pronounced it the most attractive in the history of the institution, I venture to offer a brief account.

At eleven o'clock, Sunday, June 4, the commencement sermon was preached by Rev. Henry E. Partridge, of Seashore district. The large audience gave the preacher profound attention throughout his entire discourse. He accepted the occasion as an opportunity to present the pure Word. His hearers were deeply interested, instructed and edified. The music was rendered by the college choir, accompanied by Mr. C. W. Laubin's fine orchestra. Bro. Partridge preached another grand sermon to a large audience at night.

Eight and a half o'clock, Monday night, was the time set for the elocution entertainment and art levee. Although the rain began to fall at five o'clock and continued steadily until ten, quite a number of people assembled at College Hall. While waiting for belated students, the audience were invited to inspect the art display, which was the most elaborate and interesting that the college had ever presented. Most of the resident students were unable to be present, and only a few selections from the regular programme were given, but the address of Rev. B. F. Lewis made full amends for all other disappointments and failures as to programme. The speaker chose "Art" as his subject. He compressed a wonderful array of interesting facts and beautiful fancies into the space of twenty minutes, and when he suddenly closed his address the general disappointment was relieved by the general verdict that the speech was "a perfect gem," but entirely too brief. After the close of the address most of the audience remained to examine the art display again.

On Tuesday morning the school assembled to receive final reports and certificates. The Board of Trustees held their annual meeting in the college office. At 8:30 P. M. the annual concert was given. The College Hall was packed to its full capacity. Each number of the programme was well executed, and good musicians pronounced the music superb. The elocution and calisthenic features were also much applauded.

At half-past ten o'clock, June 7, commencement exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. J. W. Bozeman, D. D. After several numbers of music and recitation, Rev. Charles F. Evans, D. D., addressed the graduating class. "The True Theory of Education" was his theme. The address was replete with profound research, apt and impressive illustration, broad and comprehensive views and incisive, practical thought. The fine audience evidently enjoyed it throughout. After Dr. Evans' address, the president presented the diplomas. The degree of M. E. L. was conferred on Miss Bessie W. Barber and Miss Ida D. Curtis. Miss Grace Hyer received a diploma in mathematics.

In view of the resignation of the president, which had been offered some months previous to take effect at close of session, L. P. Brown, president of the Board of Trustees, then rose and read the following resolution:

Resolved, By the Board of Trustees of East Mississippi Female College, of Meridian, Miss., that we do most cordially commend Prof. C. W. Anderson, who for three years has been president of this college, as a competent teacher, an honorable man and consecrated Christian. We do also most cordially commend his excellent wife and family to any community where their future home may be made, and upon them we invoke the blessings of our heavenly Father.

Mr. Brown stated that the Board were much pleased with the high standard of the work done in the college during the recent administration, and that every effort would be made to secure a president who would maintain and, if possible, advance the same. The retiring president endeavored to express his appreciation of the many kindnesses shown by the Board and the patrons of the school during his residence in Meridian, but stated that circumstances seemed to indicate that his own welfare, and, perhaps, that of the school, demanded a change, and that his resignation had been offered after mature deliberation.

Rev. T. L. Mellen pronounced the benediction. Owing to the illness of the vocal teacher, the cantata "Lily Bell" was postponed to Thursday night. A fine audience was present. The most perfect quiet and the closest attention to every detail of programme indicated the high appreciation with which the entire performance was received. Everything connected with it passed off as nicely as the most solicitous could have wished. The commencement could not have had a more appropriate and pleasant termination.

Lisbon Academy.

The Lisbon Academy has just closed a very successful session under the careful training of Profs. Meadows, Eichelberger, and Miss Vaughan. The faculty were solid Christians, and their influence will tell for time to come. Prof. Eichelberger goes to Ruston to take charge of their college, and carries with him the love and prayers of our people.

My circuit is in good condition.

"The Duties of Stewards."

In the last issue of the ADVOCATE Bro. J. P. Drake refers to the paper by Dr. C. H. Jones, on "The Duties of Stewards." Be Definite.

Carvosso had seen all his children converted but one. Borne down with anxiety for her, he sought counsel of his class leader Sunday night after coming from class. "Why don't you take a promise on the Lord?" asked the leader. "I don't understand you." "Well, the Book is full of promises bearing right on your case. Take one of these and throw all your weight on it until God feels your confidence in heaven." "I'll do it," said the dear old man. They parted. In a moment the promise swept down like a cloud before him, "The gift shall not leave a hoof behind thee." He recognized it all its breadth and meaning. He seized it and a living clean loose from earth and earthly doubts. God crucified him it would be all right. For ten days he saw no change. On the tenth day he was plowing near his house when a runner came from his wife: "Do come at once; it seems our daughter will die." But he understood it. "What's the matter, daughter?" he said, as he reached her room. "Oh, father, pray for me. I do believe I am lost." In a little while she was converted. "Now, daughter, tell me all about it." "I don't know anything about it, save that Sunday night, a few days ago, just before you came from class meeting, something got hold of my heart that I could not shake off. I read off or sleep off. I have been miserable ever since." "I know all about it. That night I claimed with all my heart the promise made to Israel; that is what has moved you." When Carvosso quit doubting, God began working.—Tongues of Fire.

A mechanical marvel lately exhibited in St. Petersburg is a musical watch which was made by a Russian peasant in the reign of Catharine. It is about the size of a hen's egg, and contains a representation of the tomb of Christ with the Roman sentinels. On pressing a spring the stone rolls from the tomb, the sentinels fall down, the angels appear, and the holy women enter the sepulcher, and the same chorus which is sung in the Greek Church on Easter eve is actually performed.

INTRODUCTORY.

At the close of our last lesson Paul and Silas, released from the rigors of confinement in their stocks and the dungeon of their Philippian jail, were receiving the grateful attention of the converted jailer. We can imagine with what joy their now-devoted friend announced to them the decision of the magistrates that they might be released from their imprisonment, and with what surprise and respect he heard the words of Paul: "They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? Nay verily; but let them come themselves and fetch us out." This dignified and self-respecting course of the apostle was not taken, we may be sure, in order that due honor might be done them as Roman citizens (though such a motive would have been entirely justifiable), but that the cause which they represented might be advanced by the publin respect thus shown its representatives, and this result, doubtless, followed. After strengthening the infant church by their exhortations and prayers, and leaving Luke to watch over their interests and confirm them in their faith, the three friends depart, going toward the southwest by the great Egnatian road, one of that marvelous system of thoroughfares built by the Roman government to connect the imperial city with the distant provinces. They seem to have traveled from thirty to thirty-seven miles a day, stopping first at Amphipolis, then at Apollonia, and reaching at the end of the third day's journey Thessalonica, the largest and most influential city in Macedonia. From this city, after a stay of indefinite length and the work which resulted in the founding of a strong Christian church, Paul and Silas are forced, by the hostility of the unbelieving Jews, to take a hurried departure, Timothy apparently being left, as was Luke at Philippi, to establish and strengthen the newly founded church. A long and severe journey of forty-five miles brings the missionaries to Berea, where, first among the noble-minded Jews, and then among the Greeks, they continued for some time to preach the kingdom of God. Their work here prospered until the influence of the hostile Jews of Thessalonica forced Paul to abandon the field, leaving Silas and Timothy who seem to have now joined them, to continue the work for a time, and then join him, as soon as possible, at Athens, whither he had now gone. The little band of four devoted men, who, a few weeks and months ago, crossed the narrow Hellespont in answer to the call of the man of Macedonia, had been reduced to one, who wandered lonely, but undaunted, through the streets of Athens, or engaged in conversation the philosophic idlers who sauntered among the trees of the Agora, the common meeting-place of the curiosity-seeking people of the city. Here there was no lack of listeners, curious and cultured, and soon there had gathered about the apostle a crowd of hearers, who, with idle and complacent inquisitiveness, listened to his words, until, becoming more interested, they took him to Mars Hill, where he delivered the masterly address which forms our present lesson.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—THE UNKNOWN GOD.

Ver. 22. With the Parthenon, surmounted by the ivory statue of Minerva, on the heights before him; the Agora, crowded with its statues and altars in the valley behind him, and all about him at his feet the beautiful city, whose streets were lined with images of gods and the great men of her history, the apostle delivers his first and only sermon to cultured and wicked Athens. His opening sentence showed his wisdom and his eloquence; his courteous recognition of their religious reverence was calculated to impress his listeners pleasantly, and his expression, "Ye men of Athens," might have reminded them of the "Athenian men of Demosthenes." The term "superstitious" faulty, and the expression in the R - sed Version, "religious," is not much better; the one seems to convey the idea of censure; the other concedes rather too much. The just and noncommittal idea of the original may be seen in the expression, "deity reverencing."

Ver. 23. "As I passed by." Referring to his walks through the city. "Devotions." Not so much their acts of worship, nor the objects of their worship, as the apparatus of worship, the temples, altars, etc. "To the unknown God." There are said to have been several altars in Athens bearing this significant expression. It may have been a confession of ignorance and a blind groping after a God who would satisfy the religious instincts of the soul. Or it may have been that this deity-loving people, wishing to win the favor of all the gods, and fearing that there might be others than those whose names were known to them, erected an altar to "the" or "an" unknown God. The charge of ignorance was a hold one to make in such a place; but the charge was courteously made and their ignorance was self-confessed. He would show them that it was not enough to "worship;" they must worship God.

II.—GOD DECLARED.

Ver. 24. Starting from a point that was common to both speaker and listeners, the apostle moves upward a divergent line as he unfolds the truth. "God that made the world and all things therein." This was a novel and startling declaration to men who believed in the eternity of matter and the endless multiplicity of gods. "Dwelleth not in temples made with hands." These are the words of the proto-martyr, Stephen. (See Acts vii, 48.) The Holy Ghost seems to have used the words of the dying Stephen in the conversion of the zealot Saul. Paul was the fruit of that truth of which Stephen was the flower. Paul's theology in all its fulness is but the development of the speech of this man, "full of faith and of the Holy Ghost."

Ver. 25. "Neither is worshiped with men's hands as though he needeth anything." Not in the sense they believed, which degrades men, but in a higher sense which ennobles men. God is worshiped with men's hands. "Seeing he giveth to all life and breath and all things." He needs not to be cared for by men, for he created and sustains all things by his power. All things are dependent upon his providence and all men owe to him reverence and obedience.

Ver. 26. "And hath made of one blood all nations." Paul's speech scarcely contains a more important speech than that of the common brotherhood of men, nor one more strikingly antagonistic to the theory of his auditors. The unity of the origin of the races could scarcely be held in common with the multiplicity of the gods. "And hath determined the times. . . . and the bounds." The truth of the immanence of God and his personal providence over his creatures is here declared. He has predetermined "the periods of time and the boundaries of space" for the races.

Ver. 27. "That they should see the Lord." The end for which this providence is exercised and this predetermination employed is a benevolent one. The providential design setting of "metes and bounds" is that they might know and glorify God, who has not left himself without witness in that he has done good and given rain and fruitful seasons and filled men's hearts with food and gladness. (See Acts xiv, 17.) "Not far from anyone of us." Who can tell how near God has been to the heathen in his blind groping, how much he has entered into the thought and life of their wisest and best men, how much he has been present in their governments, their customs, their philosophies. Jew and Christian can claim no monopoly of God's providence; can they of his inspiration? Thank God, he is "not far from any one of us."

Ver. 28. This verse seems to contain the reason for the declaration with which the preceding verse closes. How near he is to every one of us is shown by the fact that life, not merely the higher, the spiritual life, but existence, society, being, are the blessings of his constant and immediate providence. "Certain also of your own poets." Aratus, a Cecilian poet of the third century B. C., or Cleanthes, a cotemporary of Aratus and a native of Mysia, was the author whom Paul quotes. The original reference was doubtless to Zeus, but the passage contains "a recognition of the fact that men are the offspring of deity, and to this Paul appeals." (Sunday-School Times.)

III.—OUR DUTY TO GOD.

Ver. 29. The revelation of God's nature and the relation that men sustain to him carries with it the thought of our duty to him. The Creator of rational beings can not be like a stock or a stone carved or engraved by the hands of men. Intelligent, personal, supreme, provident, spiritual, he is higher than our highest thought and worthy of our deepest reverence.

Ver. 30. "And the times of this ignorance God winked at." The term "winked at" is unfortunate. The original does not involve the idea that at any time God has failed to hold men responsible for their actions; but rather that he passed over or overlooked the times of their ignorance, not sending a messenger of vengeance nor proclaiming the necessity of repentance. In mercy he stayed his hand and waited for the fullness of time. "But now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." But now the hour has come; the edict has been issued, and I, Paul, am one of its promulgators. "All men everywhere"—in priestly Jerusalem, in cultured Athens, in imperial Rome, in licentious Corinth, in the wilds of the desert, and the forest, in the islands of the sea—are "commanded to repent."

Ver. 31. "Because he hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness." The necessity for repentance is enforced in view of the coming judgment. The command to repent is world-wide, because the judgment is to be universal; the repentence is for sin, because the judgment is in righteousness. "By the man whom he hath ordained." "Crowning the scheme of human history is this judgment day, at which man, the image and offspring of God, is by man to be judged." (Whedon.) "Whereof he hath given assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him from the dead." Public assurance is given of this coming judgment by the resurrection from the dead of him who declared it and by whom it is to be held. "As, therefore, God has given assurance by Christ's resurrection that what he taught was true, we should prepare for the future by repenting now." (Cambridge Bible.)

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Paul was courageous, but courteous. Some men seem to think that courage is but another name for rudeness. (Verse 22.)

2. Many a man "says his prayers" to a God who is personally and practically "unknown" to him. (Verse 23.)

3. God commands our service, not because he needs serving, but because we need to serve. (Verse 25.)

4. There is one brotherhood, because there is one Fatherhood. (Verse 26.)

5. God is nearer to a conscientious Hottentot than to a cultivated, but immoral American. (Verse 27.)

6. The command to repent does not throw an obstacle in the way of human happiness, but rather opens the door to a higher, a holier, a happier life. (Verse 30.)

Experience of Madame Guyon.

Madame Guyon's correspondence with Father La Combe, which was kept up at intervals for many years, commenced early in the year 1680. About the middle of July of that year she wrote to him a second time. In this letter she made the particular request that if he received it before the 22d of July, a day memorable in her religious history, he would make her the subject of special supplication. The letter arrived, although the place of its destination was quite distant, the day before the time specified. And the person to whom it was addressed had too much piety and too deep a sense of his obligations to the author of it, to let a request, offered in such an humble and sorrowing spirit, pass unheeded.—It was a day of prayer both with him and with her.

It was a day, also, of the hearing of prayer. The King was on his throne. The scepter of mercy was extended. On that favored day, after nearly seven years of inward and outward desolation, the cloud which had rested so dark and deeply passed away, and the light of eternal glory settled upon her soul.

She was led for the first time to see under the intimations of the Holy Spirit that all things were just the reverse of what she had supposed them to be—that affliction is mercy in disguise; that we possess by first being deprived; that death precedes life; that destruction in the spiritual experience turns to renovation; that out of the sorrows and silence of inward crucifixion, and from no other source, must grow the jubilees of everlasting bliss. God was given back; and all things with him. All sights and sounds, all beauties of heaven and of earth, the trees and flowers below, and the stars of heaven in their places, and social pleasures and earthly friendships, whatever the intellect could perceive or the heart could relish—she could receive and enjoy them all, in their appropriate place and degree, because, in her victory over self she was enabled to place and appreciate them in their true and divine relations—all in God, and God in all. It was thus that the Lord turned her captivity, as he did that of his servant Job, and made the end better and more glorious than the beginning.

"It was on the 22d of July, that happy day," she says, "the 22d of July, 1680, that my soul was delivered from all its pains. On that memorable day, in thee, O my God, I found all, and more than all! The peace which I now possessed was all holy, heavenly, inexpressible. What I had possessed some years before, in the period of my spiritual enjoyment, was consolation, peace—the gift of God rather than the giver; but now I was brought into such harmony with the will of God, whether that will was consoling or otherwise, that I might now be said to possess not merely consolation, but the God of consolation; not merely peace, but the God of peace."

It was at this time, and not at any earlier period, that she began to speak of the life of nature as fully slain within her. "My intellect," she says, "free from those disturbing influences which originate in selfishness, was unperplexed and clear in its action. My wandering imagination, which had formerly flitted about from object to object, was now at rest; so far at least that its action, easily regulated in accordance with the divine will and providences, ceased to trouble me. That heart, where I had formerly detected in their secret places so many evil motives, was now, so far as I was enabled to perceive, made pure. I did all sorts of good, as it were, by a new and imperative law, written in my heart; naturally; easily, without premeditation, as it was without selfishness. I no longer felt myself obliged to say that 'when I would do good evil was present with me.' Doing good was now my nature. The principle of action did not seem to be from motives applied without; but rather to be involved in a life springing up and operative within. All was done in God and for God; and it was done quietly, freely, naturally, continually."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

I Had Coltre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began I was feeling so discouraged with the grippe and rheumatism, I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without fainting. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Gilgelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. I have a letter thanking me for recommending

BRIEFS

To help the prayer meeting, get on praying ground; pray in the closet, pray in the family, pray in the street—at the desk. A congregation of prayerless people may be a success in some other line, but is a failure as a prayer meeting.

Rev. T. Masao lectured to the Methodists of New Orleans at the Carondolet Street Church, Sunday night, on Japanese Customs and Southern Methodist Missionary Operations in that empire. Bro. Masao, who hails from Vanderbilt University, is educated and well informed, and easily held the attention of the large audience. While Bro. M. speaks eloquently, he is himself a missionary object-lesson that ought to be worth a great deal to the good cause.

The question of evangelist or no evangelist lags superfluous on the stage of newspaper controversy. Candidly, it seems to us that the Lord settled that question in the Bethany days. First, by his example, then by his command, afterward by the great commission, and last, of all, by an ordinance in use in apostolic times. Paul was an evangelist as well as an apostle, if not much more the former than the latter. Luther was an evangelist, so was Wesley, and so also was Asbury and the whole American contingent for a quarter of a century. And what the Lord blesses, oh, vain man, shalt thou reprobate? But let the church appoint the evangelist, if it is not too late to legislate concerning the matter, and let the evangelist by all means be a man above the suspicion of greed.

The Church Extension Board has resolved, under the lead of that wise general, Dr. Morton, to raise a jubilee fund for church building during this year, which is the semi-centenary of the Plan of Separation, ratified June 8, 1844. An era of prayer and thanksgiving ought to add largely to the scanty revenues of the Board. We learn from Bro. Wimberly and others who have labored in the West that the M. E. Church pours out tribute in the way of church building to its emigrant populations, while our own church is scarcely known at all as a benefactor in such enterprise. In this way the great West was measurably lost to us, and now the Southwest, with its prevalent type of Southern and even Southern Methodist settler, is trembling in the balance. Let us mix a little church pride with our pretended zeal for home missions, and with the best offering that we can eke out of our riches or poverty go to the rescue of that imperilled interest. Can not every individual, family and church do something?

The Lord Reigns.

A great many people are in trouble about this. They can believe anything but the Lord's sovereignty. To their mind everything in the creed has the substance of divinity but the statement with which this article is captioned. They believe that the Pope reigns, or Dr. Briggs and the Hebraists, or the Chicago directors, or King Anarchy, but not the Lord Jesus Christ. They think of him as lying with nailed palms and fractured side and cold dead features on the marble floor of Joseph's tomb, and can not at all associate him with the epiphany and its triumphs. Their Christ reigns, if at all, as a mask of death and not as the giver of life. The throne of omnipotence is in shadow, and weak faith can not make it out; the form that has "put down all rule and all authority and all power" reclines or stoops, but is scarcely regnant; a movement as of posing or gesturing sovereignity shakes the sky, indeed, but it is scarcely to be identified with the sweep of that sceptre that "dashes the nations to pieces as a potter's vessel."

Yet, despite of all human misdoubting, "the Lord God omnipotent reigns" in heaven and earth, over life and death, and from everlasting to everlasting. He reigns over the great concerns of the universe, as subjects with which he is most familiar, and by general providences as requiring but slight interference, because so intimately connected with the machinery of the universe, and he rules the smallest concerns because of the greater need of that which is remote and dependont, and because of that cry out of despair with which they address themselves to his infinite functions of pity and skill. That the King of kings reigns over the important affairs of men and worlds is generally conceded, indeed, but it seems more difficult for the ordinary mind to grasp him in the mighty details and sub-details of his arch-sovereignty. That he should care for "oxen," "sparrows" and the "grass which to-day is and to-morrow is cast into the oven" is an impossible exploit for the mind; but the heart, more skilled, can follow him even through such labyrinths, and see in every favor bestowed upon the feeble creature the instinct of that mother love that hearkens to the slightest wail of infancy, while indifferent, it may be, to the cries and beseechings of youth or age. "He that is faithful in that which is greatest is faithful also in that which is least" applies to the Creator as well as to the creature, and whatever we may say of the claims of parenthood, or the master passion that sways God in heaven and men on earth; if the Creator had left himself out of that great remote of the creation where, it is not saying too much to declare, he is needed most, every creature of his would have been justified in filing a protest against his sovereignity. It is true also, we may add, that while Christ's reign is paternal in the sense that the Father has given all things into his hands, as he who hath begotten them again from the dead; that he has moreover by virtue of the terms of his atonement an extraordinary feature of identity with all the subjects of government in that they partake of his nature and drink of the same Spirit, and that while he rules over them, he also reigns in them, the Lord of every impulse. But however gracious such reflections, it was his power as a great king reigning over both friends and foes, and over the kingdoms both of mind and sense, that we set out to briefly illustrate, rather than demonstrate, in this article. Above all things, his miracles were intended to show us his power not over nature in her ordinary, but in her extraordinary moods. They teach us that men, "evil angels," the elements, diseases, death, life, Satan, the forces of nature and the powers of the world to come are all in subjection to him and obey his voice as a sovereign whom they unitedly fear and reverence. The Lord reigns, indeed, and in such guise of sovereignity that they who are the most insecure and helpless have the greatest assurance of blessing. "What fearest thou, man," said Cæsar to the terrified boatman when the waves of the Mediterranean dashed madly against his little bark; "thy boat carries Cæsar and his fortunes." But we are embarked with a greater king than the Roman Julius, and one who with the lower tones of his voice hushes the tumult of the raging winds and unquiet seas, as a mother composes her babe with a lullaby.

Measure for Measure.

Love has two great characteristics which even the ordinary reasoner can appreciate; it is whole-hearted and it is open-handed. It never reasons in the realm of the philosopher, and in the realm of the tradesman it never takes stock. And Christianity is heart exercise; it is love thinking, speaking, doing. It represents heroism on the human side, and miracle working on the divine side. Nothing but death can measure its devotion, and only that by opening a passage for it into eternity. Our Lord's sacrifice was an eternal offering, and he died in time, to be blazoned on the wider sphere of eternity as the crucified. Love bled to death on the cross; but what an empire of love it secured by that oblation of itself!

From the human side love, albeit a borrowed function, gives all that it has and gets all that God has. It gives itself and gets not the creation, but the Creator. It gives by one offering, and gets by one offering; it gives now and it gets now.

The element of spontaneity, moreover, answers to the divine. When a man goes out of himself in self-abandon Christ comes into him by a movement just as abrupt. No note of time is taken because an impulse can not be measured by anything but heart throbs, and because of that quality of immanence involved in the exchange of time for eternity.

"The Lord shall come suddenly to his temple," his human temple, is prophecy; the Lord did come suddenly to his temple is prophecy with the seal of history on it. As a rushing mighty wind he took possession, and as a rushing mighty wind he takes possession. It is the work of Him of whom the electrical beams of day and the swift stars are emblems, and, therefore, it is as sudden as perfect. It was on the anniversary of bringing "gifts into the temple that the unspeakable gift" fell. The disciples brought all the possessions they had—even a man covetous like Ananias pledged himself to such an offering—and threw them into the heap of commonality, and the Author of all blessing, equally prompt and equally generous, opened the windows of heaven and poured them out a blessing which they were not able to contain. When a man has done his best, he is not required to wait; the Lord is not that sort of a paymaster. There needed to have been no tarrying at Jerusalem, if the disciples had been ready with their cash and valuables. The disciples were not waiting for the Lord, but the Lord for the disciples. When their prayers took the form of offerings the heavens could be restrained no longer. Not that their prayers were heeded less, but more. Waiting on the Lord, in the Old Testament, did not mean waiting for him, but attending on him, or calling to him. When a man is really waiting for the Lord, he is very near to a cloud-burst. When Mary broke the alabaster the perfume filled the house, and when the precious vessel it symbolized, freighted with odors of eternity, burst with grief and importunity on the cross, the world was saved.

The reason that many people are not saved at once is because they make terms with the Lord. They propose to him conversion and its obligations now and sanctification and its obligations a little later, not remembering that the blessing is in the giving, and that the flower of salvation is concealed in the bud of sacrifice. To be crucified with Christ is to live with Christ. To die as many deaths as he died, is to have the life "more abundantly" which he brought from the upper spheres. Give and it shall be given to you in overflow measure. Bring thine imperfect gifts into the storehouse and find perfection of blessing.

The Religious Newspaper.

A religious newspaper is indispensable to the home. It flies in like a visitor from the upper world and broods white-winged over those dearest interests of man's being, that crouch humbly at his hearthstone or linger on doorstep and threshold. It conjures down the spirit of the world as by the power of magic, and lets loose the odors of a rich alabaster in the void thus created. With a whip of small cords it drives out cards and the dance, and with a hand strong as that of the Master it overturns the tables of selfish greed and sends the small coin of avarice flying. It brings in bright dreams to sleepless eyes, and spreads the repast of a king to the eye and palate of those to whom it supplies the relish of a peasant. It preaches in all kinds of weather and under all skies, at a pittance so small, and with doctrine so varied and learned, as to create the illusion of a free gospel. It finds a man in moral dishabille, and when no eye but God's sees, and delivers all its thunders upon his naked soul. Or it discovers him in the stillness and deep solemnity of heart-searching and puts an immaculate probe in his hand and invests him with a prophet's vision. It slays error on the doorstep, and with unerring aim shoots folly to death ere it has had time to compose its luxurious members on cushion or couch. It is school teacher, cook, doctor, preacher, neighborhood oracle, purchasing agent, and book of reference, all in one. It sets the tune in politics and leads the measure in religious worship.

For the man who has not time to review the evidence it decides the Briggs' case, and brings in a verdict which it will not do to question on Sabbath opening, Home Rule, foreign and domestic, and papal infallibility. It has the cream of the news, skimming for the busy tradesman and farmer, and furnishes the gleanings of statistics in Church and State, winnowing for the laboring and professional man who has no taste for or skill in figures.

In the true sense, it "weeps with those who weep, and rejoices with those who rejoice." In one hand it holds a bridal wreath to crown the brow of youth and point the way to life's victories; in the other it bears rosemary for grief and bows itself at the tomb of the departed. What a friend in need and friend indeed is this constant patron of home pleasures and warm advocate of every domestic tie and interest! What is home without the gospel gazetteer—with news from all lands, information for all people and balm for all aches and woes!

Home Rule.

Home rule—not Irish, but American—is what we plead for. The ancient sovereignty of age over youth and of wisdom over indiscretion which we inherited from our revolutionary great-grandparents is rapidly passing away from us, and that, too, with no voice to utter a protest. Youth, alas! is no longer in subjection, and parenthood is rapidly moving to the position which the former quits; wisdom no longer holds the tiller rope, but ignorance and inexperience point the prow of domestic argosies. The old man and the old woman who can protest no longer, who are, indeed, out of breath protesting, smirk into reluctant places on the back seat and young hopeful seizes the reins of authority and lashes the ancestral steeds to a furious pace. How the heads of the old people swim, as they are warned to keep them inside for fear of obstructions, and how the village breaks into cheering as young Ben Hur thunders down the home stretch and heads straight for the other fellow's chariot! The catastrophe comes of course—and out of the cloud of flying splinters Ben Hur only is saved as a shining proof of that verity known as the doctrine of "the survival of the fittest."

So far the fiction monger. The real history records that the fittest did not survive, but that his body was trampled by the flying steeds into the small dust of the goal. The man of imagination may see his hero saved by the millionth chance, but his fate is really that of Phœbus and the colts of the morning, wrecked along with the wreckage he has made, and knocked out by the blow with which he shivered another's hopes of immortality.

Foreigners who come to our shores have a single observation to make upon our domestic affairs, and that single observation is the monosyllable, fast! Young men and young women who are grown in short clothes are fast, certainly. Children's parties, as though children had to be helped to fun like grown people, are so speedy as to give the unsensational looker-on a sensation of whirligig. Fast young men who join the club for instruction in scientific gambling, and for first lessons in libertinism from their elders, and fast young women who receive at twelve and give card parties at thirteen, certainly impart the element of swiftness to our domestic progress as a nation. Parents are back numbers along with everything else which does not give zest to youthful nerves, and homes are domestic establishments, lodging houses, to be sought unto when club life palls. Indeed, with the third generation in the lead, society moves as though it were whistled along by trolley action. With hot heads substituted for gray beards all along the line, and the grade growing steeper at every bound of the flying machine, what will become of us? The remedy is in home rule.

Short Sermons.

Short sermons sometimes result from shortage, but they much oftener result in this condition. A long text will often help a short preacher, and he ought to reform somehow. Not much but excuses for sinners can be said in twenty-five minutes. An old politician will harangue for hours to a delighted multitude upon such dry themes as tariff and the silver act. The reason is that his heart is on fire with his message, and fire always catches when there is tinder or explosive material about. Comparing the two ministries, for it takes time to be in earnest as well as to win victories, one would suppose that we had exchanged spheres with the stump advocate, his subject of address pertaining to eternity and ours to time. As preachers of the gospel we have a divine theme, but often we give to it a sadly human expression; we have both the plane and sphere of lofty oratory, but yet we dawdle in sermonettes. In this matter of determining both the length and depth of a sermon, while consulting standards and studying models, we should not forget that "where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty."

NOTES.

The devil loves a shining mark.

Thou hast nothing to do with the future.

Let not thy prejudices slay thine aspirations.

It is expected of a leader that he be found brave.

If you fight holiness, it is not because you are holy.

More religion is the remedy for the evil, whatever it is.

While we are getting out of the ruts let us cling to the road-bed.

The devil rejoices in the ministry of some preachers of the gospel.

If you are afraid to denounce sin in your own person, send for an evangelist.

There are no patriots quite so intense as those who came by the last ship.

Dancing, card-playing, theatre-going and beer-drinking Methodists are in the wrong church.

If you begin to suspect that you are a coward, suppose that you practice with some stray shots at the enemy.

The difference between obstructionists and constructionists is the difference between some people and others.

If Southern Methodism can build churches fast enough, it can take the continent for the doctrines of Wesley and the Bible.

"Preach sanctification directly and indirectly in every sermon. Preach it, whether they will hear or forbear."—Francis Asbury.

If you get an angry letter, embalm it with tears and perfume it with prayers and thanksgiving, and put it away for future reference.

If we would confine ourselves to plain churches and plain religion, we would rejoice in greater possessions of both kinds of treasure.

The genus Methodist, it has been happily said, is susceptible of division into two great species or classes, viz.: (1) Mission. (2) Omission.

"The more explicitly and strongly you press all believers to aspire after full salvation by simple faith, the more the work of God will prosper."—John Wesley.

The amount of indorsement that a man or measure obtains from the heavenly powers is usually, if not always, in inverse ratio to that which he or it receives from men.

The whisky trade is omnivorous, consuming the money, corn industry and manhood of the land. The preacher of the gospel who don't fight it is politic, if he is not a politician.

It has been suggested that the glorious Fourth is celebrated with less fervor in extreme Southern latitudes because of our sun-burned atmosphere and other out-door phenomena of the season.

A former editor of the ADVOCATE made it a rule never to publish original poetry, and if occasionally we let something meritorious in this line pass, it must be credited to our devotion to precedent.

The best remedy for drowsiness is sneezing, and for ennui is constant hard work, and for obesity, anti-fat; and yet there are people otherwise intelligent who go about with the old saw of "like cures like" on their tongues.

There is nothing which is so perilous in the councils of Church or State as the sectional feeling. It is as warm in the average breast as to consume all conflicting views and interests, even though they were those of patriotism and religion.

Beware of first impressions when they have not come to thee as the answers to prayer. Nothing is more misleading than impulse, and nothing is more dangerous. It is a favorite steed, quick and fiery, upon which the devil rides to more victories over the human heart than any other.

Every great religious reform obtained its inspiration from some particular doctrine of Scripture, and culminated in its earthly apotheosis; that of Paul and the early apostles had its center and goal the resurrection of Christ; that of Wyclif, Huss and Jerome, the universality of the Word as teacher and Savior; that of Luther justification by faith only; that of Wesley and the eighteenth century sanctification as a present attainment by faith in the merits of Christ.

A large oompany of devoted friends and admirars attended the marriage of Mr. Daniel B. Darton and Miss Jemima Davenport at Felioity Street Churoh, on Wednesday, June 28. Mr. Darton is a valued employee of Macready, Stanffer & Co., of many years standing, and his hride belongs to an old and esteemed family of this oity. The ADVOCATE wishes them long life and muoh happiness.

As we go to press the Seashore Camp Meeting holds its opening exercises. That the Holy Spirit may he present in his saving and sanotifying offices is the prayer of many Christian hearts. We have heard two oomplaints preferred against former camp meetings held on this historio ground. One was the large number of professing Christians, and the other the small number of possessing Christians in attendance. The way out of the difficulty is to make the former a recruiting field for the latter.

From a St. Louis paper we olip these head-lines of a quarter-column notice of Bro. Carradine and his flock: "Methodist Salvation. Dr. Carradine's flock inaugurate open-air services! Three hands of workers without uniforms! Hold street corner meetings!"

This would seem to be an object-lesson in that part of modern evangelism known as the stooping exercise. Or it might otherwise he denominated "the way to reach the masses made easy." But soldiers of the cross nowadays are merely home guards and reserves.

The reports that The California Illustrated Magazine has heen affected by the financial panic that has swept over the country, are without foundation. The July and August issues speak for themselves, and the publishers propose to increase the attractions of the magazine with every issue. Among the descriptive illustrated papers are: The Land of the White Elephant; A Modern Hesperides (the Orange); Spirit Photographs; the Making of a Navajo Blanket; Climbing Shasta, by Mark Sibley Severance; Trout Fishing; Among the Wild Grasses; Delightful Summer Articles; Artemus Ward, etc.

Fore and Aft.

MR. EDITOR: The announcement in the last ADVOCATE of Bro. Mitchel's withdrawal from the management of the ADVOCATE caused me a pang at heart. Faithfully and earnestly has he worked to upbold this great interest of the church and to provide for the welfare of his loved ones. May our God support, uphold, and guide him!

The church is fortunate in having one brave enough, and with faith strong enough, to lay hold and boldly undertake the responsible positions of both publisher and editor at this critical juncture. May you have a double portion of the Spirit to enable you to meet this great responsibility to the glory of our Lord and the upbuilding of his church upon her most holy faith. When I was appointed colporter, I wrote a letter for the ADVOCATE, in which I urged all of the preachers to write me a long letter full of good advice. Nearly every request I have ever made of my brethren has been granted but this one. Lest the brethren should fail you in this respect, and thus place you in danger of being exalted above measure by a feeling of your own sufficiency for the editorial position, I have concluded to close this letter with a few words of good advice. Give us short, pointed editorials. Chip in with pungent paragraphs. Hit error and sin, wherever seen, hard blows, straight from the shoulder. Avoid cutting, unkind hits at the brethren. Stand firm and be clear for the truth as taught by our grand old Methodist theologians, especially along the line of entire sanctification, or holiness! The time has past when God can honor so-called Methodists who have only gibes or jeers for those who "follow after holiness" as the grand depositum of Methodism. Be kind to all the brethren. Be yourself. Be true to your own convictions of right and duty.

"Be strong and of a good courage!" (Joshua i; Esther iv, 14) And last, but not altogether least, be courteous to the colporters and book peddlers! (Read I. Cor. i, 26-28.) And may our God "make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work."

F. D. VAN VALKENBURGH.

New Iberia, La., June 23, 1893.

I have laid my hand in his;
I have left the life that is,
And the life that is to be,
To the Leader leading me.

I have put my trust in him,
And my faith is never dim;
For I know that he is just
In whose hand I put my trust.

I have never any fear
From the meads and mountains here,
Or hereafter's hills and meads,
Whitherward my Leader leads.

For his hands, I understand,
Hold the deeps of sea and land,
And whatever height there is
In the universe is his.

Conference Fund.

$500. ATTENTION. $500.

Brethren, we need $500 to finish paying our claimants. Do not withhold this money. Let your people pay. We do not wish to be any more personal in our appeal. The information lodged with your Executive Committee of the Joint Board of Finance guarantees them in saying that there will be suffering in many homes if we fail to pay our quarterly allowance. Let this thought move you to action, "that you yourself are suffering because your people have failed to pay what they owe." Will you fail to collect and forward the amount necessary to pay over every claimant in full?

Let us hear from you. If you don't like the work of the Joint Board, say so, either by private letter or through the columns of the ADVOCATE. Send us the money and send it at once, that these needy men and women and these helpless children may have food to eat and raiment to wear.

Special to The Times-Democrat.

Ruston, July 6.—An audience estimated at 2,000 persons participated in the exercises of the Louisiana State Chautauqua to-day. In the morning a programme consisting of lectures by Profs. Hines, Fortier and Brumbaugh, interspersed with music and recitations contributed by talented visitors, was followed at 12 o'clock by Rev. Sam Jones. To-night there is to be given a lecture upon Victor Hugo by Prof. Fortier and a concert by the Ruston Choral Class. The Louisiana State Chautauqua is an unquestioned and brilliant success.

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

The commencement exercises of this most excellent institution were held June 4-7, 1893. The sermons were preached by Rev. W. G. Miller, pastor of First Methodist Church, Memphis, Tenn., at 11 A. M., and this scribe at 7 P. M., in the spacious Methodist Church in Grenada, Miss. The sermon in the morning was a masterpiece on the subject of love; the congregation was large and appreciative.

The examinations are conducted in writing, and the papers were placed in the hands of the committee for examination, which we did very carefully on those in Latin, mathematics and book-keeping; but the French and German we passed over as all right, as we had made very little attempt at the study of these. The work done in the several departments that we overlooked was as fine as we have seen in any school that it has been our privilege to visit. And they certainly reflect great credit on President Newell and his able corps of teachers. The grade of scholarship is as high and the work as thorough as any female school within our knowledge.

The health of the school has been exceptionally good ever since it has been in the hands of the North Mississippi Conference, and no one would be surprised at this who had seen the location. It is beautifully located on the high plateau just at the base of a range of high pine hills in the extreme southern part of the city of Grenada, one of the best towns in all this fair Southland. The building is one of the best for a boarding school that I have ever seen; most of the rooms are for the accommodation of two pupils—only, it is of brick with metal roof—in the centre of ample grounds. The catalogue well says, "It is substantial, commodious and convenient, furnishing ample room for all the departments of the school and necessities of the family."

We take pleasure in recommending this school to the patronage of our people. J. RITCHEY, for Com.

To the Ministers and Lay Delegates to Jackson District Conference:

Edwards extends a cordial welcome to you all, and emphasizes the modest request of our presiding elder, that all remain over Sabbath. It was with the hope of securing this great desire that our Conference was appointed so as to embrace a fifth Sunday.

Now, brethren, let us continue with one accord to pray for the power of the Holy Ghost to rest upon us throughout the session.

BIBLE CORNER.

PRIESTS AND LEVITES—THE DIFFERENCE.

Any person wishing to have the distinction between these two orders fixed in his mind can do so by reading Num. xviii, 1-10. The Levites served from twenty-five to fifty years of age. (See Num. viii, 24, 25.) The priests served from thirty to fifty years of age. (See Num. iv, 3.) C. McD.

LIGHT ON THE COMMENTARY.

President Reed, of Dickinson College, in a sermon at Ocean Grove, on a late Sabbath, referred to an old lady in Maine who was an ardent lover of the Bible, who had read it through quite a number of times. Some one presented her with a Commentary by a distinguished author. The giver asked her some time afterward how she liked it. She replied, "She liked it very well, and she thought the Old Book threw a good deal of light upon the Commentary."

Ah, how true it is, "God is his own interpreter, and the Bible, his own precious Book, is its own interpreter. Comparing Scripture with Scripture is the surest way to obtain light, the light of salvation."—Christian Standard.

A Well-Known House Sends its Representative East.

A. Bittenghring, buyer for Heath, Schwartz & Co., Limited, left on the steamer New Orleans, Wednesday, to visit the Eastern market and to look about for novelties for the coming season. His house has for years been famous for its exclusive and handsome designs in wall paper, matting and upholstering goods, and the probability is that its reputation will only be enhanced by the selections which its able young representative will make while East.

ALL WISE HEADS agree that the use of a liver pill after dinner, or to accomplish special results, is an important step in civilization. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are better than other liver pills in almost every respect. They're the smallest, easiest to take, most natural in the way they act; cheapest, because guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money returned. We all have weak spots. Generally it's the liver. An active liver prevents impurities and poisons from entering the blood. "Pleasant Pellets" have a tonic effect upon the liver and the general system. MOTHER SONG.

BY HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.

Soft sleeps the earth in moonlight bleat;
Soft sleeps the bough above the nest;
O'er lonely depths the whippoorwill
Breathes one faint note and all is still.
Sleep, little darling; night is long—
Sleep while I sing thy cradle song.

Above thy dreams the drooping flower
Blows her sweet breath from hour to hour,
And while the great moon spreads her wings,
While low, while far, the dear earth swings,
Sleep, little darling; all night long
The wind shall sing thy slumber song.

Powers of the earth and of the air
Shall have thee in their mother care,
And hosts of heaven, together prest,
Bend over thee, their last, their best.
Hush, little darling; from the deep
Some mighty wing shall fan thy sleep.

For the Scoffer of Missions to Think About.

When the microscopic search of skepticism, which has hunted the heavens and sounded the seas to disprove the existence of a Creator, has turned its attention to human society, and has found a place in this planet ten miles square, where a decent man may live in decency, comfort, and security, supporting and educating his children unspoiled, and unpolluted—a place where age is reverenced, infancy respected, womanhood honored, and human life held in due regard—when skeptics can find such a place ten miles square on this globe, where the gospel has not gone and cleared the way and laid the foundations, and made decency and security possible, it will then be in order for the skeptical literati to move thither and ventilate their views. So long as these men are dependent upon the religion which they discard for every privilege they enjoy, they may well hesitate a little before they seek to rob the Christian of his hope, and humanity of faith in that Savior who alone has given to men that hope of life eternal which makes life tolerable and society possible, and robs death of its terrors and the grave of its gloom. —James Russell Lowell.

A Touching Incident.

Rev. Dr. O. K. Marshall was preaching at the penitentiary, many years ago, and among other things told the convicts that they must not think that they had placed themselves beyond the pale of human sympathy and love. "Remember," he said, "that, however sinful you may be, however low you may have fallen, Charlie Marshall loves you." The remark had a strong effect upon one man in particular, who sought Mr. Marshall out after the exercises were concluded, and received from him a little pocket Bible which he promised to keep and read.

Years after, a soldier came back from the Mexican war, and having sought out Dr. Marshall, presented him with the same Bible, now soiled with the dust of many a weary march and stained with the blood of him to whom Marshall had given it years before. The bearer said: "Do you remember this Bible and the man to whom you gave it in the penitentiary some years ago? He told me to find Charlie Marshall and give it to him, and tell him he died a Christian because of that Bible and the love that went with it."—Christian Herald.

Evidence of God's Love.

You think that God is angry with you. Did it never occur to you that God is not spiteful? And did it never occur to you that the best of God's children have had a great deal more trouble than he has ever permitted you to have? And did it never occur to you that God might have something else in view than an exhibition of his ill-feeling against you? Now open your Bible at the third of Revelation and the nineteenth verse, and see what he himself says about it. "As many as I love I chasten!" What a contrast! He chastens you, not because he is angry with you, but because he loves you. Read, and blush, and pray!—Bible Reader.

The Baptism of Fire.

Rev. William Arthur gives the following striking illustrations: "Suppose we saw an army sitting down before a granite fort, and they told us that they intended to batter it down; we might ask them, how? They point to the cannon ball. Well, there is no power in that; it is heavy, but not more than a half a hundred weight; if all the army hurled it against the fort they would make no impression. They would say, 'No; but look at the cannon.' Well, there is no power in that. A child may ride upon it, a bird may perch in its mouth; it is but a machine, and nothing more. 'But look at the powder.' Well, there is no power in that; a child may spill it. Yet this powerless powder and powerless ball are put into the powerless cannon; one spark of fire enters it, and then, in the twinkling of an eye, that powder is a flash of lighting and that ball a thunderbolt which smites as if it had been sent from heaven. So it is with our church machinery at this day. We have all the instruments necessary for pulling down strongholds. But, O for the baptism of fire!"

Talmage on Dreams.

I will give you a recipe for pleasant dreams: Fill your days with elevated thought and unselfish action, and your dreams will be set to music. If all day you are gouging and grasping and avaricious, in your dreams you will see gold that you can not clutch and bargains in which you were outshylocked. If during the day you are irascible and pugnacious and gunpowdery of disposition, you will at night have battle with enemies in which they will get the best of you. If you are all day long in a hurry, at night you will dream of rail trains that you want to catch while you can not move one inch toward the depot.

Dr. Parker, of London, thus expresses himself regarding a fad of our times: "Christian institutions are now being dragged through the mire with a vengeance. What with magic lanterns instead of sermons, gymnasia in place of pulpits and alphabetic letters instead of plain title, I am simply bewildered. A new lingo makes me feel myself a stranger on the earth and an alien in the church. The new lingo sounds to me like this: The P. I. G. movement is being sustained very ably by the F. O. G. bands, and they in their turn are powerful rivals of the D. O. G. brigades, and if a G. A. S. club could be set up in every hamlet we should hear less of the H. O. P. scheme and secure a larger circulation for the P. O. P. magazine."

What is the cruel, insatiable monster whisky doing for humanity? It makes a pauper with every tick of the clock, disqualifies 78 men for business every minute of time, causes 1,000 deaths every day, 300 cases of insanity, 13,000 fights, beats 1,200 wives and 1,700 children, causes 1,000 divorces, utters 800,000 oaths, revels in vulgarisms, keeps up the brothel and traffics heavily in virtue. This is the work it gets in daily, seven days in the week and 365 days in the year, and does double duty on holidays. At the end of the year add to the category of crime the murder in cold blood of 3,000 wives a year by drunken, brutal husbands. Votes alone can put a stop to this carnival of tragedy and crime.—Westerly Tribune.

The immortality of the soul is a subject in which we all are so deeply and intimately concerned, that it argues the most stupid insensibility not to make it the constant object of our reflections. All our actions and all our thoughts must take such different directions, according as we cherish or reject the hope of eternity, that it is impossible to act or determine rightly, unless we regulate our conduct and decisions by a continual reference to this main and primary question.—Pascal.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

A LEGEND OF THE BELL.

BY ALBERT DEVON.

Long years ago there lived a king,
A mighty man and bold,
Who had two sons, named Dong and Ling,
Of whom this tale is told.

Prince Ling was clear of voice and tall,
A prince in every line;
Prince Dong, his voice was very small;
And he but four feet nine.

Now both these sons were very dear
To Bell, the mighty king.
They always hastened to appear
When he for them would ring.

Ding never failed the first to be,
But Dong, he followed well,
And at the second summons he Responded to King Bell.

This promptness of each royal prince
Is all of them we know,
Except that all their kindred since
Have done exactly so.

And if you chance to know a king
Like this one of the song,
Just listen once—and there is Ling;
Again—and there is Dong.

In Japan.

The following is an uncorrected composition written by a Japanese student:

CHINA.

China is largest country in the world, and it has broad tithe of the world in land. The country is divided into five, which are nsmed, China Honbu, Manstru, Mongola, Irea, Chibett. There are two large rivers in north and south of the country. The numbers of people in China are one-fourth of the numbers of all peoples in the world. Many things are produced from the country, and coal is most well known. China-peoples generally are not intelligent men, therefore civilization of the country is very slow. But we necessarily can not look down upon the country. France, which is known in the world as powerful country, engaged in battle with China some years ago. In this time French thought that China is very weak, therefore he will beat hollow immediately. But China, after many fierce and doubtful struggles with French, never yield to an enemy. Some people gave a criticism to China, which is, "China is sleeping now, but he will be the terror of all nations if he wake up from sleep." Also I have heard that most Great Gengiskan in China, who resounded the world within thirteen century, is Yoshitsune Minamoto, Japanese great man. Yoshitsune Minamoto is young brother of Yoritomo Minamoto. Yoshitsune frequently battled and conquered in civil war in the cause Yoritomo. But Yoritomo disliked this brave and illustrious brother, therefore Yoshitsune went to China and did so greatness.

HENRY G. HAWKINS.
Matsuyama, Japan.

The following clipping made from a private letter received last Winter from a fellow-worker will give an insight into the existing state of things in many parts of Japan, though the opposition is not often so open. "During the Summer the Buddhists of nearly all the districts of this province had a meeting, in which they threatened to withdraw their patronage and support from this school, and boycott the business men of this place, if a stop was not put to the progress of Christianity here. The son of the director had been living with me, and the director himself had offered no opposition to Christianity. Now he refuses to let his son live with me, and he has prohibited the scholars from attending religious meetings, and from studying the Bible. One day he angrily demanded of his son that he give up Christianity, but the boy said he could never do that. There is an organization among the business men to oppose us. They have succeeded in getting our meeting-place from us, and they are making it difficult for the preacher to get a suitable place in which to live. A desperate effort is being made to crush out Christianity, but it will be seen that it can't be crushed out. I believe that the opposition will serve to make our cause stronger and brighter in the end."

GROWN-UP LAND.

Good-morrow, fair maid, with lashes brown,
Can you tell me the way to Womanhood Town?

O this way and that way—never stop,
'Tis picking up stitches grandma will drop,
'Tis kissing the baby's tronbles away,
'Tis learning that cross words never will pay,
'Tis helping mother, 'tis sewing up rents,
'Tis reading and playing, 'tis saving the pence,
'Tis loving and smiling, forgetting to frown;
O that is the way to Womanhood Town.

Just wait, my brave lad—one moment, I pray;
Manhood Town lies where—can you tell the way?

O by toiling and trying we reach that land—
A bit with the head, a bit with the hand—
'Tis by climbing up the steep hill Work,
'Tis by keeping out of the wide street Shirk,
'Tis by always taking the weak one's part,
'Tis by giving mother a happy heart,
'Tis by keeping bad thoughts and actions down;
O this is the way to Manhood Town.

And the lad and the maid ran hand-in-hand
To their fair estates in the grown-up land.

"Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep."

In his volume of sermons just published, the late Dr. Stafford draws the following contrast between the eighty volumes of the witty Frenchman, Voltaire, and the four lines of this little bairn's hymn, "Now I lay me down to sleep"

Voltaire did his utmost to mould the thought of Europe to skeptical forms, and to fill the heart of humanity with a more intense hatred against God and Christ. He wrote many volumes, in not one of which did he lose sight of this bad ambition. He is dead, and most of his writings are silent in the grave of forgetfulness. Few authors so voluminous have gone out under so general an eclipse, perhaps none in so short a time; but some one—his name is not now known—some kind father, or, more likely, some tender, loving mother, looked upon the face of her little child, whose flaxen curls were fast drooping over her arm, as the head sank in weary sleep, and she thought out a sweet evening prayer for the lisping child. There were only four lines, for the child was weary, and they were natural and easily remembered:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take."

Compare these few words with Voltaire's volumes. There is scarcely a child, over all the world where our language is spoken, but feels a gladdening influence in his heart when he repeats those lines, and as the mother, with dewy eyes, hears them, bending over the lowly form, she turns away, feeling, like Mary of old, that she has something inconceivably precious to hide in her heart.—Onward

The Gospel.

The gospel was intended to be a conflagration. Every true preacher is an incendiary. Every Christian should be a fire-brand. A cold Christianity is a contradiction. Only that religion which has heat in it, which is full of zeal, is of the sort that Jesus founded. The torrid, not the frigid, zone is the clime where genuine Christians live. As soon as the Savior's love for dying men gets well shed abroad in a human heart, that heart gets hot.

It is impossible to be really cold in the presence of the cross. That professor of religion who has no fervor is in danger, and should take steps at once to remedy the defect lest, if suffered to go on, it prove fatal. It is far better even to have a little fanaticism than to be frozen to death; although, of course, for downright fanaticism there is never any excuse. Our religion should always be reasonable; there is no occasion to divorce it from common sense.—Zion's Herald.

The Human Hand.

The human hand is the most wonderful tool in any workshop. It is a profound study. No instrument devised by man compares with it for complication. It is a hammer, a vise, a forceps, a hook, a spring, a weight; it pushes, it draws in; and the fingers alone contain elements of chisels, gouges, and all the tools a sculptor requires in modeling. From the elbow to the digital extremities its movements are produced by nearly fifty muscles. So complicated is the cordage of a human hand that expert anatomists can hardly keep in remembrance its intricate mechanism. With it all the emotions of the mind may be both manifested and intensified. How could a Frenchman talk with his hands tied? The hand is the prime minister of the brain. It is the soul's agent in the accomplishment of its designs. It is a wonder of wonders.—Churchman's Magazine.

Christian Education.

[By resolution of Arcadia District Conference, requested to be published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.]

The more the world advances in intelligence the higher the estimate it places upon education. The spirit of education is catching. There was a time when the average intelligence of our people was lower than it is now, and when the average ambition for an education was correspondingly lower. There are places now where this ambition is painfully lacking, because there is no spirit of learning in the environment to provoke it. What we need is to diffuse more generally the light of intelligence, that this general average of ambition may be raised.

There is not only an increasing interest in the subject of education, but there are juster views as to the meaning of education. The conventional theory is exploded, and men are not counted educated because they have gone through college and have compassed a course in Latin, Greek and mathematics. The same educational course can no more suit every mind than the same dress will fit everybody. The one thing that all need alike is drill, but the drill itself must be suited to the mental aptitude of the pupil. We are counting that man educated who has learned to think, to use the faculties of his mind wisely and justly. In short, an education means the making of a man.

Education means in man precisely what culture means in the plant and animal life. All the richest and choicest flowers that bloom in our gardens and all the finest and most luscious fruits that ripen in our orchards have been developed by culture from some original interior types. The best strains in our domestic animals have been trained into them by methods of culture. The methods and results in human education are analogous to those in plant and animal development. In the one substance the purpose is to reach the highest possibilities in plant and animal life; in the other, the aim is to reach the highest possibilities in human life.

In the light of this definition, it goes without saying that the ideal education for man is what we call Christian education. Christian education means training one to live according to the Christian ideal of life. It is, according to the wise man, to train one up "in the way he should go" and, as St. Paul has it, to bring one up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

How shall we best compass the end of Christian education? This is a vital question with every reflecting parent. I will try to answer it in the plainest and simplest manner.

To give our children Christian education we must begin with them at the beginning. There is where we begin with the plant and with the animal. We must begin in the home and with the tenderest years of the child.

"'Tis education forms the common mind,
As the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

An eminent authority has said that within the first five years of the child's life the greater part of all that can be done for him has been done. A greater authority than this has said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Those parents who neglect the religious and moral welfare of their children, expecting that the damage will be repaired in after life, will hardly realize their hopes. One has said: "He who does not help us at the needful moment never helps; he who does not counsel at the needful moment never counsels." The needful moment for help and counsel in the education of a child is the earliest moment of the awakening intelligence. No education in the home is wrong education, and the hardest thing to do is to unlearn the errors of the earliest life. The earliest impressions, true or false, are the most ineradicable.

To insure Christian education we need a generation of Christian parents. Some years ago there was held a convention of Christian mothers to discuss the question of the training of children. The question arose as to how early in life the training ought to begin. One said one age, another said another, till finally an elderly mother arose and said she thought the time to commence training a child was twenty years before it was born. When God has a great work to do he begins early and lays the foundation deep and strong. We need a better foundation in parenthood. We need a deeper sense of parental responsibility, broader views of the possibilities of life, a higher conception of the value of the soul. Beginning in the home, Christian education must be completed in the school. And only second to the question of the character of the home is that of the character of the school. Most of our children must finish their educational course in the common school. And many of them will be dependent entirely upon such education as the State may furnish. But the school need not be less Christian and less moral because it is an institution of the State. While our government does not uphold any particular form of religion, it is not, therefore, irreligious. God and the Bible are recognized by all the departments of our government. This government is administered by its Christian citizenship, and this same Christian citizenship should see to it that our public schools are fit places in which to train not only the minds, but the manners and morals of our children. We need not insist upon the presence of the Bible in the school, nor any special forms of religious service, nor the teaching of the tenets of any particular religious sect; but we should insist upon the sound moral character of teachers and the inculcation of the principles of Christian morals.

Methodism, from its beginning, has been the friend of education. It was born in a great university, and its celebrated Kingswood College was the forerunner of the great educational system fostered by Methodism with increasing success ever since. Now its institutions of learning are numbered by the thousand. Thus it is able not only to educate its ministry, but to furnish to many others seeking the higher callings in life ample facilities with a superior moral environment. The period at which young people enter college is the most critical one in life. It is at this formative stage of the character that the church is endeavoring, through its educational institutions, to furnish along with intellectual training such moral training and equipment as will ensure the very best and noblest ends in life.

If it is the function of the State to educate, it is no less the duty of the church to provide as far as possible for the education of those on whom the perpetuation of its influence must devolve. The church must not give up its educational work. Rather, it must increase it. The State itself is the beneficiary of the educational work done by the church. Out from its schools come the best types of moral manhood and those most capable of filling the places of an honorable citizenship. It is a patriotic duty as well as a Christian duty to sustain our church schools. Keeping in view the fact that education means the making of the whole man—morally as well as intellectually—and that intellectual without moral endowment is a dangerous gift, the question is paramount as to the moral character of our educational institutions. As Christians, let us see to it that the educational work of our homes and firesides is not undone by the un-Christian influences of the school. As Methodists, let us take an increasing interest in our church schools, sustaining them by our patronage and prayers, and by liberal donations from our earnings for their perpetual endowment. J. W. MEHLOCK.

THE TONGUE.

"The tongue destroys a greater horde,"
The Turk asserts, "than does the sword."

The Persian proverb wisely saith:
"A lengthy tongue—an early death."

Or sometimes take this form instead:
"Don't let your tongue cut off your head."

"The tongue can speak a word whose speed,"
Says the Chinese, "outstrips the steed."

While Arab sages this impart:
"The tongue's great storehouse is the heart."

From Hebrew wit the maxim sprung:
"Though the feet should slip, ne'er let the tongue."

The sacred writer crowns the whole:
"Who keeps his tongue, doth keep his soul."

—Selected.

Mr. P. D. D. Delacroix, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

Take Care of the Minutes.

A writer says: "There is a good moral in Jane Taylor's story of the discontented pendulum, which began one gloomy day to calculate how many times it would have to swing backwards and forwards in an hour, and then in a day, then in a week, then in a month, and then in a year, and then in ten years. How was it possible to do so much, or to work at all any given moment, with the dark prospect of so much work before it? So the pendulum stopped. Nor could it be induced to start again, till it was reminded that though it would have so many times to tick in the whole year, it had the year to do it in, and was only required to do the hour's work in the hour. The anxiety which men heap upon themselves arises greatly from forgetting this, and trying to provide for to-morrow's work to-day. But leave to-morrow till it comes—take care of the minutes, and the hours will take care of themselves."

A minute at a time, and each swing of the pendulum for God, that should be the rule of life.—Christian Standard.

DUBOSE—Mrs. E. A. DUBOSE (nee Hawkins) was born in Pike county, Ala., Jan. 5, 1832; married to H. DuBose, May, 1845, and died at Marlin, Texas, Jan. 21, 1893. She was the mother of twelve children—six sons and six daughters—and lived to see them all grown since which time one has died. One of her sons—Rev. H. M. DuBose, D. D.—is a prominent minister in the M. E. Church, South, and is now editor of the Pacific Methodist, in San Francisco, Cal.

Sister DuBose was religious from childhood, and joined the Methodist Church at her earliest opportunity. She loved her Bible and read it much and studiously; was ever faithful and always ready to depart and be with Christ. She lived a useful, Christian life through nearly half a century, and died as she lived. Thus has passed from earth to heaven one of the best women in the world, as those who knew her long are wont to say.

The lonely and venerable partner of her life's toils has only a few more steps in the way he is going to meet her again, and her loved and loving children have only to follow in her footsteps, and they shall join her in that world of joy where death and parting are forever unknown. A. E. GOODWIN.

SCHWING—Died, on Jan. 24, CHARLEY K. SCHWING, aged ten years, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Schwing, of Jackson, La. The deceased accidentally shot himself on Wednesday in the abdomen with a rifle while out hunting some miles from town. He was driven home about an hour after the accident happened, still conscious, and having taken nothing to ease or relieve the pain. Some hours after an operation was performed, and it was found the ball had perforated the intestines in thirteen places and lodged in his hip. Charley was conscious up to the last few hours, and such was his wonderful nerve that no expression of pain or even impatience passed his lips. Such an exhibition of courage and endurance has seldom been witnessed.

Little Charley was loved by all who knew him, and such was his sunny and kind disposition that his associates concur in saying they seldom heard a word of impatience or unkindness from him. All concur in saying he was a perfect gentleman. He was a member of our church and Sunday-school. In his home he was almost an idol, having not only their best love, but was trusted and loved by all.

Even in the midst of his suffering he remembered to say his prayers, and at the close of family prayers, held by his bedside, he heard what was said, entered into the spirit of the service, and spoke of his little friend, Richard Holcomb, who died some months ago.

No event has moved the whole community with greater sorrow, and the bereaved family has the sympathy of all in their great affliction. God comforts them, and will make good come from apparent evil. H. R. SINGLETON.

Sympathy for the Distressed.

Our lives are all music if we but touch the chords rightly, so says one of our poets, and we all know there is a golden thread entering into the warp and woof of every-day life that is touched by sympathy for the distressed and suffering. NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The three Spanish caravels arrived at Chicago on July 6, and received a royal greeting.

The cold storage warehouse at the Chicago Exposition was burned to the ground on July 10. About twenty firemen were killed and many were injured.

Old liquor dealers in South Carolina are much encouraged by Judge Hudson's decision at Darlington, that the dispensary act is unconstitutional for the reason that by taking business away from individuals the State has created a monopoly for itself.

Secretary Hoke Smith and Postmaster-General Bissell left Washington, on July 8, on their vacation trip. In the course of his trip West Secretary Smith expects to acquaint himself in the actual workings of the land and Indian branches of his department, and obtain from observation some idea of the needs and requirements of the people over whose interests he presides.

The attendance at the World's Fair last Sunday was very light, so light as to raise doubt in some minds as to whether the open Sundays are to prove the financial boon to the Fair that was expected. While the exposition officials express satisfaction over the attendance, it is no secret that concessionaires are generally greatly disappointed at the lack of the hustling multitudes that were fondly anticipated for this period of the fair.

Mr. Cleveland is slowly recovering from the rheumatism which has caused him so much trouble, and which has been used as the basis for alarming rumors concerning his health. Dr. Bryant, who is still in attendance at Gray Gables, and Colonel Lamont, who acts as Mr. Cleveland's mouthpiece, both say that there is nothing the matter with the president except rheumatism, and that it is yielding to the rest and quiet which Mr. Cleveland is now enjoying.

Chicago was visited, on July 9, by the most terrific storm it has experienced for several years. The wind blew almost a hurricane, and the rain fell in torrents. The storm gathered in the north and west with marvelous quickness; nobody was looking for it. All at once it came and the next moment it was sweeping over the city, leveling trees and spreading death and destruction among the many pleasure boats which were out upon Lake Michigan.

There are seventy-four people dead, at least five more are likely to die, and over 100 injured as a result of the cyclone that started at Quimby, south of Cherokee, and ended with awful results at Pomeroy, Iowa, on July 6. At Pomeroy forty-two are known to be dead, and nearly 100 injured. Five blocks of residences have been completely wiped off the face of the earth—not more than kindling wood being left of them, and 200 families are homeless, having lost their all. The business blocks were badly damaged, and the postoffice block and a drug store completely wrecked, and seven churches, all there was, wiped out of existence.

FOREIGN.

A cabinet meeting was held in Paris on July 9. Wide differences of opinion as to the proper policy towards the mobs in Paris became apparent at once, and a general ministerial crisis is imminent.

Herr Krupp, the German gun and iron manufacturer, with a party of twenty friends, sailed for America on July 8. They will go first to Pittsburg, where preparations are being made to give them a reception.

The socialists in Vienna made a public demonstration, on July 9, in favor of universal suffrage. More than 10,000 of them attended the in-door meeting. As many more listened to speeches in the City Hall Square.

The Infanta Eulalie arrived in Madrid, on July 7. She and Prince Antonio were met at the station by the Queen Regent and the Infanta Isabella. She expressed herself at greatly pleased with the cordiality of her reception in the United States.

Emperor William received, on July 9, Herr Von Levetzow, president of the Reichstag, and the two vice-presidents. He expressed satisfaction with the progress of the army bill, adding that a good majority for it on the decisive vote would greatly impress other nations. The probability that the bill will be passed by a large majority has greatly increased.

When the new Reichstag met, on July 7, for the first time for the consideration of regular parliamentary business, nearly all the 397 members were in their places, for it was known that the government would at once introduce the amended army bill and general interest was felt as to the concessions, if any, that the government had made on the original bill. Chancellor Von Caprivi introduced the amended army bill, which is a compromise, and which asks that the peace effective should be increased by 50,000 men at once, and in the course of the next three years should be raised gradually until 70,000 men, practically the full number demanded, should be added to the standing army.

To Whom It May Concern.

Macon, Ga., March 18, 1893.

About three years ago I received a sample bottle of MULENOL. I had never heard of it before. I began using it, however, as occasion required, and soon found that it was all that is claimed for it, and more. For cuts, burns, bruises, scalds and all kinds of sores it is superior to any remedy I have ever used. It is also exceedingly efficacious in colic and diarrhœa. For sore throat it is incomparably better than anything I know of. I heartily recommend it as a medicine worthy of a place in every household.

Camp Meetings.

A camp meeting on the Bethel Camp Ground will begin on Thursday, July 27, and continue one week.

A large tabernacle has just been constructed, and an ample hotel is in process of construction; thus providing amply for a large attendance.

The preachers in the Woodville district and such others as can do so are cordially invited to attend. Provisions for their entertainment will be ample.

The camp ground lies ten miles east of Woodville, and twelve miles west of Centreville.

The Spanish steamer Don Juan, which has before been reported afire and abandoned at sea off Unlou, has been towed to Manila and beached. One hundred and forty-five Chinese passengers were lost. The vessel was gutted by the flames.

Hollins Institute.

This high school for young ladies, though bearing the name of "Institute," is really superior to many with the more imposing title of College or University. It has a fine equipment, in a most beautiful and salubrious country. Its faculty of eight gentlemen and twenty ladies are of the highest literary, scientific and artistic accomplishments, and personal character. During the past half century the school has done a great and noble work. Its graduates are all over this and other lands. Many hold elevated social and professional situations.

Its semi-centennial was celebrated on the 7th of June, in the presence of pupils and patrons from twenty States, and looks forward into the next half century with the highest prospects of success. Further information may be had by addressing Chas. L. Cooke, Supt., Hollins, Va.

Edward McGehee College.

Some stir has been occasioned recently by the efforts of the East Mississippi College, located at Meridian, to secure Dr. H. Walter Featherstun for its president. His success here has made him sought for elsewhere; and very flattering offers were made by this Meridian school, one of the first in the State. The Board of Trustees of Edward McGehee College voted, however, that they could not spare Dr Featherstun, and accordingly he is to remain with our college. The Board met and took this action Thursday morning; and also, in addition to this, determined to make extensive improvements on the college buildings and grounds. Some $2 000 are to be expended.—Woodville Republican.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

ON THE BEACH.

The twenty-second annual camp meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 12, next, and continue for eight days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates will be obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the camp meeting to begin their journey on July 5, and remain on the grounds until the twenty sixth. Holders of camp meeting railroad tickets desiring to attend the session of the Biblical Institute and Summer School for Christian Workers, which opens its first annual session on July 26, can get their railroad tickets extended until August 31. All trains stop at the grounds during the meeting. Express trains Nos. 5 and 6 will stop on signal from June 1 to Oct. 1.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The camp ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade-trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before the rush at the opening of the camp meeting should address communications to W. B. Thomson, chairman Tent and Cot Committee, 68 South Rampart St., New Orleans, La. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to Capt. A. C. Danner, chairman, Mobile, Ala.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half-rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding-tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Cot Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution towards defraying the expense of the camp meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous and in the interest of the salvation of souls.

JUST BE GLAD.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

O heart of mine, we shouldn't
Worry so!
What we've missed of calm we couldn't
Have you know!
What we've met of stormy pain,
And of sorrow's driving rain,
We can better meet again,
If it blow.

We have erred in that dark hour,
We have known,
When the tears fell with the shower,
All alone—
Were not shine and shower blent
As the gracious Master meant?
Let us temper our content
With his own.

For we know not every morrow
Can be sad:
So, forgetting all the sorrow
We have had,
Let us fold away our fears,
And put by our foolish tears,
And through all the coming years
Just be glad.

Brookhaven District Conference.

The Brookhaven District Conference met at Terry, June 29, 1893. Our presiding elder, Rev. R. S. Woodward, being absent (from sickness), Rev. J. M. Weems presided. The attendance was very good, only one preacher being absent.

The reports of the preachers and laymen were extremely encouraging; and while there is yet plenty of work to do, it seems as if we are marching on to a certain victory. All, both preachers and laymen, seem very much encouraged, and are looking forward to this year as one of the grandest yet that has been spent for the Master in their experience and efforts.

The Conference was a spiritual one—that is, we seemed to transact our business under the direction of the Holy Spirit, and, borne up and directed by that power, it was a pleasure to do the will of him who had "counted us worthy" thus to labor.

Particular attention was given to the preaching of the Word, for which purpose we assembled at 11 A. M. and 8:30 P. M. Revs. M. L. Burton, W. W. Hurst, M. J. Miller and T. B. Holloman preached during the Conference with their usual fervor and earnestness the sweet truths of the gospel to the strengthening and edification of all.

The following is the report of the Committee on Church Literature, which we hope the readers of the ADVOCATE will carefully peruse.

"To the Brookhaven District Conference:

"Dear Brethren: We, your committee appointed on Religious Literature, beg leave to submit the following report:

"It is a well-established fact that the literature a man reads shapes and moulds his opinions, and governs largely, if not wholly, his life and conduct. We, therefore, recommend that our people read only the best books and papers, and especially the Holy Bible, which is now in reach of every person, however poor. A Testament for five cents and a Bible for ten cents is as cheap as we could desire, and everyone can possess a copy of the 'Words of eternal life.'

"But especially would we call the attention of the Conference to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, our Conference organ, which has through fire and war lived for more than forty years as a dispenser of gospel truth, and we trust may continue to live and bless the church, and send out weekly the message of light and love to its thousands of readers.

"Having undergone recently a very severe financial strain, resulting in the retirement of Dr. Carter as editor and Bro. D. L. Mitchel as publisher, we deem it our duty to give expression of feeling and sympathy to this paper, which has been our friend so long. We have tried in the past to keep the paper going on, whereasing and resolving, complimenting the editorial and business management, pledging support and hearty co-operation, etc. Under this kind of support the paper failed. Resolutions are good, but will not buy paper and ink; compliments are pleasant, but will not feed and clothe the laborers who set the type and print the paper. Pledges stand for no more nor less than the market value of each, which is current in no country on the face of the wide earth, unless backed by either a faithful heart or negotiable paper. We think it possibly not best to append a series of resolutions to this report, but would recommend that we return to our charges and by precept and example teach our people that it is nothing but honest and right to pay what we justly owe the ADVOCATE. If the 7,000 subscribers will only keep their accounts straight, there will be no danger but that the paper which has withstood so many storms will soon emerge from beneath the present cloud into noonday brightness; and to this end we call upon all delinquent subscribers, especially in the Brookhaven district, to make haste to settle their accounts in full.

"We trust that the Publishing Committee will be successful in carrying on the work, and that Dr. Beard, who now has charge as editor and publisher, may receive hearty support from all the other patronizing Conferences."

J. W. THOMPSON,
W. W. HURST,
M. L. BURTON.

As a whole, the status of the district is good, both spiritually and financially. Some reporting spirituality at high tide mark, and others finances in excess of last year up to date. Sunday-schools in very good condition.

The Conference was heartily received by the good people of Terry, and nobly cared for. The last session closed at 10:30 Saturday morning, and the most of us bade farewell to those kind people and boarded the 12 o'clock train for our respective fields of labor to work for the Master's cause in this life, to pay the debt we justly owe, that "the inheritance may be ours" in the future, "even a crown of righteousness that fadeth not away."

The Bible.

Three years ago our Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Board offered to assist needy Sunday-schools in procuring libraries, and requests poured in so rapidly that by the end of the year the treasury was almost empty. Last year the offer was withdrawn, and, instead, a proposal to help provide Bibles for Sunday-school scholars was made. The Board knew from observation that hundreds of scholars had no Bibles of their own; that the Magazines, Quarterlies and lesson papers were all that ever found the way to scores of Sabbath-schools within our bounds. They knew that the Bible was being neglected; they knew that it was needed; they thought the pastors and Sunday-school superintendents knew its importance and appreciated its presence; but, if "by their fruits ye shall know them," the Board's confidence has been sadly misplaced. Requests for libraries continued to come in long after that proposition was withdrawn, and when, in response, we sent blank applications for Bibles, these schools have been, almost universally, conspicuous only for their silence. Many that had ten dollars, and more, for libraries have not had ten cents for Bibles. Are these schools supplied with Bibles? Not a bit better than others. "Why do they not secure them?" Because they do not want them. The reason they do not want them is because they do not appreciate them, and their lack of appreciation can only be explained by ignorance or neglect. Ignorance is excuseless; neglect is criminal.

Magazines, Quarterlies and other lesson helps are good, but only good when in their place. They can no more take the place of the Bible than the dictionary can displace grammar and history. The records of missionary efforts prove that the Bible is essential to permanent success. Those missionaries who have scattered the Word of God over the fields of their labor have looked out of heavenly rapture upon a constantly increasing harvest of salvation and glory which their efforts began, while he who has thought it sufficient to burden only his mind and tongue, and not his hands, with the gospel, has seen the unhallowed tramp of infidel and pagan feet over his almost forgotten grave. The devil and his allies are seeking to suppress the Word of God, and neither ignorance nor negligence will excuse us for stacking arms on his territory and resting in his tents.

We repeat our offer: For Sunday-schools that wish to give each child a Bible we furnish Nonpareil Bibles, 12 mo, 5¼x7, without references, cloth, at 15 cents each, and Agate Bibles, 24 mo, 4x5½, without references, cloth, at 10 cents each. If the Sunday-school is too poor to pay these prices, if they will pay what they are able, we will send the Bibles. If you can collect but a dime, send that. If you are too poor to pay anything, apply for Bibles anyway. But in no case will we help a Sabbath-school that has not made an honest effort to raise what it can.

Presiding elders, pastors, superintendents and teachers in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, will you not enter into your closets, shut the door and kneel down, and ask the Divine Giver of the blessed Book what you shall do about this matter, and what blood will be upon your hands if you neglect it? God bless you, beloved, and make your successes larger than your life. H. M. ELLIS, Giving of Tithes.

"Will a man rob God?" This awful question was propounded to Israel through the inspired prophet, Malachi, and, to the shame of the Israelitish nation, was answered in the affirmative by the inspired author above mentioned. God tells the Israelites plainly that they have robbed him "in tithes and offerings." After thus bringing the matter straight home to the people, they are told that a curse is resting upon their whole nation by reason of withholding what rightfully belonged to God. Following the question and answer comes the challenge of the Almighty: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." (Malachi iii, 10.) How does this momentous question of ancient date, propounded to another nation, apply to us who live in the boasted light of the nineteenth century? Are we robbing God? Do we give a tenth of our earnings each year toward the support and spread of the gospel? What is the answer of our conscience? If we are withholding what rightfully belongs to God, we are under the curse. Are we bringing all the tithes into the storehouse, or are we hoarding them up for our own selfish purposes? Were the writer to answer for the people of the present day, he would be, in conscience bound, compelled to plead guilty. If the tithes that rightfully belong to God were brought in, the worry and anxiety about supporting our ministers and churches would be at an end. When all the tithes are brought in, the vexatious financial question will be solved, and we will be the happy recipients of the promised blessings. Let the people ponder.

THE SWEETEST LIVES.

BY MRS. BROWNING.

The sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small,
Are close-knit strands of an unbroken thread
Where love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpets, ring no bells,
The Book of Life the shining record tells.

Thy love shall chant its own beatitudes
After its own life-working. A child's kiss
Set on thy sighing lips shall make thee glad;
A poor man served by thee shall make thee rich;
A sick man helped by thee shall make thee strong;
Thou shalt be served thyself by every sense
Of service which thou renderest.

Holly Springs District Conference.

The twenty-third session of the Holly Springs District Conference was held at Hickory Flat, Miss., July 6-8, 1893; Rev. J. W. Honnoll, P. E., in the chair. T. W. Lewis served as secretary.

All the pastors save one were present. There was lay representation from every charge save one. Thirty laymen responded to roll-call. The reports of the preachers showed a large increase of interest in the Sunday-school work of the district. There is less worldliness than formerly. With the exception of two small towns in Benton county, there are no licensed liquor houses in the bounds of the district. There are more family altars, a few more church papers, and a better state spiritually than formerly.

The financial condition of the country is depressing; but a few charges are in advance of what they were at this time last year.

Dr. G. E. Kelsey, Judge J. T. Fant, Hon. M. J. McKinney and Rev. W. W. Bott were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, and M. C. Pegues and Dr. W. R. Montgomery, alternates.

The Sunday-school Conference occupied Saturday morning. Hon. M. C. Pegues presided, and J. E. Simpson served as secretary. The reports from the Sunday-schools showed an increased interest.

Hickory Flat entertained us royally. Next Conference at Waterford.

We were honored by the presence of Rev. T. J. Newell and Rev. J. W. Chambers; the former representing Grenada Collegiate Institute, and the latter Millsaps College. Bro. Newell represented our Conference college as in a prosperous condition, and Bro. Chambers did not fail to take a collection to assist in furnishing the rooms at Millsaps College.

The preaching was done by J. C. Lowe, J. W. Poston, J. W. Shumaker, J. J. Brooks, J. L. Bowling, G. H. Jacobs, J. W. Chambers, J. W. Honnoll, and T. W. Lewis.

The love-feast, Sunday morning, was a great occasion. A great number, from the little girl just entering her teens to the old man of seventy, testified to the goodness and love of God. The leader called mourners, and six came forward. Ten persons were converted at the last two services.

Corinth District Conference.

The Corinth District Conference met at New Albany, Miss., July 6, 1893; Rev. W. S. Lagrone, P. E., in the chair.

The first day was devoted to Sunday-school interests. Careful enquiries elicited the gratifying facts that a larger per cent. of our children are attending Sabbath-schools, using our own literature, and producing better results than in any previous year. It was also developed that a large per cent. of the scholars have been converted and brought into the church.

All of the pastors in the district but two were present, and fifty-five laymen answered to roll-call. It was pre-eminently a spiritual District Conference. The Holy Spirit was present from beginning to the end. A deep, religious fervor permeated the whole Conference and manifested itself in every sermon and discussion. Bros. Smith, Buck, Jacobs, Harris, Babb and Phillips did most excellent preaching. Rev. J. W. Chambers, agent of Millsaps College, preached a sermon of great power, and we had a "time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord." Rev. T. J. Newell, president of Grenada Collegiate Institute, gave us a superb sermon on Christian Education. The institution over which he presides is doing a great work for our girls. Not only are they thoroughly educated down there, but their souls are saved. Rev. J. M. Wyatt represented the Educational Loan Fund Association, and organized an auxiliary for Corinth district. The presiding elder is the president, ex-officio, and the writer was elected vice-president, and G. P. Hammerly, of Iuka, secretary and treasurer. Rev. G. W. Bachman, our Conference colporter, was present selling books and taking subscriptions to our church papers. Special emphasis was given the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, a good list of subscribers was obtained under the recently published club rates, with more to follow from every charge in the district. Rev. T. Masao, of the Japan Mission, was with us one day. His lecture on Japan and her needs, and what the gospel has already done, made a profound impression on the Conference, and an influence has gone out that will tell on the collections in the Fall.

New Albany dispensed a hearty and generous hospitality, and our good Bro. Bell excelled as a Conference host.

This is the last year of our beloved presiding elder on this district. His brethren love him for his work's sake and for his own personal worthiness. He has glorified God by magnifying his office and making full proof of his ministry.

Jno. E. Young, Dr. Jas. A. Green, L. P., Wm. H. Reese and H. A. Dean were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference, with Dr. S. A. Gassaway and E. M. Coker as alternates.

Next Conference goes to Booneville.

We welcome you, Mr. Editor, to the tripod, and gladly say that if the beginning is prophetic of the future, you will make us an admirable paper. We regretted that you could not be with us. T. Y. RAMSEY, Sec.

The Evidence of Experience.

No kind of evidence stands higher than that of experience. It is the very kind of evidence demanded by the scientific spirit of the times. To believe in the Bible on the ground of outward authority is something; even a traditional faith is not to be despised; but no one seeking an intelligent basis for certainty ought to rest satisfied until he can say with Thomas Erskine: "I do not believe the things contained in the Bible because I believe it to be inspired, but I believe in its inspiration because I have found the truth of the great things recorded in it." The best commentary upon the Bible is our own experience. The outward evidence in the Word is nothing to us without this reinforcement of proof. Truth written in a book is good, but truth written in the soul is better. The outward revelation in the Word is "a lamp shining in a dark place until the day-dawn and the day-star arise in our hearts." The lamp in the hand is good; the star in the heart is better.

Experience is a doorway leading into the inner court of the temple of faith. In the first inception of faith there is always an element of venture; sometimes an element of doubt. It is not exactly a step in the dark; it is rather a step in the gray light of the breaking day. As the journey proceeds the path of faith "shineth more and more unto the perfect day." What was at first taken upon trust is confirmed by experience. "I know what I have believed" is the declaration of the happy soul who has made trial of God's truth. There is deep significance in the hackneyed phrase, "Experiencing religion." Not until it is experienced is religion a reality to anyone. The truths of the Bible may be assented to, or accepted in a general way, before their power is felt; but they become real and vital only when they have been translated into life. To the young convert the Bible is a new book; in it he finds new interest; in it he sees new meaning, because he has found a new light—the light of a new experience—by which to read it. An aged Christian had the margin of his well-thumbed Bible marked with the letters "T" and "P." When asked what these letters meant he replied: "They mean tried and proved; all these promises thus marked have been tried and proved in my own experience." It would be folly to attempt to argue such a man out of his confidence in the Word of God.—Rev. J. G. Campbell.

The Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

We must recur here to a case which came under our observation years ago "among the annals of the poor." A woman in poor health, poor in this world's goods, pressed down with the care of a large family, with the merest "name to live" in the church, and, when moving about amid her domestic cares, had these specific reflections one day pass with wonderful impressiveness through her mind: "I shall die soon and stand in the presence of God. I do not desire to meet my God there on a short or slight acquaintance. I desire to know him fully by that time. From this moment it shall be my supreme object to know God, understand his way, and find grace in his sight."

Without relaxation of fidelity to family duty, she set her whole heart upon knowing and walking with God. When about her daily cares she would have her Bible open upon a shelf, so that as she passed around she could stop a moment and read a passage, and then make it the subject of meditation and prayer. With the same diligence she read the most spiritual works that she could obtain, the Oberlin Evangelist especially. In prayer her importunity would admit of no denial. In a short time the baptism came, and visions of God filled her whole being. She beheld "with open face the glory of the Lord," and truly her "fellowship was with the Father, and with his Son, Jesus Christ." As a consequence her character became mildly and gloriously radiant through that whole community. Even infidels—and there were numbers of them in the place—confessed that there was Christian character in its genuineness and perfection of beauty. In the revival of religion which followed none had such power with the people as she. The sisters of the church came together and did up her Fall and Winter sewing, that she might visit from house to house. All the cavils of infidels, Universalists and worldlings were silenced under the divine radiance of her character.—Dr. Mahan.

A Little Errand for God.

Helen stood on the doorstep with a very tiny basket in her hand, when her father drove up to her, and said: "I am glad you are all ready to go out, dear. I came to take you to Mrs. Lee's park and see the new deer."

"Oh, thank you, papa; but I can't go just this time. The deer will keep and we can go to-morrow. I have a very particular errand to do now," said the little girl.

"What is it, dear?" asked the father.

"Oh, it is to carry this somewhere," and she held up the small basket.

Her father smiled, and asked, "Who is the errand for, dear?"

"For my own self, papa; but—oh, no; I guess not—It's a little errand for God, papa."

"Well, I will not hinder you, my little dear," said the good father tenderly. "Can I help you any?"

"No, sir. I was going to carry my orange, that I saved from dessert, to old Peter."

"Is old Peter sick?"

"No, I hope not; but he never has anything nice, and he's good and thankful. Big folks give him only cold meat and broken bread, and I thought an orange would look so beautiful and make him so happy! Don't you think that poor well folks ought to be comforted sometimes as well as the poor sick folks, papa?"

"Yes, my dear; and I think we too often forget them until sickness or starvation. You are right; this is a little errand of God. Get into the buggy, and I will drive you to old Peter's and wait till you have done the errand, and then show you the deer. Have you a pin, Helen?"

"Yes, papa, here is one."

"Well, here is a five-dollar bill for you to fix on the skin of the orange. This will pay old Peter's rent for four weeks, and, perhaps, this will be a little errand for God, too," said the gentleman.

Little Helen, who had taught a wise man a wise lesson, looked very happy as her fingers fixed the bill on the orange.—Domestic Journal.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. G. Backus, P. C., Eastabuchie, Miss., July 13: "Our first protracted meeting has just closed at Morriston. Fifteen accessions, two infants and seven adults baptized. The Lord was with us, and the church at Morriston greatly strengthened. Bros. M. L. White and A. C. Burt rendered faithful and efficient service."

Rev. G. W. Gordon, Coffeeville, Miss., July 12: "The third Quarterly Conference for this (Coffeeville) charge met July 7. On the same day we had a Sunday-school mass meeting at the place where Quarterly Conference was held. It was indeed a good day. The reports from the different Sunday-schools showed that the interest in that line of church work was greater than formerly. The attendance was fine, and the Quarterly Conference was one of interest. Bro. Burroughs, our young and efficient presiding elder, did some excellent work. Finances very well up, considering the hard times."

Rev. J. P. Haney, Live Oak, La., July 7: "We have held three protracted meetings at Friendship, Palmetto, and Live Oak. Bro. N. J. Roberts assisted us at Friendship. We had a good meeting, and, in addition to this, collected enough in good subscription to build a new church at that place, which was sadly needed. Bro. J. S. Hodges was with us at Palmetto. The results were very gratifying. Much good was done in many ways. At Live Oak we had Bros. Hodges, Linfield, and Anders. We had a gracious revival; some say as good, and others the best ever held at this place. We have had about fifty accessions, and quite a number of conversions. We are under many obligations to Bros. White, Turner, Kelley, Hart, and Lee, L. P., for valuable services in the meetings. We are trying to build three churches on this charge. Pray for us."

REVIVAL ITEMS FROM MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Leakesville cir., Adamsville Church, W. J. Dawson, P. C., assisted by Rev. J. L. Grace, of Alabama Conference, and the presiding elder: Accessions—4 on profession of faith and 3 by certificate; 7 or 8 conversions, and 3 family altars, and much good otherwise done. The new church is a certainty.

Waynesboro circuit, Buckatunna Church, A. T. Bell, P. C., assisted by W. J. Ferguson: About 20 professed conversion, 8 led in prayer for first time, and several family altars.

On the recommendation of the Eucutta Church Conference, and by authority of the Eucutta circuit Quarterly Conference, at Spring Hill Church, Wayne county, Miss., July 8, I signed a license authorizing Ransom J. Jones, son of the Rev. K. A. Jones, of North Mississippi Conference, and nephew of Rev. R. J. Jones, of Mississippi Conference, to preach the gospel according to the rules and regulations of the M. E. Church, South. He will make his mark. T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

CLIMBING TO REST.

BY LUCY LARCOM.

Still must I climb, if I would rest;
The bird soars upward to his nest;
The young leaf on the treetop high
Cradles itself within the sky.

The streams, that seem to hasten down,
Return in clouds, the hills to crown;
The plant arises from her root,
To rock aloft her flowers and fruit.

I can not in the valley stay;
The great horizons stretch away!
The very cliffs that wall me round
Are ladders unto higher ground.

To work - to rest - for each a time;
I toil, but I must also climb;
What soul was ever quite at ease
Shut in by earthly boundaries?

I am not glad till I have known
Like that can lift me from my own;
A loftier level must be won,
A mightier strength to lean upon.

And heaven draws near as I ascend;
The breeze invites, the stars befriend;
All things are beckoning towards the Best—
I climb to thee, my God, for rest.

Expiring June.

BY JOSEPH B. COTTRELL, D. D.

I've been resisting the impulse to write, in communication with friends of the days of the years of my early ministerial life, through the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, from the early dawn of this last day of the month of June till the middle of the afternoon. My reason for resisting has been that sentiment and emotion have been too dominant.

The announcement through the Advocates of the death of Dr. O. R. Blue, at Greensboro, Ala., on the sixth of this month, is occasion of reminiscential ruminations, cumulative in pathos, for he was a unique, individualized personality, remembered the more vividly because of contrasts.

Jefferson Hamilton, Thos. O. Summers, P. P. Neely, Edward Wadsworth, C. C. Callaway, J. J. Hutchinson, James L. Cotten, F. G. Ferguson—these, collectively, and each of them, individually, come up in potency derived from the solemn associations of hallowing death—of caskets and tombs! They, and scores of others of the old Alabama Conference, through the decades from 1850 to 1870, and later, are remembered as at once the comrades and confederates of Blue, and marked off from him in as thorough contrast of personal manifestation as is possible to nature, in her interminable production of unities constituted of extremest varieties. Indeed, Blue seemed set over in such individual, personal contrast with each and with all of those with whom he was accordant, in endeavor on behalf of the cause of humanity, that to the superficial his pronounced individuality in manner and appearance was occasion, at times, of illegitimate subtraction from the full credit due him as sympathetic with the sentiment of the brotherhood. There was a forcefulness—a solidarity and precision—in his style of presenting a case, that effected much in the issues that engaged him, whether personal or topical; and in preaching it seemed ever his endeavor to voice, distinctly and precisely, the divine Oracle whom he reported. Dr. Garland, who sat under his ministry through two consecutive years, in Tuscaloosa, had often made criticism, in conversation with me, of Blue's exceptional gift in this regard. It was in the month of June his countenance was changed and he sent away—the queen month! The poets have seemed foiled in endeavor to mirror in measures of verbal expression the charms of the month which is as full blossoming of time—the flowering of the year! Whitcomb Riley touches the circle as at a tangent:

"The zephyr throws
The shifting shuttle of the Summer's loom
And weaves a damask work of gleam and gloom
Before thy listless feet. The lily blows
A bugle call of fragrance o'er the glade,
And wheeling into ranks with plume and spear
The harvest armies gather on parade;
While faint and far away, yet pure and clear,
A voice calls out of alien lands of shade,
'All hail! the peerless goddess of the year.'"

Coleridge, in "The Ancient Mariner," has spoken as beautifully:

"A noise like a hidden brook
In the leafy month of June,
That to the sleeping woods all night
Singeth a quiet tune."

It was on the fifteenth of June, 1882, my boy, at Bowling Green, Ky., got out from under the shadow of the cloud that darkened his day! The poignancy of the pain he endured! On the twenty-seventh of June, 1889, it was, that the mother of that boy went to sleep at the night fall! "It is all over now, papa!" so spake her son, Henry, as he took her wrist in hand, after we had been talking—three of us, Henry, Jennings and I—in the dim light of the room for two hours.

Yesterday, four years ago, under moss-draped trees, at Yalaha, on Lake Harris, Fla., Henry and Jennings and Joseph and Susan stood with me at the open grave. Carrie and Charles were up here in Kentucky. John was sixteen when he died. He was born in March; so was the mother. Each died in June. So this month in which Blue died owes to other and else than its flowers and fruits and flush firmamental glow in declaration of the benevolence of Nature, her occupancy of my thought.

It was Blue, on the evening of the twelfth of January, 1854, at the altar of our church in Montgomery, Ala., who pronounced the marital covenant terms that made a unit, domestic, of those I've named; and as I sit here in the elegant new home of my son—the artist—Charles, in Russellville, Ky., listening to the voice of his little two-year-old daughter, whilst the gentle rain comes down upon the roof, and the firmament-compassing cloud seems as mourning drapery of the day, it is surely not a delusion, this confidence I feel, that there has been a greeting in the realm whereof light itself is but shadow! Would that the sky of every-one were clear!—that all were ample in the faith and hope and love of the covenant uniting us! Magnanimity! A forgiveness from out the depths of our every heart for all we've deemed adverse to brotherliness! There is so much that is transcendantly glorious available to us, to be had for the asking!—that is Immanent!

The Literature Most Helpful to Christian Growth and Development.

BY REV. G. W. BACHMAN.

[Read before the Grenada District Conference at Coffeeville, Miss., June 30, 1893, and published by request of that body.]

This is a subject of no little importance to us who live in this age abounding with printing presses and in a land that is literally flooded with reading matter which caters to all mental tastes and is put within the reach of all classes. The reading of books and papers impresses the mind, affects the heart and moulds the character as surely as does personal companionship. Therefore, as the company one keeps will influence his thought and life, so will the literature that he reads. "A bad book poisons the soul just as truly as the talk of a bad man. A silly book lowers the tone just as truly as does the society of a silly person." ("Christian Growth." Page 49.)

"Books make life and books make death. Every book which is read as a good book ought to be read enters into the reader's heart-blood for weal or for woe. It may mingle with the flowing current as a life-destroying poison, as a deadly narcotic or as the very river of the waters of life. . . . Many a man would give all his gold to rid his mind of the false or impure thoughts which his early reading has made abiding guests in his brain." (Editorial in Sunday-School Times.)

From these general propositions we proceed to consider more particularly the subject assigned us: The Literature Most Helpful to Christian Growth and Development. We assume as a fundamental principle of our Christianity the privilege and duty of every Christian believer to advance in religious knowledge, experience and practice. When a man is spiritually regenerated he is—though a new creature—but a babe in Christ. "He has as little acquaintance with and experience in the things of God as the new-born infant has in the things of the world." The physical child is not designed to remain in a state of infantile size and weakness, but by due use of means afforded it is to grow into the stature and strength of manhood. So it is contemplated in the divine plan of salvation that the spiritual child shall "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ—unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." The converted man is, therefore, to aim "to stand perfect and complete in all the will of God," which means thorough acquaintance with the doctrines, full possession of the graces and constant practice of the duties of Christianity. Bishop Fitzgerald, in "Christian Growth," truly says: "Being born into the Christian life the child of God has but one thing before him henceforth and forever, and that is growth." . . . "This being regarded as the great end of life, all things should be accepted or rejected as they help or hinder it." . . . "Soul health is of more importance than that of the body. Therefore, what you read is of more consequence than what you eat or drink." As the growth, health and vigor of the body are affected by the quality of the food used, so are spiritual life and prosperity by the nature of the mental pabulum taken.

The reading matter indulged in with relish will promote or hinder Christian growth, according to its character. Thought, desire and purpose are influenced by reading; hence sensational, light and frivolous literature will beget silly ideas, evil desires and reckless, if not wicked, habits, which will ever retard religious development. But that literature that is truthful in statement and chaste in expression will excite wholesome thought and holy aspirations, which will promote Christian growth. What is read not only instructs and entertains the mind, but it influences the judgment, will and affections; consequently the spiritual life will either be strengthened and expanded or weakened and dwarfed by it. Therefore, whatever is calculated to enliven and increase faith, hope and love should be read, and whatever is liable to weaken or diminish these graces in the soul should be avoided.

We come now to note some classes of literature and a few special books that we heartily recommend as most helpful to such as would be real and growing Christians.

1. That which is to be commended as of supreme importance is the Holy Bible, which is to be accepted as a revelation from God to man, the words of which are "spirit and life." It is to be used as a lamp to the feet and a light to the path of life to solve all doubts and difficulties and to comfort in all fears and sorrows. Aknowledge of its letter and experience of its life-giving power qualifies the child of God with proper information, right principles and suitable ability for the varied duties and trials of life.

"To slight God's Word is to slight its Author. The unopened, dusty Bible tells the secret of many a barren life and joyless experience. The morocco-bound, gilt-edged volume, that lies as an ornament on the center table, or the velvet-bound smaller volume in the bed chamber are silent witnesses against their negligent owners." ("Christian Growth," Page 42.)

A systematic and devout study of this blessed book is a means of grace that can not be neglected without vital loss to the soul. Therefore, the Scriptures should be searched with the use of all reliable helps at hand and with earnest prayer for the interpreting influence of the Holy Spirit. Thus the mind of God in his own written Word will be obtained and will prove to be food for the soul by which it will be nourished unto eternal life.

2. We would recommend the study of Christian hymnology as a serviceable means to spiritual development. These sacred songs and hymns that are so rich in Scripture sentiment and religious experience, and that emanated from hearts all aglow with divine love and life, can not but animate and cheer the Christian amid life's cares, toils and sorrows. "Thousands have been encouraged and strengthened in the Christian warfare by these blessed hymns and have died singing in their glowing words their final triumph."

We concur with Dr. Tillet, who says: "Few volumes are equal to a modern hymnal as a book of devotion for the closet and for hours of religious meditation. There is no phase of Christian experience that does not find most faithful and helpful expression therein." We fear that but few people who use a hymn book appreciate its true value as an aid to devotion and a motor in life's services and conflicts. We specially commend to our people the steady use of our own church hymn book in their homes and private studies as well as in the public services of the church, and that they study it according to arrangement and topics.

3. We could enumerate a great many books of various classes, the reading of which would promote Christian growth. Suffice it to say that Christian biography and works of religious devotion and experience as well as on the evidences and doctrines of Christianity should be carefully read. "Christian biography is a form of literature which is peculiarly helpful in the promotion of experimental religion. The thrilling stories of the conversion and life struggles of saintly men and women, and of their comfort in trials, afflictions and death, have inspired many with enthusiasm and courage, and nerved many a faltering one in noble resolve and daring action."

Of this class we would make special mention of the biographies of such worthy characters as Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher, Wm. Carvasso, Hester Ann Rogers, The Dalrymau's Daughter, and a host of other men and women whose records of piety and consecration abide as holy ointment poured forth. There are numerous books of devotion and religious experience that may be used with profit by those whose souls are yearning for nearness to God and growth in grace, such as "The Golden Censer," "Aid and Guide to Family Worship," "the Ritual in our Discipline," "Christian Secret of a Happy Life," "Stepping Heavenward," and "Christian Growth." The reading of these and kindred literature has cheered thousands of Christian pilgrims on earth in their journey to the "better country."

4. The last, but not least, species of literature that we note and commend as helpful to Christian development is the religious newspaper. It is a regular weekly visitant that keeps its readers in constant touch with the current religious thought and activities of the world. It is a vehicle of intercourse between millions of souls belonging to one spiritual family, engaged in one common cause and partakers of one hope of eternal blessedness. Such communications as it affords can not but be inspiring to one who is seeking for all the fullness of God in Christ Jesus and for a home with the glorified in heaven.

Finally, to be an intelligent and useful church member and a live and progressive Christian, one must be a regular student of the Holy Scriptures and of religious books and papers to keep himself in fellowship with God and with his works and people on earth.

Notes from the Japan Mission.

Mrs. J. W. Lambuth, after a continuous service of ten years, returned to the United States by the last steamer for a much-needed rest. She has been in missionary work in the East for thirty-nine years, having come out to China with her husband in 1854. Her labors here have been very abundant, and she has literally worn herself out in zealous work for her Master. "This woman was full of good works and alms-deeds which she did." Her "praise is in all the churches," and her memory is enshrined in the hearts of her brethren and sisters, and her record is on high with her Master. She goes home to rest, but her heart and hands are full of plans for the Master's cause in this land, and the church will hear from her. "Receive her in the Lord as becometh the saints, and assist her in whatever business she hath need of you: for she has been a succorer of many." Her departure has created a great vacancy in the work here—one that will be impossible to fill. We can only hope and pray that it can be so arranged that she will be able to return to Japan in the near future. Her going home was peculiarly sad and lonely, for, although accompanied by Doctor and Mrs. Park and their child (her son-in-law, daughter and grandchild) from China, yet he whose labors for the Master she had shared for nearly forty years did not go with them, for he sleeps in his quiet home in the Kobe Cemetery, bard by the sea. Loving hands here will tend most carefully this "hillock of immortality," and will count it a sacred privilege to do so, while our prayers will ever follow the wife of our departed brother, that journeying mercies may be granted her wherever she may go, and that at last she may find safe anchorage in the harbor of eternal rest.

Two years ago the Japan Mission numbered thirty-one foreign members, all told; but by death and other causes the number has now been reduced to twenty-two. And yet, over a year ago, the dying message of heroic Lambuth, "We are doing a great work; send more men," fell from his lips. We are not of those who would bring a railing accusation against our beloved Zion, but we can not resist the impression that if we continue to press our mission work in Japan "at this poor dying rate," this land will never be won for Christ. Others will take our crown, and God will relegate us to the rear. May each of us do our duty!

Miss N. B. Gaines, principal of our girls' school at Hiroshima, leaves in a few days for her home in America. She has been in Japan for nearly six years, and returns for a much-needed rest. She has filled one of our most important and difficult places, and has shown a rare genius for her work. Her labors, wrought in a climate hostile to most foreigners, together with the severe strain of a midnight conflagration, consuming the school and nearly all her personal property, have told upon her physically; and yet, while she goes to rest, she also intends to take a course of study that will better fit her for her work on her return. We rejoice in the opportunity that this earnest worker has, and trust that in due time she will be able to return to the work she loves so much.

Our mission in Japan has just witnessed an interesting and happy event in the nuptials of two of its members, Rev. W. A. Davis, of Fayette, Mo., stationed at Uwajima, Japan, and Miss Mary F. Bloe, of Healdsburg, Cal., recently teacher in our Bible Woman's Training-school at Hiroshima. The marriage occurred at the house of the writer of this, and he, assisted by Rev. J. C. C. Newton, performed the ceremony. The United States consul attended as witness—in accordance with United States consular law—and about fifty friends, chiefly missionaries, with a few of the prominent native Christians, were present. The happy couple were the recipients of many beautiful and useful presents, accompanied with the heartfelt benedictions of their many friends. May the Master lead them ever in paths of blessed and happy service, and may their united lives be greatly used to his glory!

Mrs. J. C. C. Newton and her daughter Ruth will leave for the United States in about ten days. Bro. Newton will remain at his post at the head of the theological department of the Kwansei Gakuin. Miss Ruth will enter Dr. Price's College at Nashville, where she will probably remain several years. Sister Newton intends returning in a year or two. This breaking up of family life is a frequent occurrence in the missionary field, and is peculiarly sad and trying. It is crucifying to the flesh; it is dying with Christ daily. To deliberately allow ten thousand miles to come between a man and all that is dear to him by the ties of blood, and to do this for years, betokens a heroism and a devotion to the Master's cause born of the Holy Spirit. May the Lord watch between our brother and his family while they are absent the one from the other!

The printers and editors of our church papers have been making some ludicrous errors recently in handling Japanese proper names. Here is one: A correspondent wrote Prof. Yoshioka, and the festive types had it Prof. Gosuika. But, perhaps, the most ludicrous of all are the ways in which they publish our school name, and if this note enables, at least, one of the home papers to publish it correctly only once, it will not have been in vain. The name is KWANSEI GAKUIN, and means "Literary Institution of the Western Division." Here are two or three results on the part of the home papers after wrestling with the name: Kwansei Sakuin, Kwaisei Sakain, and Kewansea Garden. We think too much of our flourishing school out here to have it misrepresented in any such way without a protest, and hence this note.

There were three accessions to Kobe Church last Sunday, making six during the month. There is also a good class of probationers on hand, with the prospect of a number of accessions in the near future. W. E. TOWSON.

Secret Prayer.

It is inconceivable that a conscious hypocrite can or will pray in secret. He does not believe in prayer, he does not want anything that can be obtained by prayer. He knows himself too well, and he knows that God knows him too well to venture upon secret prayer.

All who have an average experience of life and of themselves realize that they have many various and pressing wants—wants that only God can relieve. Wants, material and temporal—our health, business, our families and our fortunes. We have wants, spiritual; deliverance out of temptation, support in trials, and strength for duties. This is a form of prayer that all can practice. Some have no family; some possess, it may be, but little gift to edify in the public congregation; but they can commune with God in secret, can confess their errors past, can return thanks for life's unnumbered, unceasing and unmerited mercies, and can pour forth supplications for all men in the unseen place where none but God can see and hear. This is a form of prayer that does not depend on the concurrence of others; it needs not that even "two or three shall meet in the Master's name." Our Father sees in secret, and rewards in public, such as in silence and solitude seek his face. No burning heat, no freezing cold, nor falling floods can keep us from secret communion with God.

Secret prayer should be a daily and permanent habit. It would be well, if it might be, that the hours and the place should be well and permanently established when and where we specially draw nigh to God. When morning light dispels the shades of night, when birds pour forth their early songs, and flowers breathe forth their dewy odors, it seems a fitting time to join in with nature's universal expression of praise. Thick as the dewdrops sparkle on leaf and flower, the mercies of God lie all around and invite to prayer and praise. What may not a single day bring forth? What temptations to tongue and temper? What dangers to the body; what perils to the soul? What losses, what sufferings, what bereavements? Such experiences have thousands every passing day—it is possible they may be ours. As the laborer fortifies his strength with food and the soldier goes into the fight with armor girded on, so let us by secret communion with God renew our strength and be clad with all the panoply of God. We can live but a day at a time; each day's work must each day be done; we can never live a day over again. How much wisdom, zeal and strength we daily need? The secret morning prayer can secure it all.

Each evening how proper and how needful secret prayer! Many and bright as the stars above us have been the mercies of God. Through what perils we have passed, what blessings have we shared? How much, alas! may be, to be forgiven? How many things on which to ask a blessing? Sleep, in its darkness, silence and helplessness, is so like death that we should never venture upon it without commending ourselves to the gracious and sleepless Providence that giveth the beloved sleep.

Secret prayer is promotive of the development of some of the most precious graces of spiritual life. It cultivates humility. Surely no sane mortal can or would dare be proud in solitary and personal communion with God, who knows so well our littleness, our dependence and our unworthiness. When we remember we are alone under the all-seeing eye of the August and Infinite One, who reigns in supreme authority over all beings and all worlds, can we be otherwise than humbled under his mighty hand?

Secret prayer is the place to cultivate absolute sincerity and transparency. All things are open and naked to the eyes of him with whom we have to do; all desires are known, and from him no secrets can be hid.

Secret prayer is the only place where we can properly make all our wants and wishes known. Our business life, our domestic life, our private personal life may not be spread before the eyes of men; only before him, to whom all things seem as they are. But with absolute fullness of confidence we can tell him our fears, our cares as we can not to men. We bring before him our home life, our companions, our children; we plead for them by name, and mention all their peculiar needs and perils. We tell out the secret guilt and secret woes and burdens that cast us down. The deep and intense longing of our hearts cry out in fullest confidence, Our Father; oh, our Father!

The Present Prospects of Centenary.

Education is ever a question of interest to all, and to parents it can never cease to be a matter of paramount importance. Doubtless, the greatest work that we of the present are doing is in moulding the characters of those who are to come after us.

Centenary College proposes to be a factor in the great work of Christian education. For more than half a century she has maintained an honorable place among colleges, and her thousands of students and her three hundred graduates have been a blessing, especially to Mississippi and Louisiana. I am asked why I do not publish more about Centenary. One reason is, I think Centenary speaks a good deal for herself, and another is a reluctance to seeming to commend myself. By her recent abolition of tuition fees Centenary does not propose to lower her grade, which has been too high for the popular demand, but to enlarge her usefulness. The charges for tuition have for years been less than half the actual outlay for maintaining the college, and have, therefore, been a real delusion to those who thought they were paying in tuition fees the cost of instruction. With the present small admission fee the charges at Centenary are as low as they can reasonably be anywhere, as low, indeed, as they really should be, since to make all the expenses of education a gratuity would be an advantage to but few and an injury to many. What costs a man nothing is very apt to be valued by him at nothing.

For desirable facilities and surroundings Centenary may safely challenge comparison with the most favored colleges. She looks chiefly to Mississippi and Louisiana for patronage and endowment. Mississippi can not relinquish her hold nor lose her interest in Centenary. Judge McGehee, a Mississippian, invested—yes, that is the word, and I doubt whether he ever made a better investment—$75,000 of his money in Centenary, and its commodious buildings are a monument to his beneficence. Other Mississippians, too, have given and are giving liberally toward its support.

Of her endowment—now about $30,000—ten thousand is cash invested by the trustees, and the remainder in notes bearing six per cent. interest. These notes constitute an endorsement as safe as the fortunes and as lasting as the lives of our people, and are guaranteed by the honor of the givers and the constancy of their love for Christian education.

To expect any other than a useful, prosperous and protracted career for Centenary would be to suppose our people to forget her history, throw away her costly foundation and valuable equipments and prove themselves recreant to their sacred trust as educators. It would be to accuse the founders of folly and convict all who should be its present supporters of the blindest ingratitude.

I am not prepared to expect other than good for an institution founded and fostered by the faithful works and prayers of our fathers, and resting upon the hearts and consciences of thousands who do not intend to waste nor forfeit the inheritance, but to transmit it to posterity better than they received it.

Four men now pay interest on thirty-five thousand of endowment, and one family has within a few years given six thousand dollars in cash to the endowment. God will, I believe, yet move the hearts of some to endow scholarships and professorships in this college, thus honoring themselves in blessing others. Who will immortalize a name by giving it to an endowed professorship in Centenary? And how many will give smaller notes to help? What a happy discovery to find where one can do lasting good with money!

Let her friends pray and plan and talk and write and give for the making of Centenary what God and his people intend her to be—a nursery of piety and a school to equip young men with all the armor of God that they may go forth with fearless courage and not be ashamed of the enemy in the gates. I mean what I say, and am trying to be ready to do my part in working and in giving. W. L. C. HUMMICUTT.

INTRODUCTORY.

Paul's stay at Athens was very brief, not exceeding, probably, a few weeks. At the end of this time he turns away from Athens, the center of Greek culture and philosophy, and departs, probably by sea, for Corinth, the center of Greek commerce and profligacy. Disheartened by his failure he may have been, but his faith in the power of the gospel to save the world was unshaken It may be that he felt that he had made a mistake in the indirect and conciliatory manner of his preaching at Athens; certainly he approached Corinth "with fear and trembling" and a determination to know nothing but Christ crucified. The frenzy of the heathen mob at Philippi, the cruelty of the Jewish persecution at Thessalonica had left him undaunted; but this cold indifference, this contemptuous neglect was harder to bear. It chilled his spirit, it weakened his courage. Timothy seems to have been with him for a little while at Athens, but to have hurried back to Thessalonica, and when Paul embarked for Corinth he was alone. Loneliness was always oppressive to Paul, and it may be that this circumstance added to the feelings of weakness and fear with which he approached Corinth. That his faith in the gospel as the power of God unto salvation was unwavering is seen in the spirit and determination with which he entered upon his work in this most wicked and depraved city. Paul's labors here, lasting more than a year and a half, met with the usual Jewish hostility, and for a while seemed hopeless, but resulted finally in the establishment of a strong Christian church, to which he wrote two of the epistles preserved to us in the sacred canon.

EXPLANATORY.

I.—TO THE JEWS FIRST.

Ver. 1. Corinth, situated upon a narrow isthmus between the Ægean Sea on the east, and the Ionian Sea on the west, was the seat of the pro-consular government of the province of Achaia, and was at once the center of the political and commercial interests of the southern half of Greece. It was famous for its wealth and wickedness and for being the scene of the celebration of the Isthmian games, which were held here every two years and included gymnastic, equestrian and musical contests.

Ver. 2. At Corinth Paul found Aquila, a Jewish Christian from Pontus (a province of Asia Minor, fronting on the Black Sea), who with his wife, Priscilla, had been recently compelled to leave the city of Rome by the edict of the Emperor Claudius, banishing all the Jews from the imperial city. This edict had been issued only a short while before Paul's first visit to Philippi, and its influence may have added to the severity of the treatment with which the missionaries met in that city. It does not seem to have continued in force very long; for Aquila and his wife are not long after found in Rome (Rom. xvi, 3), and when Paul reached that city there were many Jews there (Acts xxviii, 15-17.)

Ver. 3. The fact of their being fellow-Christians and fellow-tent-makers easily explains their intimate association. In his native city of Tarsus Paul had been taught the trade of tent-making, an industry largely carried on in the province, where the materials were abundantly supplied by the flocks of long-haired goats that grazed upon the mountain-slopes. It was a wise rule among the Jews that every man, even the young rabbi, should learn a trade. Here, as in many other places, Paul was able to preach the gospel without being a burden to the church.

Ver. 4. All the week Paul labored at his trade (and that he was an expert and faithful workman who can doubt?), but on the Sabbath he sought out the synagogue and there reasoned with the assembled Jews and Greek converts, persuading them from the law and prophets that Jesus, crucified indeed, but risen from the dead, was their glorious Messiah. In Corinth, as elsewhere, Paul first carried his message to his own people, and in this case, as elsewhere, when men would listen, his hearers were convinced; a favorable impression, at least, was made.

Ver. 5. Silas and Timothy, it will be remembered, had been left at Berea. (Acts xvii, 14.) The latter had hurried on to Athens in response to Paul's message (Acts xvii, 15), and had been dispatched to Thessalonica (I. Thes. iii, 1) to establish the church there. Now the two join Paul at Corinth, and are, relieved, by the contributions of the Macedonian Christians, from the necessity of working at his trade, and encouraged by the arrival of his co-laborers, throws himself more unreservedly into his work, "testifying to the Jews that Jesus was Christ." "He gave in all its fullness his solemn testimony confirmed from Scripture, and his own miraculous conversion, that this Jesus whom he had formerly persecuted was the Messiah the Jews had so long expected." (Cambridge Bible.)

II.—THEN TO THE GREEKS.

Ver. 6. The strong and earnest testimony of the apostle aroused the hostility of his Jewish hearers, and they arrayed themselves in blasphemous and organized opposition against the salvation that he came to proclaim. Paul had no time to waste in useless words, and giving expression to his horror, and indignation at their blasphemies, he pronounced upon them the doom of the obdurate sinner, and turns to those from among whom "many shall come from the east and the west and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. viii, 11.)

Ver. 7. Many times had Paul been compelled to flee from his infuriated countrymen, but now he leaves them, compelled by their hardness of heart, a hostility more inveterate than their wildest fury. Justus, or, as the Revised Version has it, Titus Justus, a Gentile, and probably one of Paul's converts, offers him the use of his house, and here, "hard by the synagogue," Paul continues his missionary labors. The use of this house, so near the synagogue, would doubtless exasperate the hostile Jews; but it would also offer to any who would an opportunity to hear the Word of God, while at the same time the Gentiles would more readily attend preaching here than in the synagogue.

Ver. 8. Paul's boldness not only secured the attention and attendance of the Gentiles, but produced an impression also on the more liberal-minded of the Jews, and Crispus, the ruler of the synagogue, was converted, and many Greek and Roman residents of Corinth, having declared their faith in Christ, were received into the church. Crispus was one of the few of Paul's converts who was baptized by his own hand. (I. Cor. i, 14); most of them were baptized by his assistants, while he gave himself unremittingly to the greater work of preaching the gospel. (I. Cor. i, 17).

Vers. 9, 10. Almost alone in the midst of the wicked city, spurned by his countrymen, and depending upon the hospitality of a converted heathen, Paul needed encouragement, and it came. In a vision by night the Lord, who had appeared to him on the way to Damascus, and again in the court of the temple in Jerusalem, came to him and said: "Be not afraid, but speak and hold not thy peace; for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee; for I have much people in this city." The vision relieved Paul of the apprehension that he might well have felt for his own safety; gave the divine sanction to his work and assured him of the ultimate success of his labors. The Lord in the vision does not tell Paul that he had appointed many in Corinth to be saved. "They were not appointed to become Christians any more than all the Corinthians. In all was the same power of acceptance and of all the same appointment to accept. Yet divine prescience foresaw who would exercise the power to accept, and styles that class, more or less by anticipation, the Lord's people." (Whedon.)

Ver. 11. We can imagine the burning zeal, the calm assurance, with which he continued "there a year and six months, teaching the Word of God among them."

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Godless culture is sometimes more insensible of religious impressions than a dissolute and abandoned life. Cultured Athens resisted Paul while wicked Corinth yielded. "From Athens to Corinth" many a preacher has had to go. (Verse 1.)

2. The fact that the Savior of the world was a carpenter, and Paul, the great apostle to the Gentiles, was a tent-maker, has glorified and ennobled manual labor. (Verse 3.)

3. No idler has time to work for God. Only the man who has business of his own, and attends to it, ever attends to the Lord's work. (Verse 4.)

4. To labor with some people is a waste of time. We ought to be slow to give anybody up; but our Savior has taught us that we should not cast pearls before swine. (Verse 6.)

5. The thought that even Paul had hours of dependency and temptation ought to strengthen us when passing through similar experiences. (Verse 10.)

6. Paul's experience was a fulfilment of the promise of Jesus to his disciples, recorded in Matt. xxviii, 20. There he promises to be with them; here he declares his abiding presence. (Verse 10.)

7. What joy, what confidence, what strength to have Christ say: "I am with thee." Will he not say it to everyone of us? (Verse 10.)

Apostasy generally begins at the closet door; secret prayer is at first carelessly performed, then frequently omitted; after a while, wholly cast off; then farewell God and Christ, and all religion.—Heros.

Pontotoc, North Mississippi Conference.

MR. EDITOR: Doubtless your readers, and especially the many preachers who have in former years served the Pontotoc charge, will rejoice with us to hear of the gracious revival there. Our ten days' meeting embraced the second and third Sundays in June, and among the numerous good results we report fifty conversions, forty-one accessions to the various churches, many family altars established and re-established. Almost all in the town who had formerly indulged in card playing or dancing promised not to participate in or allow it in their homes. Many of the old hardened sinners were happily converted, and entered at once, as workers into the Lord's vineyard. One old man of seventy-two years, an avowed infidel, was powerfully converted at the altar and went home and read his Bible and prayed in his family, and the next Sunday joined our church and went to work in the Sunday-school. Our "jailer and all his" house were saved: the sheriff of the county and a prominent lawyer—the only one that was out of the church.

The entire town was in the meeting; all business houses and offices were voluntarily closed every day for preaching, from the first. All denominations of the town, with their pastors, were so closely united in the meeting that you could not have noticed any difference

Dear Bro. W. M. McIntosh, of the North Alabama Conference, and his efficient co-worker were with us from the beginning; the one preaching the gospel, and the other singing it with power and demonstration of the Spirit. These men of God heard the Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us," and came, and we feel that they were sent of God in answer to our prayers. Therefore we thank God who, through these faithful men, hath so graciously revived this work in Pontotoc.

All former pastors are requested to join this pastor in praying that the good work of this meeting may be lasting, and that all may be faithful unto death and so receive a crown of life.

Attention.

I desire to say to preachers everywhere, who need assistance in their protracted meetings, that Bro. C. H. Ellis, of New Iberia, La., is a most excellent Christian gentleman and gospel preacher. His methods are perfectly Methodistic, and his doctrines in perfect harmony with the Word of God as interpreted by Methodists. I speak these things advisedly, as I had Bro. Ellis with me in a successful meeting for ten days. I heartily commend him to any who desire assistance from a man of God in every sense qualified for the work. THOS. J. UPTON.

NO CHANCE FOR THE YOUNG MAN WHO DRINKS.—Twenty years ago it was often true that a young man who drank beer or wine, or even whisky in moderation, might be advanced to places of greater trust and responsibility. It is now scarcely possible. The habit is simply fatal to success. I do not believe there is a single reputable business house in Chicago where an employee who drinks intoxicants of any kind has anything like an even chance for promotion. The taking of a single glass of beer may, and often does mean, losing the chance of a lifetime. Brainy boys and young men, teetotalers from principle, are plenty enough to fill all the places in the line of promotion.—Interior.

A congregation anxious to get rid of their pastor were considerably perplexed how to do it without hurting his feelings. After considerable discussion they concluded to inform him that they were obliged to reduce his salary. A delegation was appointed to wait on him and notify him of the fact. "Brethren," was his reply, "I have been with you in prosperity and I will never desert you in adversity."

No part of the Southern country is left uncared for by this great railway and its connections. The Through Car System is an admirable exposition of the wonderful capabilities of American railroading. From New Orleans Through Sleeping Cars run daily, morning and evening, carrying its passengers via Cincinnati or Louisville, as they may select.

From Shreveport, Vicksburg and Jackson another Through Sleeping Car Line comes to join and become a part of the magnificent Vestibuled Through Trains, which passing through Birmingham and the famous Wills Valley of Alabama, is joined at Chattanooga by the train from Jacksonville, Fla., Brunswick, and Atlanta, Ga., over the E. T. V. & Ga. Ry., and proceeds north over the beautiful Cincinnati Southern, through the grandest natural scenery and most attractive historical country in the world, to Oakdale, where another magnificent Pullman car is received, coming from the Richmond & Danville System from Charleston, S. C., through Columbia, S. C., the beautiful French Broad country, and Ashville, N. C., and Knoxville, Tenn.

The time to Chicago is made so as to afford the most convenient hours for departures from the principal cities, and arrivals in Chicago.

Passengers can purchase tickets good over one line north of the River, and returning via another if they desire a variable route without extra charge. Or they can go via Cincinnati, returning via Louisville, or vice versa.

Round-trip tickets on sale at reduced rates. Agents of the Chicago line will on request assist in looking up rooms or accommodation for visitors to the Fair.

Everything that an almost perfect system can devise to deserve the praise and patronage of the traveling public has been provided. Any of the agents of the company named below, will cheerfully give all possible information and assistance. R. H. GARRATT, New Orleans, La.; I. HARDY, Vicksburg, Miss.; J. R. Extraordinary Offer.

We offer the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to new subscribers until Jan. 1, 1894, for fifty cents when sent in clubs of ten, and accompanied by the cash.

The Christianity of our time and of our part of the world is too much playing at soldiering. It is militarism on a splendid scale, and not war. It is not taking up the march to the enemy's camp and it is not seizing a sword and employing it with lightning agility for coigne of vantage or homo thrust. Dress parado soldiers are many, brilliantly buttoned and opaulotted and marching under flowing plumes and to the stirring strains of drum and cornet. They prefer flowery beds of ease and mere counterfeit triumph, to bloody seas, albeit contributed by the bodies of slain foes and to victory plucked from the enemy's crest or the cannon's mouth. Like many of the establishments of our neighboring hemisphere, they are standing armies in time of peace and flying armies in time of war. Let the recruiting drum shift the tune from throb to sob, and from many more of the same sort "good Lord, deliver us."

We have received the first number of the Methodist Review of Missions, published by order of the Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South. Editors, I. G. John and W. R. Lambuth, Missionary Secretaries. It is issued from the Publishing House at Nashville, and the subscription price is one dollar to ministers and laymen. The bill-of-fare for the July number is not only all that a literateur could desire, but it will also satisfy the popular demand and taste. It gives information of a most interesting and varied kind from all parts of the missionary world, and that, too, in excellent form and by the best writers. The first article is from the pen of Bishop J. C. Keener, and, being in the author's best vein, is quite worthy to stand at the head. When we had finished reading it, we felt a prompting to go back and repeat the exercise.

A sketch of Samuel Norvell Lapsley, Presbyterian missionary to the headquarters of the Congo, and a martyr to that severe climate, from the pen of Dr. D. C. Rankin, follows, and is of excellent character. Among many other subjects of interest there is cheering revival news from several of the mission stations occupied by our church in China, and notably at Shanghai and Nanzing. This should stimulate interest in that neglected quarter, and is, perhaps, another proof of the statement that the Lord usually begins to work at the point where human faith weakens or breaks down. The Review is issued in magazine form, has a neat manilla cover, and contains sixty pages of reading matter. We need scarcely add that it is a marvel of cheapness.

The Great Overflowed.

A CALL FOR A CONVENTION.

The ADVOCATE has received copies of an "Address to the people of Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi subject to overflow, and who desire immediate relief." It is issued by the planters and citizens of Adams county in Mississippi and Concordia parish in Louisiana, assembled at Natchez on the first day of July, 1893. The address concludes with a call for a convention of the communities first above mentioned, to be held at Natchez, Miss., on the second day of August, 1893, and urges the people to assemble in the various county and parish sites on or before July 25, and elect delegates to said convention, to be duly certified as such by the officers of the primary meetings.

Let this convention be held by all means, and let there be delegates from every parish and county in the vast Mississippi wilderness. We say wilderness advisedly, and we say it when speaking of the richest body of lands on the continent of America. For many years this valley, so rich in resources, has been untenantable because of abounding floods, and there is scarcely a foot of it which for this reason has not passed away from riparian proprietorship. The merchants and bankers of New Orleans and not the farmers of the country own and administer the rich lands of the Delta. Indeed, it would not be possible for anybody to own it who did not have resources sufficient to compel it to yield a fortune in off years, or who was not so situated as to unload it on the market occasionally as watered assets. The world can not produce anything within a thousand miles of equal propinquity to the centre of civilization that will at all compare with our "howling wilderness." We occasionally weep for Africa and the Congo, but have we no claims to commiseration, and when will the inhabitant of Mashonaland drop a tear or two into the murky and turbid sea that triennially, when it does not biennially, slay our hopes both of subsistence and keeping afloat? The government under which we live, and which is said to be the grandest that the sun shines on, with fine obtundity of moral sense, gives as much to the Chicago anachronism as it does to the redemption of the lower Mississippi. It is generous to Sabbath-hating Chicago, which can not be improved by World's Fair exhibitions; but it does not even provide a booth for the mouth of the Arkansas or the Red at that bazaar of the wretchedness of all nations—the Midway Plaisance. The absence of the native of our submerged tenth, and raccoon and hollow log, are a discount on that melodrama that ought to find recognition in the entrance fee. One hundred and sixty millions per annum our government pays for pension tribute, the most of it forced and fraudulent it is publicly and repeatedly declared by those who are in a position to know; but it does not contribute one-tenth part of that amount per centurium for that sort of self-preservation which would be represented in a gift of one-third this sum to dam the waters of the mightiest flood that ever threatened the peace and prosperity of a nation. To show how much it is dominated by sense as opposed to sentiment, it gives as much to Northern creeks and inland harbors as it does to fence the destroying march of the king of floods. Let us cease complimenting our talented young congressmen until by words or works they give some indication, tho' ever so faint, of having grasped the hyperbolic situation. Let them amend, and both specify and speechify at the dull moral sense of our leading legislative body until it is minded both to repent and to do the first works over. And let everybody, great and small, official and unofficial, do all that they can to remove this frown, this horrible grimace from the face of our Western civilization.

A Christian.

Some one has said in the mood of epigram, "It is a nice thing to be a Christian." It is so, indeed, as everybody who has tried will readily concede. It is so unusual a thing to human nature, and it is so uncongenial a thing to world nature. It is so inclusive in one sense, and it is so exclusive in another. It embraces so much of the internal from one standpoint, turning everything into metaphysics; and on the other it comprehends so much of the external, departing from theory to practice,—and leaving subjective moods for deedful exploits and fields of conquest. And there is so much of profession and possession, and of loss and gain, and of defeat and victory, and of life and death, in a very mild statement of it that it quite stuns the ordinary thought to contemplate it. But to go back to the sentiment itself, which we have traced in dim lines through this evolution, how often do we find people who have apparently accepted the kingdom of heaven, not for its own sake, or for Christ's sake, or even the world's sake, but for their own profit. They are themselves happy and blest in it, and that is everything. Yes, everything. Having found the golden egg, they set to work to incubate it with visions of golden eggs to be put on the market at so much a dozen. Like the doctors and nurses of the war hospitals, who appropriated to their own palates the delicacies which had been sent to the sick soldiers, they forget the public weal in a minute survey of their own good fortune and happiness. Alas! that almost the very best kind of people should attempt to defraud or rob the Giver of good gifts in this way and even sometimes should actually succeed in their undertaking.

We have often thought of the sheep and goat characters in our Lord's judgment scene, that the sheep were not always sheep nor the goats always goats; that there was a time when the former was but that character known to political economy as a producer, and the latter but his counterfeit or even bete noir, a consumer.

Again, many people fail in the very beginning of a Christian life because they give duty a higher place in their vocabulary than loyalty, and exalt fidelity as an ideal possession above love as a real possession. The latter is a very common error, and a very natural one, too, for it is certainly human nature to grasp at shadows, but it is not on either of these or on any account the less fatal. We feel perfectly justified in saying also that the absence of care does not make Christianity on the one hand, and on the other that no amount or degree of toils and woes will constitute even a fair counterfeit of the noble subject. Some people erroneously imagine that Christianity is conquering bad habits, but it is no such thing. It is slaying them and building on their ruins. Growing in grace does not mean growing in a human propensity, or even in a grouping of propensities, but in a divine quality or gift. And that growth does not mean growth upward or downward or outward, but it means all these in one, and successively.

Christianity is not morality, as some people who ought to be better informed conceive, and not because it is less, but because it is infinitely more. Yet we risk very little in saying that morality is as necessary to Christianity as Christianity is to morality. But when, on the other hand, we put the Christian above mere morality, even though of the most Spartan type, we are but saying that while he is under obligation to be as pure as the stars, he is just as much compelled to imitate their radiance, their fidelity to orbital function, and their activity as messengers of God.

Christianity is not all faith, and it is not all works, it is not all repentance, and it is not all conversion, it is not all sanctification, and it is not all glorification, nor is it even a judicious blending of them; but it is the whole of which they are the parts; it is the sphere of which they are the geographical divisions. It is not all in obligations growing out of one's relation to the first Person of the Trinity, or to the second Person, or to the third Person, but it is what is involved both of moral obligation and spiritual exercise in intimate relation to all three. The Christian is as great a miracle as Christ was, if not greater. This is a conclusion most unavoidable from two signal statements of the final period of his ministry, viz.: "The miracles that ye see me do shall ye do, and greater miracles than these shall ye do," and, "If any man believe on me, out of his body shall flow rivers of living water." Such declarations, setting forth the ideal life of the disciple, mean first of all that on the human side there must not only be sacrifice, but an infinite succession of sacrifices, and that on the divine side there must not only be the unspeakable gift, but an infinite series of good and perfect gifts, a whole era of spiritual ministries. This was the teaching of our Savior, uniform, steady, climacteric, as he rose toward that tragic sunset of Calvary, and this was the import of the spiritualized benefits of Christ's Word, doctrines and works, fulfilled in the miracle of Pentecost and the gospel of the Third person of the Trinity. This is the Christianity that Paul and the apostles experienced, expounded, defended and bore with them through bloody seas of persecution and excruciating fires of martydom out of the world. A Christianity supernatural in its origin, substance, and end. A Christianity divine as love—yea, as perfect love; the measure at once of God's power and of man's need.

Some Stewards.

A steward represents both pastors and congregations, for while he ministers to the needs of the former, he administers the beneficence of the latter; or to express it a little differently, while he keeps the former from starving and penury, he keeps the latter from surfeiting and luxury. It is as much his business, indeed, to keep the latter poor as it is to keep the former alive and out of the poorhouse. A church that has stewards and gets rich should discharge the old Board and elect a new, for while they may have provided for the preacher they have neglected the people. A great multitude will rise up in that day and hand in their excuses for plethoric money bags and other similar shortcomings in the words, "The steward never called on me." If the Lord never intended the preachers should get rich, it is equally true that he never intended the people should get rich. If he said to the former, "Take neither scrip nor purse," he said to the latter, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures in heaven." If he called the rich cleric a knave, he called the rich layman a fool. And yet to this day the latter eyes the former as a poor relation, or exults over him as a plutocrat "might, could, would or should" over some wretch not only poor, but sworn to poverty.

It will sometimes happen that the Methodist steward will be a rich man—it will happen, let us repeat, for some are kept poor by their contributions to clericus, and if so, what relish can he have for fighting hungry wolves from the doors of hungrier Methodist preachers. Think of Judas gripping the coin sack tighter at the bare mention of ointment for the tired feet and fainting brow of the Son of Man, or of Demas investing the living that he owed to St. Paul in a gold mine, and then think what another man might do with better opportunities and a trifle more cash. A rich preacher is hardly acceptable to the people in some localities in this age, and a rich steward who has not a good excuse should, in most cases, be tried and turned out of office. Yet the ordinary steward—and not the honorable one, for there are many exceptions, and the exceptional sort will take no objection to anything that is written here—has sixteen or more prerogatives to one duty, and devotes one hour in the month to scrapping for the preacher on other people's estates, while he devotes four weeks and a few days over in every similar period to laying up treasure for his grandchildren and numerous relatives in remote collateral branches. The watch dog who should guard the sleeping poor of the church becomes by the most simple kind of metamorphosis the bull dog of church finances pledged to a policy of retrenchment and dying for popular rights as they are supposed to be embodied in an economical administration. And a double crime is committed, we repeat, for that which injures the beneficiary injures the benefice, and that which evil affects the body of the one brings ruin upon the soul of the other.

The hardest trial of a preacher on short rations, and we are personally acquainted with very few to whom this description will not apply, we have often thought was to see the man who is pledged to be the benefactor of himself and his little ones—nay, who had received a commission from God and his fellow-men to this effect, and who occupied the room of others who would gladly perform the office of rescue, if permitted, deliberately thrusting his hands in his pockets and walking off in glee or melancholy while this sacred, if not divine interest, was suffered to go by default.

We have written these things, not because we wanted to do it, or had any feeling in the matter, but because our conviction of duty was stronger, if possible, than our sympathy for the almost common offender. "It is expected of stewards that a man be found faithful."

The Seashore Camp Ground is beautiful for situation. There is no lovelier spot on our Southern coast. Sylvan glories and ocean prospect combine to make a picture that is universally admired by visitors. The writer spent Sunday there, and enjoyed it as few of the hardest workers do the briefest holidays. The day was ideally beautiful and moderate for the season, clouds and breezes, uniting both to temper the heat, and to glorify the azure vast, above and beneath. The crowds took advantage of it, and swarmed up from New Orleans and down from Biloxi until the grounds were comfortably full. It reminded one of old times, and brought rejoicing to all who have the welfare of the great Southern camp meeting at heart.

Among the preachers who were preaching with power and effectiveness at the time of our visit were Bishop Keener, Dr. J. C. Morris, of Birmingham, and Bros. Shoaff, of Mobile, and Carey, of Atlanta. In spite of the World's Fair and the financial panic the attendance has been a little better than the average of recent years, and for spiritual results there was a decidedly good prospect on Sunday night. We regret that owing to unforeseen causes our space barely admits this brief mention.

NOTES.

The country is safe if the patriot can be kept down.

Sanctification is to perfection as the curriculum is to the goal.

Love acts on its conviction, while faith but prompts another to act.

A man's religion is much or little according to the value he puts on it.

Relax that miser's grip on the perishing, or thou shalt perish with it.

The Lord expects no more of us than we can conveniently perform, and no less.

Pride is the hoof-mark which Satan leaves on the heart of a worldly Christian.

If prayer will not take thee to heaven, thou mayst distrust other methods of getting thither.

If Christianity is what the Lord does for a man, he ought not to object to either the quality or the quantity.

Love is not in words or deeds, which are but its forms of expression, but in motive or impulse, which is its substance.

There are lots of people who mix their religion with business, but forget to stir it up well. As a result the business invariably rises to the top.—Texas Siftings.

How many people did the wit of Artemus Ward, Showman, plagiarize in the sentiment, "I have a mind that balances in any direction which the public requires."

The devil has what the newspaper reporters call a clinch on beer. And on a beer boom he floats whisky into popularity and elevates drunkenness, if not to a fine art, at least to an honorable calling.

The arrearages of Methodist preachers' salaries for the past half-century would set up and munificently endow a great Methodist university in each of the several hundred Annual Conferences of the nation.

Sanctificationists believe not more in the holiness of God than in the depravity of man, and if the former belief should make them to seem proud, the latter should abundantly exculpate them from this charge.

An unused function or gift will perish. The fish of the Mammoth Cave and of "the dark unfathomed caves of ocean" have no eyes, and the birds of the barnyard have renounced the companionship of clouds and stars.

The new editor returns thanks to his brethren of the tripod for their many kind words concerning the paper, Dr. Carter and himself. This is etiquette perhaps, but a valuable article is not less appreciated because enclosed in a silk wrapper.

"Save me from my friends, and I will take care of my enemies," Old Hickory said. Perhaps the incident in the courts of New Orleans subsequent to the victory of Chalmette was on the old hero's heart, and that he uttered the words with deep emotion.

We are quite overflowed with lengthy communications, reports read at District Conferences, and a great variety of articles on topics of general, but hardly of current interest. If anybody's communication is rejected, let them be consoled by the reflection that it goes into a full waste-basket.

The subscription list of the ADVOCATE grows not only steadily, but rapidly. Several hundred names with the cash have been sent in to the new publisher. There is a prospect of increasing the circulation of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE by at least one thousand during the Summer months. Let everybody help.

We are glad to be able to report to the friends of the ADVOCATE that its cash subscription list is increasing daily, and there seems to be no longer any danger of a fatal issue from its financial troubles. With the many evidences of appreciation that reach the new management from both expected and unexpected quarters, we hope to make a good paper.

The congratulations are more than the subscriptions as the shower than the sprinkle, but both are quite numerous, and the new editor feels that he can not be thankful enough for such unexpected manifestations of both kinds. As the weeks go on, he hopes to merit something of the esteem of the many readers of the ADVOCATE who seem to have taken him upon trust.

The camp meeting at Seashore Camp Ground opened under favorable auspices July 12. There were at least four hundred people on the ground, which is perhaps more than the usual number at the time of beginning, and of these more than two hundred assembled to hear the opening sermon preached by Rev. Henry E. Partridge, the presiding elder of Seashore district. Bro. Partridge announced his text from Psalms xxv, 14: "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will show them his covenant." The sermon which followed was able and fervent, and produced a profound impression. Let us hope that the key-note was struck at this service, and that the Lord will show his covenant to a multitude ere the meeting closes.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

The ADVOCATE in clubs of ten from now until Jan. 1, 1894, at fifty cents. Cash must accompany names.

Bro. H. S. Johns has gone to Port Eads to help Bro. Roy. These are men with a missionary purpose, and that is a mission field. There ought to be good results.

Col. David Zable has charge of the restaurant at Seashore this year, succeeding Bro. Rayne. We wish him success, and hope that he will feed the grumblers out of countenance.

Rev. S. H. Whatley reports a great revival at Pelican, La., which increases in interest. This is the latest of a series, and it only took him three lines to furnish us with the information.

A valuable addition to the Seashore Board of Trustees is Mr. W. W. Sutcliffe, of New Orleans. He is thoroughly capable both of giving good advice and assigning cogent reasons therefor.

Miss Mary Werlein has charge of the organ in the big tabernacle at the Seashore Camp Ground, which is assurance both that the devil will be kept out and that the Lord will get his dues in this part of the public worship.

Rev. H. E. Partridge, presiding elder of the Seashore district, paid the ADVOCATE a pleasant call last week en route to the camp ground. He has in him that rare blending of rare qualities, competent leadership and faithful service.

The people who profess sanctification are reprobated not more because they make lofty claims for themselves as the heirs of salvation, than because they deprecate the feeble attainments of many others, and insist upon the "exceeding sinfulness of sin."

The ADVOCATE is pained to learn by a letter from his brother, that Rev. G. E. Greene, pastor of Big Cane circuit, is dangerously ill with typhoid fever. Bro. Greene is one of our most able and efficient young men. Let the whole church pray for his recovery.

Rev. T. B. Holloman, the popular pastor of the church at Wesson, and for a long time prominent in the Mississippi Conference, has been elected to the presidency of the East Mississippi Female College. This will no doubt prove a fortunate arrangement, and we congratulate all the parties concerned upon its consummation.

We regret to learn that Rev. J. B. Stone, of Verona, Miss., the popular presiding elder of the Aberdeen district, has been recently quite ill, and that he was unable to attend the late session of the District Conference at Tupelo. Latest advices, however, report that Bro. Stone is recovering and that he will soon be able to resume his work.

"Woodville Methodism" is the title of a neat pamphlet by Rev. H. W. Featheratun, D. D., president of Edward McGehee College. Subject and author and narrative are all first-class of their kind. We barely peeped under its covers, and were compelled to devote a busy half-hour to it. We suppose that copies can be secured by addressing Dr. Featheratun.

The editor preached at the Resone Mission on Thursday night, and there were several conversions. The devil's outcasts hear the gospel there in some form or other every night in the week, and the New Orleans man or woman who does not help that work in some way will have to render a better excuse than many will be provided with in the great day of accounts.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens, the popular pastor of Craps Street and Gretna, having recently moved into the Craps Street parsonage, was stormed by his grateful parishioners on Tuesday night, last. While the wind blew strongest in the vicinity of store-room and pantry, ice cream and other good things were swept in by the zephyr refrain. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good."

A pleasant call from Rev. Hesiep R. Tucker and Bro. M. C. Shell, a layman of his charge, both from Houston, Miss., was an incident of the past week. They express the utmost confidence as to the future of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE in Northern Mississippi. Bro. Tucker preached at Seashore Camp Ground on last Thursday night, when there was much interest.

Our dear brother, Rev. J. D. Parker, wife and sister-in-law, Mrs. Scott, left on Tuesday last, for Abingdon, Va., where they will spend several months seeking health and comfort in that higher latitude. Bro. Parker, who has several sons in the gospel and one in the ministry in far California, is known as the patriarch of more than one New Orleans church, and is a living illustration of "old Virginia never tire" in doing the Lord's work. He came to us from Virginia in his fresh and vigorous young manhood, nearly fifty years ago, and we trust that she will generously give him back to us in the Fall, if not fully restored to youthful vigor, at least with the fires of rejuvanation kindled in eye and cheek. Meantime he carries a blessing back with him.

If there has been any neglect of book and magazine notices during the present month, it must be attributed to the fresh hand in charge, and to confusion resulting from a change of management. We shall hope to do justice to all in the not distant future.

Rev. D. W. Carter, long connected with our mission in Mexico, and now presiding elder of San Antonio district, Border Mission Conference, paid the ADVOCATE a pleasant visit last Tuesday. He had been to visit relatives in Tennessee, and was returning to his home at San Antonio. We thought that we could see that blending of grit and grace, which is said to be the missionary prerequisite, in the facial expression of our brother.

The program of the Bible Institute and Summer School for Christian Workers has been laid on our desk. The Institute will be held at Seashore Camp Ground, July 26 to Aug. 9, and there ought to be much of entertainment and instruction derived to the occasion from the truly formidable array of names and subjects which appear on the program. Among what we should take to be attractions to New Orleans people are Bishop Galloway, Rev. T. Masao, Dr. H. W. Featheratun, and Rev. J. W. Shoaff. J. W. Pearce, Ph. D., will deliver a fine lecture on the History of the English People, and several of the New Orleans pastors will appear. We wish the institute much success.

THE BIBLE AND BIBLE SOCIETIES.

The British Bible Society during the last year circulated 4,049,756 copies of the Bible. The total issues by the society since its formation have been 135,894,552. In Madagascar a Bible Society has been formed among the natives under a missionary. The Bible has been translated into over 300 languages. The auxiliaries in India, Canada, Australia, South Africa, and elsewhere, are in full vigor, and a demand for the Holy Book is increasing in every direction. In Europe there are ten agencies under charge of men of high position and character, each agent having his little army of colporters. In Germany the native society in 1881 circulated only about 170,000 copies, but in 1892 the circulation was 326 000. Roman Catholic Europe still calls for the Book. Austria took 160 000 copies, Italy 160,000, Spain 60,000 or 70 000, and Belgium 20,000. France took 40,000 more than last year, the total number reaching the large figure of 107 000. Four thousand copies of the Gospel of John were sent to the Congo. Some thought that Luther's Bible would do very little for Germany; but it created the Reformation and all its results. Some thought that Tyndall's Bible and the Authorized Version would do little for England, but it created Protestantism and Puritanism and the liberality and progress that marks the English race and that imperial position that England has among the nations of the world. What Luther's Bible and Tyndall's Testament have done for these Western lands the Bible in China is going to do for China and the Bible in Japan for Japan.—Zion's Herald.

Entertainment of General Conference.

The Committee on Entertainment of the next General Conference and defraying its expenses deem it proper and important to submit the following statement:

The plan makes it the duty of the Book Agents, during the year 1891, to apportion a sum, not less than $27,000, among the several Annual Conferences upon the basis of the assessment for the Bishop's Fund, and the amounts thus assigned are required to be apportioned by the Joint Board of Finance among the several presiding elders' districts for collection in the same manner as the other regular collections of the Conference, and the same paid to the treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance and remitted by him with proper statement to the Book Agents.

The apportionment among the Conferences was duly made by the Book Agents in the year 1891, and due notice thereof given of the same. Upon inquiry we find that only twenty-two of the forty-seven Conferences took the action required by the plan and made assessments upon the districts. For the most part it was done only in the smaller Conferences, and the aggregate of collections reported to the Book Agents to date is only $4,964.65. In all the Conferences, except one, from which returns have been received, the collections have fallen short of the assessments from about fifty to seventy-five per cent. The other Conferences, we are informed, preferred to postpone action on the plan till their sessions in 1892.

Upon the foregoing state of facts the committee begs leave to make respectfully the following suggestions and appeal in which the Book Agents join:

1. The requirement in the plan of making the apportionments upon the Conferences and districts as early as in the year 1891, was intended, as we understand it, to afford opportunity to provide for any deficit in the collections by reapportionment. Let this be done in any case where it has been overlooked. In the returns made at this date the deficit amounts to $6,347.15.

2. In the case of Conferences which have deferred collections, the assessments aggregate $16,344.60. It is obvious, therefore, how indispensable that collections in full of assessments shall be had in those Conferences in order to preclude deficit in the fund for defraying the expenses of the General Conference.

3. It is provided that the cost of entertainment shall be paid first, and next the actual traveling expenses of the delegates; "in case any Conference should fail to pay the full amount apportioned to it the deficit shall be deducted from any amount remaining for the payment of the traveling expenses of its delegates." We can not suppose that with the knowledge of this provision of the plan any Conference will subject its delegates to such disadvantage. It is needless to say, also, that inadequacy in the fund will be disreputable to the church and cause much confusion and embarassment, which will be irremediable.

We, therefore, most earnestly request that all diligence be used in making collections, and especially that presiding elders shall see that they are taken and the assessments in full are secured.

Prince Bismarck.

Smalley makes Prince Bismarck, whom he has recently seen, the subject of a very interesting and sketchy letter to the New York Tribune. He says:

"He was now in black from head to foot; black double-breasted frock coat, buttoned to the throat across the chest, relieved by no order or decoration or any touch of color, except that he wore round his neck a yellow, pale yellow, or perhaps cream colored, soft silk neckcloth, something like the cravat which prevailed in England in the earlier part of the century, but less voluminous, and tied carelessly. He wore no collar. He wore his coat, as I said, like a uniform. It set off the breadth of the shoulders, the depth of the chest, and the whole huge framework and vast body which of itself seemed to fill the room, whether he stood or sat. He towered far above everybody.

"The face and head which rose out of the black coat and soft pale yellow neckcloth are known to everybody by pictures and photographs, and also by description, and yet they are not known. I have tried before now to describe them. Like others, I thought I knew them well. But every view is a new view. The power of the head and face is what it was. Age has altered, not impaired it. The firmness of outline remains. The muscles of the neck have not lost their elasticity, the head rises aloft and alert; in the carriage of it something haughty, something almost defiant and victorious, as of one who all his life long has had enemies to deal with, and the habit of overcoming them."

What a Student Needs.

A friend of Emerson relates the following interesting circumstances, which will carry a good lesson to our youth: "I was standing with him once at a college exhibition, where a young man had easily taken the most brilliant honors—a young man in whom we were both interested. It was the first time that I had ever addressed Mr. Emerson. I congratulated him, and congratulated myself, upon the success of my young friend, and he said: 'Yes; I did not know he was so fine a fellow; and now if only something will fall out amiss—if he should be unpopular with his class, or if his father should fail in business, or if some other misfortune should befall him—all will be well.' I was green enough and boy enough to be inwardly indignant; but I did not then know that when Emerson was but eight years old his father had died, and that to the penury of those early days, to his mother's determination that the boy should be bred at Harvard College, to the careful struggles by which each penny was made to work the miracle of the broken bread by the Sea of Galilee, he owed, or he thought he owed, much of the vigor, the rigor, and the manhood of his life. 'Good is a good doctor,' he said, 'but bad is sometimes a better.'"

A Dream and Its Interpretation.

The punctuality which reigned over the domestic regulations of Dr. Chalmers was sometimes not a little inconvenient to his guests. The Rev. Dr. Hanna says that his aunt, while living in the house, appearing one morning too late for breakfast, and well knowing what awaited her if she did not "take the first word o' flyting," thus diverted the expected storm: "Oh, Mr. Chalmers!" she exclaimed, as she entered the room, "I had such a strange dream last night; I dreamt that you were dead!" "Indeed, aunt," said the doctor, quite arrested by an announcement which bore so directly on his own future history. "And I dreamt," she continued, "that the funeral day was named, and the hour was fixed, and the cards were written, and the day came, and the folk came, and the hour came. But what do you think happened? Why, the clock had scarce done chapping twelve when a lond knocking was heard within the coffin, and a voice gey peremptory and ill-pleased-like came out of it, saying, "Twelve's chappit, and ye're no lifting." The doctor was too fond of a joke not to relish this one, and in the hearty langh which followed the ingenious culprit escaped.

Humorous Thoughts and Points of Wisdom.

After preaching on the occasion of the reopening of a restored church, the Bishop thanked the churchwarden, an old farmer, for his share in the good work. "And I must thank your lordship for your sermon," was the reply. "But I conld not help thinking, as you talked about sin, that your lordship must have been a little wildish yourself when you were a young man."

Just as well to be correct.—"Yes, brethren," says the clergyman who is preaching the funeral sermon, "our deceased brother was cut down in a single night—torn from the arms of his loving wife, who is thus left a disconsolate widow at the early age of twenty-four years." "Twenty-two, if you please," sobs the widow in the front pew, emerging from her handkerchief for an instant.—Boston Globe.

"We are going to have pie for dinner," said Bobby to the minister. "Indeed," laughed the clergyman, amused at the little boy's artlessness; "and what kind of pie, Bobby?" "It's a new kind. Ma was talking this morning about pa bringing you to dinner so often, and pa said he didn't care what she thought, and ma said she'd make him eat humble pie before the day was over; and I suppose we're goin' to have it for dinner."—San Francisco Wasp.

"Do away, Dod; do away! Don't bodder me now," a small boy was overheard saying as he besieged an apple tree. And then he threw another stick. That one failed to bring down an apple. As he raised his hand and took aim again, he said: "Do away, I say! Tan't 'oo wait a minute?" His mother called him to her, and said: "Baby, to whom were you talking?" "Dod," he replied, in the most matter-of-fact tone. "God?" said the shocked mother. "Why, my child, where was he?" "He was whispering to me." "What did he say?" "He said, 'Baby! baby! don't frow stones; 'ou will hit the poor little birdies.'" The mother had nothing to say. Faith and conscience were taking care of the little soul, and teaching their lessons better than it was possible for her to do.—The Chicago Inter-Ocean.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

LULLABIES FROM ALL LANDS.

DANISH.

Sleep, sleep, little mouse!
The field your father ploughs;
Your mother feeds the pigs in the sty,
She'll come and slap you when you cry.

CHINESE.

Snail, snail, come out and be fed!
Put out your horns and then your head;
And thy mammy will give thee mutton,
For thou art doubly dear to me.

SPANISH.

The moon shines bright,
And the snake darts swift and light;
I see five baby bullocks
And a calf young and white.

ARABIC.

Sleep, my baby, sleep!
Steep a slumber hale,
Sweetly rest till morning light,
My little farmer boy so bright.

ZULU.

Hush, thee, my baby!
Thy mother's over the mountain gone,
There she will dig the little garden patch,
And water she'll fetch from the river.

NORWEGIAN.

Row, row, to Baltnarock,
How many fish is caught in the net?
One for father, and one for mother,
One for sister, and one for brother.

SWEDISH.

Hush, hush, baby mine!
Pussy climbs the big green pine,
Mother turns the millstone,
Father to kill the pigs has gone.

GERMAN.

Sleep, baby, sleep!
Thy father guards the sheep,
Thy mother shakes the dreamland tree,
And from it fall sweet dreams for thee;
Sleep, baby, sleep!

Sightless, Yet Seeing.

The trees in the Boston Public Garden were in their Spring dresses of soft greens and the flower beds were bright with tulips and pansies.

"Grandpa, see! What is over there?" the boy asked. His voice was clear and sweet. He pulled at the old man's hand.

"Why, over there is a great round bed of tulips, Leon, and down among the tulips the pansies are growing thick."

"What is it smells so sweet? It is there." The little boy pointed.

"There is a small bed of hyacinths over there. They are all colors, purple and white and pink."

"And here? What is on this side, right by us?"

"Right by us and over your head is a cherry tree covered with buds and a few blossoms. The blossoms that are out are quite double, like little roses. One more warm day and the tree will be white."

The child looked up.

"Oh, it is so lovely! I think I can see it just as plain as anything. Don't laugh, grandpa, I can see it!"

"I did not laugh, my boy. Did you think I would laugh at you?"

"Well, of course it is silly, for I see only dark, really, but sometimes I pretend I can see through the dark, you know."

The child heard a step and turned his head and smiled toward the passer-by. It was a dear little face. His eyes were dark and soft and beautiful. They were eyes that would always look through the dark at all lovely objects.—Boston Transcript.

How to Become Great.

A young artist once called upon Mr. Audubon, the great student of birds, to show him some drawings and paintings. Audubon was much interested, and after examining the work of the artist, said:

"I like it very much, but it is a little deficient in details. You have painted the legs of this bird nicely, except in one respect. The scales are exact in shape and color, but you have not arranged them correctly as to numbers."

"I never thought of that," said the young artist.

"Quite likely," said Audubon. "Now, upon this upper ridge of the partridge's leg, there are just so many scales. You have too many. Nature does her work perfectly. Examine the legs of a thousand partridges, and you will see that the scales are the same in number. All partridges are made alike."

The lesson show how Audubon became great—by patient study in small things.—Selected.

The celebrated Dr. Dumoulin, being surrounded in his last moments by many of his fellow-physicians who deplored their loss, said to them: "Gentlemen, I leave behind me three great physicians." Every one thinking himself to be one of the three, pressed him to name them, upon which he replied, "Cleanliness, exercise, and moderation in eating."

The Twofold Bible.

Our Creator has given us a twofold Bible—an unwritten Bible, or the Bible of nature, and a written Bible, or the Bible of Scripture. Do not imagine that there are two Gods—the God of nature and the God of Scripture—the latter God being on the whole the diviner. There is but one God, speaking to us in his twofold Bible of nature and of Scripture. Neither is the Bible of Scripture supplemental, much less antithetic, to the Bible of nature; rather it is complemental. Had the church more freely admitted this, there had been less infidelity in the academy. Had the academy more freely admitted this, there had been less bigotry in the church. How much nobler to search for concord than for discord in this twofold Bible of the Creator-Redeemer, the Redeemer-Creator! Unfortunately many persons are content with the first half of God's Bible—his volume of nature; many other persons are content with the last half of God's Bible—his volume of Scripture; whereas God's Bible is but one work consisting of nature and Scripture bound in two volumes. As John Keble puts it:

"Two worlds are ours; 'tis only sin
Forbids us to descry
The mystic heaven and earth within
Plain as the sea and sky.

"Thou who hast given me eyes to see
And love this sight so fair,
Give me a heart to find out thee,
And read thee everywhere."

—George Dana Boardman, D. D.

An Undervalued Sister.

A boy of five or six years, according to a story in the Chicago Herald, was made happy by the arrival of a baby sister. He had been the only child in the family, and, being a good and obedient boy, had been humored till he was perhaps in some danger of being spoiled. Before the new sister was many weeks old, however, Master Fred began to feel that his own position was sadly altered. The stranger had supplanted him. Father, mother and servants were all the time talking about the baby. There was no mistake; Fred was no longer king. The boy began to be unhappy, and just then he remembered a placard which his father had put up in a conspicuous point on the premises some months before: "Ashes to give away. Inquire within." Fred had taken great interest in this notice, and had inquired minutely into its meaning. He remembered now that very soon afterward a man called and carried away the ashes. He had been to the kindergarten, and could spell and print after a fashion. So with such helps and hints as he was able to get slyly from the servants, he managed to concoct the following sign, which his astonished father one day found posted in a sightly position as he came home to dinner:

A BaBy tO give awaY.
INquire of FrED.

"Ill fares the land, to hast'ning ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay;
Princes and lords may flourish, or may fade;
A breath can make them, as a breath has made;
But a bold peasantry, their country's pride,
When once destroyed can never be supplied."

Boston Baby Babble.

It may be just as well for strangers, before engaging in conversation with babies, to find out whence they hail.

Visitor (picking up the baby): "So this is the baby, is it? Bless his little tootsiewootsie! Kchee-e-e! Watch me poke um's ribs!"

The Boston Baby: "Mother, will you kindly inform me whether the deplorable condition of this person is due to permanent dementia or spasmodic and intermittent insanity?"

THE CHILD'S IDEA OF THUNDER.—A little girl who had been told that when it was thundering it was God talking, was out on the lawn one day not long ago playing with her dolls. Her mother, seeing a storm coming up, called to little Alice to hurry and come in. She began picking up her playthings, but before she got them all it thundered, when she exclaimed: "O, Dod, don't raise such a fuss and scold so. I'm hurrying fas' as I can."

There is many a good divine that can not learn his own teaching. It is easier to say, this do, than to do it. When, therefore, I see good doctrine with an evil life, I may pity the one, but I will practice only the other. The good sayings belong to all, the evil actions only to their authors.—Warwick.

3. IT CURES WHEN ALL ELSE FAILS.

REV. SAM P. JONES SAYS:

"My wife, who was an invalid from nervous sick headache, has been entirely cured by six weeks' use of Dr. King's Royal Germetner. Her health is perfect. In three weeks two of my children were cured completely of nasal catarrh. IT IS TRULY A GREAT REMEDY."

WALLIS–S. RASIN WALLIS was born in Terrebonne parish, La., Dec. 22, 1843, and died in great peace at his residence, near Lafayette, La., June 27, 1893.

Bro. Wallis was happily united in marriage with Miss Josephine Dyer, Dec. 23, 1868, and Sister Wallis and a very promising son and daughter survive the husband and father.

The custom is too prevalent, we think, to heap extravagant eulogies upon the name of almost anynce after death; but too much could not well be said in praise of the deceased. He was a most affectionate husband and father, and a model citizen in every respect. In all of his intercourse and business transactions with his fellow-men his name was above suspicion and without a blot. "The noblest work of God, an honest man," can truthfully be inscribed upon his tombstone. In addition to these noble characteristics, he was a most exemplary Christian. Not as noisy and demonstrative as some others; but his pure life and noble deeds afforded without variation a steady light which sent conviction to many hearts. He was our recording steward, and as long as he was able to sit up the book was not neglected. Consumption, that great human destroyer, had been gnawing at his vitals for a year or more, and finally frail nature fell dead under its withering power.

The writer questioned him relative to his Christian experience before he became confined to his house and bed, and again when approaching the end, and when only able to talk in a whisper, and he said first and last he was perfectly resigned to the divine will, and that there was not a cloud between him and heaven. He talked and sent back words of cheer from the brink of the last river. Happy, most happy! Our brother is forever beyond the reach of the hectic cough and blighting disease of time. Safe with Jesus, and forever at home! H. ARMSTRONG, P. C.

JONES–SEABORN JONES was born in Edgefield District, S. C., Nov. 12, 1812, and departed this life in Lincoln parish, La., on June 9, 1893. In early life Bro. Jones was an orphan, but was kindly cared for by his brother, the Rev. Dr. Simpson Jones.

Soon after the decease of his parents he became a cripple and remained helpless for some forty years. When about twenty-three years of age young Jones was restored to health and vigorously began life's battles. At the age of twenty-seven he was happily married to Miss Jane Warren, who, after becoming the mother of eight children, passed triumphantly from this world of sorrow to the land of eternal life. Beginning life poor, but rich in the faith of the gospel, he soon became the happy owner of a large fortune. The late war found him a prosperous merchant. Patriotic and true, he gave three sons to his country's call, and devoted much of his earnings to the wants of the soldiers in camps.

Though the war broke him up, soon he gained another fortune as the result of his faithful and cautious habits in business life. Six motherless children never had a more loving, true, tender father. He lived and labored for them.

Bro. Jones was a member of the Methodist Church more than fifty years, and lived constantly in the faith and liberally supported the gospel. He was "diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." He owed no man anything but to love him.

Six of his dear ones, besides many relatives and friends, mourn for him. Among the members of his family that attended his last honors was his son, Rev. L. S. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference. His church—Salem—will greatly miss him. A man, a great worth to his country and his church, is gone! Only a little while, bro. Jones, and we will join you in heaven.

R. M. BLOCKER.

HARRIS–MRS. JOHN A. HARRIS (nee May Trimchurn) died, after a brief illness, June 30, 1893.

Her many noble qualities of mind and heart endeared her to all who came within the circle of her acquaintance. She possessed a remarkably bright disposition, allowing no burdens or trials to seriously disturb the serenity and happiness of her mind; and thus it happened that her acts and words often brought cheer and help to others. She was unselfish to a degree very rarely observed. The interpretation that she seemed to place upon life was that it is given as a ministry to others, and in the practical following out of this interpretation she found much happiness and joy.

The writer was privileged to be personally acquainted with her for several months preceding her death, living during this time in her home, and he was the recipient of much kindness at her hand, for which he will ever hold her in affectionate remembrance. She never united with any branch of the church; but her life exhibited many traits of true Christian character.

She leaves a large number of relatives and friends to mourn what seems to them an untimely death, for she was stricken down in the prime of young womanhood; but God sees not as man sees. R. H. WYNN.

PARTEE–On Wednesday evening, July 5, the angel of death kissed away the spirit of "Little BEATA," infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Partee.

She was a sweet babe of only eight months, and was greatly loved by all the family, especially by little Sue, who often stole a kiss while sister was asleep. It was so hard to give her up, but Jesus claimed and took her to live with Him. By and by she will welcome papa, mama, sisters and auntie to their eternal home, where there will be no more parting.

HERVIE MELLARD.

Palmetto Home.

BOWIE–AQUILLA BOWIE, SR., was born in the State of Maryland, Dec. 25, 1812; joined the church at about eighteen years of age; was married to Miss Margaret A. Hammett, June 1t, 1840; moved to Mississippi and settled at Vicksburg, 1841, where he united with the Methodist Church, and helped to build Crawford Street Church. Thence to Phœnix, Yazoo county, Miss., in the year 1869, and finally moved and settled near Bovina, Warren county, Miss., 1882, where he died of paralysis, May 30, 1893.

It was the privilege of the writer to meet Bro. Bowie only a few times. He was eighty years five months and five days old, and had been paralysed for some years, and was, therefore, very feeble. He had only attended church once or twice during my short pastorate of five months; but it was my pleasure to stay with him two or three nights, and he seemed to enjoy the visits of his pastor very much, and especially the prayers and reading of the Word of Life. He and his dear aged companion, who is left to mourn her lost, seemed to be as much devoted as any two old people I have ever met. She seemed to attend him as tenderly as an infant. He loved his family and his church. He was a devoted husband, a loving father, a good neighbor, and, we trust, a good Christian.

Farewell, Bro. Bowie, for the present; but we hope to meet you again. May God's richest blessings rest upon his aged and greatly bereaved companion and children, and may they all so live as to get to heaven! is the prayer of their pastor, A. D. MILLER.

Oak Ridge, Miss.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Hafflefinger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

Jubilee of Southern Methodism.

At a called meeting of the Board of Church Extension, held at its office, on May 30, 1893, the following action was had:

"Whereas, The year beginning June 8, 1893, and ending June 8, 1894, will be the fiftieth year since the adoption of 'The Plan of Separation,' in pursuance of the provisions of which the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, became a separate ecclesiastical jurisdiction; be it

"Resolved, First, That this Board affectionately and earnestly invite all the ministers, members and friends of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to unite in observing and celebrating the year ending June 8, 1894, as the Jubilee Year of Southern Methodism.

"Second. That the Board will undertake to raise during the year, as a thank-offering to our God who has dealt so bountifully with us, loan funds for use in the work of church extension to the amount of one hundred thousand dollars; and that we will use our utmost endeavors to stimulate the preachers in charge of our circuits and stations to raise in full their assessments for church extension for the year now current, amounting to one hundred thousand dollars, that they may so report them at the next sessions of their respective Annual Conferences.

"Third. That we earnestly solicit the endorsement and co-operation of all the Annual Conferences and preachers in this work, and we respectfully suggest, as a proper division of the work to be done in raising the loan funds, that those Conferences that have already undertaken to raise such funds, but which have not yet collected the amounts determined upon, address themselves to the completion of these tasks heretofore undertaken, and to the founding of such other loan funds as may to them seem advisable; and we kindly urge those Conferences that have not as yet undertaken to raise such funds to take prompt steps to do so.

"Fourth. That we will undertake to raise a fund to be designated as the 'Thank-offering Loan Fund,' to be composed entirely of contributions from congregations which have received aid by way of either donation or loan from the General and Conference Boards of Church Extension, asking to this fund contributions of not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars, the sums to be graduated according to the amount of help received and the present indebtedness of the churches.

"Fifth. That we earnestly request the preachers in charge of the stations and circuits throughout the church to take up the collections in full upon the assessments now in hand and send them promptly to their respective Conference Board treasurers, and that we request said treasurers in remitting the collections to the general secretary to state separately the charges from which they were received and whether assessments were paid in full, so that due honor may be given.

"Sixth. That we specially and urgently beg the co-operation with the pastors of congregations of the presiding elders throughout the church and of the officers and members of the several Conference Boards of Church Extension.

"Seventh. That the Bishops be and they are hereby respectfully requested to bring this matter to the attention of the Annual and District Conferences over which they may preside, and of the congregations which they may meet, and urge them to prompt and large liberality in the same.

"Eighth. That the secretary and his assistant be and they are hereby specially empowered to perfect such further details as may be necessary for the carrying out of the plans above provided for."

Attest: DAVID MORTON, Cor. Sec.

Thy love
Shall chant its own beatitudes,
After its own life-working. A child's kiss
Set on thy sighing lips, shall make thee glad;
A poor man, served by thee, shall make thee rich;
A sick man, helped by thee, shall make thee strong;
Thou shalt be served thyself by every sense
Of service which thou renderest.
